

SOUTHEAST ASIA

Southeast Asia is defined here to include Burma, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines and the Solomon Islands. References to other nations such as Australia, China, Hong Kong, India, Japan, Korea, Micronesia, and New Zealand are included normally only as they relate to the specified Southeast Asian region. More comprehensive coverage of these areas may be included in future guides to the Library's holdings on East Asia and South Asia. A guide to holdings relating to Korea is available upon request.

This guide is intended to facilitate research in the Eisenhower Library's holdings on topics relating to Southeast Asia and the United States' involvement with that area. The Library's Southeast Asia related holdings are diverse with information found in certain U.S. Army unit records pertaining to the Philippine Insurrection in 1901-1902 with other material created as recently as the mid 1970s. While, as expected, the greatest bulk of documentation falls into the period of Dwight D. Eisenhower's Presidency, 1953-1961, much can be found here relating to Southeast Asia during World War II and during the 1960s and early 1970s. General Eisenhower's Pre-Presidential Papers and papers of certain of his military associates document his service in the Philippines from 1935-1939. Information on the conduct of World War II operations in the Southwest Theater including the Philippines and the New Guinea area can be found in the records of United States Army units such as the First Cavalry Division and many others. Considerable detailed documentation can be found here pertaining to J. Lawton Collins's mission to Vietnam in 1954-55, U.S. diplomatic planning regarding Indochina during the spring and summer of 1954, and U.S. efforts to provide economic and military assistance to individual Southeast Asian countries. The President's papers contain correspondence exchanged with heads of the individual governments in this area as well as memoranda of presidential conversations and National Security Council discussions of Southeast Asia. Certain collections such as the Papers of Arthur Flemming, and Dwight Eisenhower's Post-Presidential Papers document the divergent views in the United States concerning the Vietnam War during the 1960s. The Papers of David Osborn contain a small but interesting body of Department of State messages concerning Burma and Southeast Asia during the 1970s. These are merely a few samples of the diverse documentation found in our holdings. The staff hopes that this guide will encourage research on many topics and will assist researchers in identifying widely scattered documentation, much of which might not be expected to be found at the Eisenhower Library.

This guide should not be considered definitive as the staff cannot guarantee that it has identified every item in our holdings relating to Southeast Asia. It almost certainly has not. Therefore researchers are urged to use finding aids to individual collections in addition to this guide. We also encourage suggestions for improving the guide such as the addition of relevant materials not initially included.

Collections listed herein are fully processed and available for research unless indicated otherwise. Some documents are still security-classified and are unavailable for research until they are declassified. Notations indicating that portions of a given collection are security-classified are included with each collection entry. Because declassification is an ongoing process at the Eisenhower Library, researchers are encouraged to consult with the Library staff concerning the classification status of certain documents or categories of documents.

For further information concerning the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library's holdings relating to Southeast Asia or other topics, please contact the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library staff. The address is:

COLLINS, J. LAWTON: Papers, 1896-1975. The Papers of J. Lawton Collins constitute one of the most important sources of information in the Eisenhower Library's holdings on the involvement of the United States in Vietnam in the 1950s. General Collins, a professional Army officer, held combat commands during World War II as Commander of the 25th Infantry Division in the Pacific and Commander, VII U.S. Army Corps in Normandy, Ardennes and Germany 1944-45. From 1949 to 1953 General Collins served as U.S. Army Chief of Staff and was the U.S. Representative on NATO's Military Committee and Standing Group. In November 1954 President Eisenhower designated General Collins as Special United States Representative to the Republic of Vietnam with the rank of Ambassador. In the post, Collins observed and assessed the situation in Vietnam, assisted in building a viable South Vietnamese army and made several recommendations concerning U.S. military and economic assistance to the struggling nation. This mission brought Collins into close contact with South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem and enabled him to observe the strengths and weaknesses of Diem as a leader. Upon returning to the United States in April 1955, Collins reported to the President, the Secretary of State and the National Security Council on his mission and the situation in Vietnam. The Special Mission to Vietnam Series documents in detail U.S.-Vietnamese relations during this six month period in late 1954 and early 1955. While numerous documents found here are printed in the Department of State's Foreign Relations of the United States series, much unpublished material can be found here. This is a key collection for anyone conducting research on U.S.-Vietnam relations during the Eisenhower Administration. In addition to the estimated 6,400 pages of the Special Mission to Vietnam Series, scattered items can also be found elsewhere in the Collins Papers. Many of these are identified below. Portions of the Vietnam Series remained security classified as of 2006.

