NORA Research partnerships for safer healthier workplaces

What is NORA?

The National Occupational Research Agenda (NORA) is a collaborative program to stimulate innovative research in workplace safety and health. The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) unveiled NORA in 1996. Over 500 diverse individuals and organizations contributed to the first agenda. Your participation is needed to continue this legacy of collaboration.

NORA is a partnership process to guide occupational safety and health research for improving the safety and health of workers and workplaces.

Why Wholesale and Retail Trade?

One of every five employees in the U.S. work in establishments dedicated to the handling and selling of merchandise (Wholesale and Retail Trade), nearly 21 million employees in 2004. Although the rates of injuries and illnesses are similar to those for all private industry, the number of occupational injuries and illnesses within this sector are greater than for any other sector. Workers are at risk of musculoskeletal injuries, carpal tunnel syndrome, and skin irritations. Workers are also at risk of fatalities from assaults, transportation related injuries, and contact with foreign objects.

Visit the NORA Web page and submit your comments electronically at www.cdc.gov/niosh/nora.

What do you think are the top problems facing the wholesale and retail trade sector? What are the types of research and approaches needed? How many workers are at risk? How serious is the occupational safety and health issue? What is the probability that new information and approaches will make a difference? Which partners are needed to work on the problem? We want your feedback.

Attend a Town Hall Meeting

The public meeting for the wholesale and retail trade sector will occur on February 13, 2006 in Tampa, FL. There you can make a brief presentation describing the top research needs for the wholesale and retail trade sector. Visit the NORA Web page for more information www.cdc.gov/niosh/nora.
