Higher Elevations: In the High Sierra nighttime temperatures are often in the low 30's during the summer with the possibility of dropping into the 20's. The backcountry traveler should have a sleeping bag rated between 15-30 degrees, depending on their personal comfort level. The daytime temperatures vary widely even to becoming quite warm. It is best to layer clothing to be prepared for a wide range of conditions. Thundershowers are common so you should bring a waterproof jacket and a tent or tarp.

“The USDA Department of Agriculture (USDA) prohibits discrimination in all its programs and activities on the basis of race, color, national origin, gender, religion, age, disability, political beliefs, sexual orientation, marital or family status.” (Not all prohibited bases apply to all programs.)
