The NESF will serve as a venue to analyze recovered documents and store forensic evidence of mass graves and human rights abuses of the Ba'ath government. The facility is part of a larger effort to help build Iraq's capacity to investigate complex crimes and implement international law enforcement best practices.

Highlights this Week:

- USAID's Iraq Transition Initiative Program has approved a grant to furnish and equip the offices of the Basrah Directorate of Education, which were initially renovated by the CPA. The renovated and fully equipped offices create a more productive working environment for its employees to better administer the largest school system in the southern region.
- Grants from USAID's Iraq Transition Initiative are supporting the special tribunal established by the Iraqi Governing Council to bring former Ba'athist regime officials to justice for war crimes and crimes against humanity. The grants will help develop the capacity of the tribunal to conduct these trials in a fair and efficient manner, consistent with international human rights standards. The first grant, for $53,900, will provide equipment to convert evidence to electronic form, allowing it to be more easily searched, analyzed, and protected. The second award, valued at $197,731, will furnish and equip offices for the investigative and prosecutorial staff of the tribunal.
- The Naltaki Group for Art in Basrah has received a $10,100 grant from USAID's Iraq Transition Initiative to support the printing and distribution of 3,000 copies each of 12 posters around Basrah. The posters will communicate a message promoting a peaceful, prosperous future for Iraq.