COMBINED CHIEFS OF STAFF CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS, 1941-1945. This collection contains ten bound volumes of formal minutes of Combined Chiefs of Staff meetings from December 24, 1941 (ARCADIA) through July 26, 1945 (TERMINAL). The meetings were attended by members of the U.S. and British chiefs of staff and on occasion by officers of the Soviet Union and by the Big Three, President Roosevelt (Truman at Terminal), Prime Minister Churchill (Atlee replaced him at Terminal) and Marshal Stalin. Records of the meetings document high level decision making and military planning during WWII and reflect decisions involving most theaters of operation. The volumes include maps, charts and tables in addition to the texts of meeting minutes. These contain several discussions involving the Southeast Asia Command, the China-Burma Theater, the Philippines, and at Terminal, discussions of French divisions and command responsibilities in French Indochina.

DULLES, JOHN FOSTER: Papers, 1950-1961. John Foster Dulles is best known for his service as Secretary of State from 1953 until April 1959. Before he became Secretary of State, however, Dulles blended a career as a corporation lawyer with periods of government service as well as participation in partisan politics. The Dulles Papers document his service in negotiating a treaty between the United States and Japan in 1950-52 with the remainder of the collection pertaining to Dulles tenure as Secretary of State. One series, the Gerard C. Smith Series, focuses on Smith as Director of the State Department's Policy Planning Staff rather than on Dulles.

The Dulles Papers constitute an important source of information on many aspects of high level foreign policy making during the Eisenhower Administration. Much can be found in these papers on Southeast Asia in general and particularly on the crisis in Indochina in 1954 and developments there in late 1954 and 1955. While some file folders are clearly identified by subject such as Indochina 1953-54, most series are arranged chronologically and pertinent items may be found scattered throughout many of these series. Researchers should use the finding aid as a guide to assist them in tracking down these many scattered items and should be prepared to do extensive searching. The collection contains 11 series, each of which is numbered separately. Many documents contained in these papers are printed in the Department of State's Foreign Relations of the United States series but much remains unpublished. Portions of this collection remained security classified as of 2006.

NSC Series. The first three boxes consist of formal and brief Records of Actions taken at NSC meetings. Boxes 4-13 consist of detailed typed summaries of NSC discussions and constitute a key source of documentation of national security deliberations and decisions during the Eisenhower Administration. Many of these NSC Summaries of Discussion are printed in the United States Department of State's Foreign Relations of the United States series, with portions of certain meetings appearing in more than one volume. Not all of these summaries were printed, however, and in several instances, information previously withheld from the volumes has subsequently been released. Therefore, this series should be checked carefully for unpublished information. Portions of the series, including information on S.E. Asia, remain security classified as of 2006.

FLEMMING, ARTHUR S.: Papers, 1939-1975. Dr. Arthur Flemming was an educator and government official. His official positions within the government included service on the Civil Service Commission during World War II, work with the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, 1947-49, and later in the 1970s a member of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. During the Eisenhower Administration Dr. Flemming headed the Office of Defense Mobilization and from 1958-61 was Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. For many years Dr. Flemming was active in the National Council of the Churches of Christ and during the 1960s he dealt with the Vietnam War as an issue in American life. His papers contain information on religious and political opposition to or criticism of the Vietnam War during the 1960s.

GRUENTHER, ALFRED M.: Papers 1942-83. General Alfred M. Gruenther, career U.S. Army officer, served with Dwight Eisenhower as Chief of Staff at SHAPE and from 1953 to 1956 served as Supreme Allied Commander, Europe (SACEUR). Although his files relating to his service in Europe contain scattered references to Indochina and Southeast Asia, perhaps the most pertinent series is the President's Commission on an All-Volunteer Armed Force Series, 1967-71 which documents General Gruenther's service on this commission appointed by President Richard Nixon in 1969. The Commission dealt with questions involving the draft during the Vietnam War and the problem of maintenance of an army after the Vietnam War.

HAGERTY, JAMES C.: Papers, 1952-1974. James Hagerty served as President Eisenhower's Press Secretary from 1953 to 1961. Prior to 1953 Hagerty was Executive Assistant and Press Secretary to New York Governor Thomas Dewey. After his service in the Eisenhower Administration, Hagerty was an executive with American Broadcasting Corporation (ABC). James Hagerty's diary which, unfortunately for historians was kept primarily for the year 1954 with a few entries included for 1955 and early 1956, documents Presidential meetings and conversations often not recorded elsewhere. While Robert Ferrell published an edited version of James Hagerty's diaries in his The Diary of James C. Hagerty, he did not print the entire diary but only selected portions. In addition to the diary, Hagerty's papers contain his notes on many post-1954 White House meetings, files pertaining to President Eisenhower's overseas trips, and press conference materials. His post 1961 files contain correspondence regarding Vietnam including media handling of Vietnam issues.

JACKSON, C.D.: Papers, 1931-1989. C.D. Jackson, a publishing executive with Time Inc. for most of his career, was a theorist and practitioner of psychological warfare, beginning in 1940 with a homefront preparedness organization, Council For Democracy, and continuing with service as a civilian employee of the Office of War Information in the Psychological Warfare Branch of Allied Forces Headquarters (AFHQ) and the Psychological Warfare Division, Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (SHAEP) during World War II. After World War II, Jackson remained involved in post war U.S. Government international information programs and was an official in the Free Europe Committee (President in 1952) for many years. Jackson served on President Eisenhower's White House staff in 1953-54 and on two presidential committees appointed by President Eisenhower to study psychological warfare and international information programs in the cold war atmosphere of the 1950s. Jackson corresponded with countless individuals inside and outside of government service and much of this correspondence can be found in his papers. Although he was particularly interested in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union and to a considerable extent Western Europe, Jackson dealt with issues involving Southeast Asia on occasion.

NORSTAD, LAURIS: Papers, 1930-1987. General Lauris Norstad, career United States Air Force officer, held many command positions involving great responsibility but is best known for his service as Supreme Allied Commander Europe (SACEUR) from 1956 to 1962. While he is generally associated with Europe and European issues, during World War II, General Norstad, as Chief of Staff, 20th Air Force helped plan U.S. bombing missions against Japan. After he retired from active military service in January 1963, General Norstad retained his interest in United States military affairs and his papers for his retirement years include a folder of correspondence regarding Vietnam from 1969 to 1972. General Norstad served on President Richard Nixon's Commission on an All-Volunteer Armed Force. This commission dealt with the draft as an issue during the Vietnam War so the minutes of committee meetings and related correspondence contained herein are relevant to a study of Vietnam and its impact on U.S. military thought.

OSBORN, DAVID L.: David Osborn was a career Foreign Service Officer who spent most of his career serving in posts in Asia. Because of his knowledge of Oriental languages, Ambassador Osborn’s duties focused primarily on China and Japan in the 1950s and 1960s. He represented the Department of State on an Operations Coordinating Board working Group on China during the 1950s and was involved in negotiations between the United States and representatives of the People’s Republic of China in the 1950s. After spending the years 1967 to 1970 at the United States embassy in Japan, Osborn then became U.S. Consul General at Hong Kong. From 1974 to 1977 he was United States Ambassador to Burma. In addition to documenting his involvement with China and Japan, Osborn’s papers contain Department of State memoranda and messages concerning Burma, Vietnam and Southeast Asia in general during the 1970s and should be consulted by anyone interested in Burma and Southeast Asia during this period. A few documents remain security-classified as of March 2003.

RANDALL, CLARENCE B.: Journals, 1953-1961. Clarence Randall, a business executive who was President and Chairman of the Board of Inland Steel Company, served in the Eisenhower Administration first as chairman of the President’s Commission on Foreign Economic Policy in 1953-54 and then as Chairman, Council on Foreign Economic Policy from 1956 to 1961. He also headed a special mission to Turkey in 1956. Clarence Randall kept journals for much of his business career. The Eisenhower Library obtained copies of those journals covering his service in the Eisenhower Administration. The entire collection of Randall Papers, including his journals is at Princeton University. Clarence Randall often commented frankly about issues and personalities in these journals. These should be used in conjunction with the Records of the Office of the Chairman, U.S. Council on Foreign Economic Policy and the Records of the U.S. Council on Foreign Economic Policy (see below for descriptions and relevant files in these collections).

U.S. ARMY: Unit Records, 1940-1950. This large collection consists of duplicate records of U.S. Army units including divisions, regiments, tank destroyer battalions, Anti-Aircraft Artillery battalions and other units. These records document U.S. Army actions in the Southwest Pacific as well as in Europe, the Mediterranean and North Africa. Descriptions and shelf lists have been prepared for some but not all units. Below is a select list of units seeing action in the Philippines and elsewhere in the Southwest Pacific. (Note: These records do not appear to contain any documentation for American troops under General Stillwell's command in Southeast Asia). For file locations of numerous other U.S. Army divisions, regiments and other units which saw action in the Philippines, New Guinea, the Solomons and other islands in the Southeast Asian region during World War II, please consult the shelf list for this collection. Pertinent volumes in the U.S. Army's Center of Military History's U.S. Army in World War II (Green Series) are useful in identifying specific units and campaigns.

U.S. COUNCIL ON FOREIGN ECONOMIC POLICY: Records, 1955-61. President Eisenhower created the Council on Foreign Economic Policy in December 1954 to coordinate the development of United States' foreign economic policy. The Council was chaired first by Joseph Dodge and then from 1956 until January 1961, by Clarence Randall. The Council analyzed, studied, made reports and issued recommendations on a variety of foreign economic policy issues. Such topics as East-West Trade, economic assistance and development in Asia, overseas investment and Soviet economic penetration of underdeveloped countries are documented heavily in these records. (See also the Records of the Office of the Chairman, U.S. Council on Foreign Economic Policy; description below.)

U.S. PRESIDENT'S CITIZEN ADVISORS ON THE MUTUAL SECURITY PROGRAM

(Fairless Committee): Records, 1956-1957. The President's Citizen Advisors on the Mutual Security Program was created by President Eisenhower in September 1956 to study and make recommendations on the role, scope, operation and impact of military, economic and other foreign assistance programs as they related to United States foreign policy. The Committee reported to the President on March 1, 1957 and ceased operations shortly after. Since the U.S. focused many foreign assistance programs in Southeast Asia, potentially pertinent information may be found throughout these records. Folders listed below are selective and are the most readily identifiable references to S.E. Asia. Other folders should, therefore be searched as well.

- Box 2 Summaries of Testimony and briefings (1)-(6) [references to Vietnam and other countries in S.E. Asia can be found scattered within these statements by Clarence Randall, George Humphrey, John Foster Dulles, Allen Dulles and other policy makers in the Eisenhower Administration]

U.S. PRESIDENT'S COMMITTEE ON INFORMATION ACTIVITIES ABROAD

(Sprague Committee): Records, 1960-61. Late in 1959, President Eisenhower appointed the President's Committee on Information Activities to review the findings and recommendations of the President's Committee on International Information Activities (Jackson Committee) (see below). The President selected Mansfield Sprague as chairman of the committee which held 18 formal meetings during 1960, received briefings from various agencies and studied a large quantity of classified documents. The Sprague Committee reported its findings and recommendations to the President in December 1960. Topics covered include radio and television, overseas broadcasting, military assistance, the role of the armed forces in United States psychological and information programs, voluntary foreign aid, American labor in international affairs. The Committee also produced papers on most regions of the world including Asia as well as many topics. Information on Southeast Asia can be found widely scattered throughout these records and this collection should be considered an important source of information on United States Government information and psychological activities in S.E. Asia. Portions remain security classified as of January, 2003.

U.S. PRESIDENT'S COMMITTEE ON INTERNATIONAL INFORMATION

ACTIVITIES (Jackson Committee): Records, 1950-53. President Eisenhower established this committee to survey and evaluate the United States Government's information programs and activities with an emphasis on psychological warfare and the cold war. The Jackson Committee produced a report based on its findings and this report is declassified in part. The Records of the Jackson Committee contain correspondence sent to the Committee, memoranda, reports and memoranda by agencies and drafts of sections of the Committee's report. Of particular interest here is the file in boxes 11-12 entitled Jackson Committee Numbered Documents (1)-(11). These contain several Department of Defense reports on the Army, Air Force and other Department of Defense components on psychological warfare activities including the Army's psychological warfare training center at Ft. Bragg, North Carolina. Most of this documentation emphasizes Korea but has applications for studies of Southeast Asia as well. This material contains a few references to the Philippines and probably to Indochina also.

WHITE HOUSE OFFICE, STAFF RESEARCH GROUP (Albert P. Toner and

Christopher H. Russell): Records, 1956-61. The White House Staff Research Group prepared almost daily one to two or three page summaries of information based upon inputs from many major executive branch agencies. These summaries became numbered "Staff Notes" which were circulated to the President, Sherman Adams, Wilton Persons, and Andrew Goodpaster and as needed, other members of White House staff. These summaries were intended to inform the President and his staff of many agency activities and policies not readily gleaned from meetings. This collection includes in addition to the Staff Notes, prepared on White House stationery, input from major agencies including the Atomic Energy Commission, the Bureau of the Budget, Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, HEW, Interior, International Cooperation Administration, Justice, Labor, NASA, Operations Coordinating Board, State, Treasury, and United States Information Agency. At present the finding aid to these records is quite rudimentary with little subject annotation. Information on Southeast Asia can be found widely scattered within the various agency files and in particular in the following:

- Box 12 International Cooperation Administration [Notes 1- 676 onward]
- Box 15 Operations Coordinating Board 1-473
- Box 16-20 State Department 1-861 and onward

SELECTED ARTICLES, BOOKS AND OTHER PUBLICATIONS:

(Please note: This is a limited bibliography which is merely suggestive and is by no means comprehensive. The volume of literature on Southeast Asia is voluminous; consequently space does not permit more than a small list of printed sources. World War II in Southeast Asia, for example, generated an abundance of sources. For a start, users may want to begin with the volumes in the United States Army's Center of Military History, United States Army in World War II series with volumes by Louis Morton, Charles Romanus, Riley Sunderland and others on the war in the Philippines, New Guinea and in the China-Burma-India Theater. The official British account of the war in the CBI and the SW Pacific can be found in the United Kingdom's History of the Second World War series with volumes written by Kirby Woodburn on the war against Japan. The staff hopes that the publications listed below will facilitate further reading in areas of Southeast Asian history pertinent to specific research topics.
