RESPONSE TO SECTION 408 OF PUBLIC LAW 109-396

Response to Section 408 of Public Law 109-396

I. Introduction

Section 408 of Public Law 109-396, the Federal and District of Columbia Government Real Property Act of 2006, requires the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to submit a report to Congress that: (1) identifies all surplus and excess properties in the Federal real property portfolio; (2) identifies the most eligible Federal real property that is available for sale; and (3) describes the development and implementation of data sharing procedures on excess and surplus assets among Executive Branch agencies. This report is OMB's response to this request and provides a brief overview of the Administration's real property initiative and results to date as well as responds to Section 408 including the methodology that OMB and the Federal Real Property Council (FRPC) used to compile the requested information.

II. Background

Improving the management of the Federal real property portfolio is a top priority of this Administration. When President Bush signed Executive Order (EO) 13327, Federal Real Property Asset Management, on February 4, 2004, he charged Federal agencies to manage their real property portfolios at the right size, cost, and condition to most effectively serve program missions and goals. EO 13327 required the Executive Branch to:

- Establish the position of Senior Real Property Officer in each agency,
- Establish the FRPC,
- Have each agency subject to the EO establish an Asset Management Plan and incorporate the use of performance measurements in the management of their assets, and
- Establish and maintain a single, comprehensive, and descriptive database of all real property under the custody and control of all Executive Branch agencies.

The Administration has seen significant improvement in Federal real property management as a result of EO 13327, the work of the FRPC, and the extraordinary efforts of Executive Branch agencies. Today, Senior Real Property Officers are providing dedicated leadership to their agencies and are active participants in the FRPC and its committees. All agencies have asset management plans, based on guidance developed by the FRPC, that address the Asset Management Guiding Principles established by the FRPC as well as the agencies' strategies for asset acquisition, management, and disposition.

Agencies are also moving forward in their efforts to use available real property data to assist in making the decisions that will lead to a right-sized Federal portfolio. Specifically, agencies completed their first annual reporting to the Federal Real Property Profile (FRPP) database in December 2005 and their second reporting in December 2006. The FRPP database contains comprehensive information, reported by the agencies, on more than 1.2 million real property assets with a plant replacement value or functional replacement value (replacement value)¹ of more than $1.5 trillion. Since 2004, and using existing authorities, agencies have disposed of more than $4.5 billion in unneeded assets. The Administration anticipates successfully meeting the goal of disposing $9 billion in unneeded assets by 2009.

III. Response to the OMB report requirement in Public Law 109-396

Section 408 of the Federal and District of Columbia Government Real Property Act of 2006 has three requirements: (1) identify all surplus and excess properties in the Federal real property portfolio; (2) identify the most eligible properties that are available for sale; and (3) develop and implement data sharing on excess and surplus properties among Executive agencies.

Surplus and Excess Property

...the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall submit a report on surplus and excess government property to Congress including the total value and amount of surplus and excess government property, provided in the aggregate, as well as totaled by agency

Methodology: Agencies reported their inventory of excess and surplus property using the data element definitions established by the FRPC as well as the definitions of excess² and surplus³ established in Title 40, U.S. Code (the Property Act). Agencies captured data at the individual asset level, reporting the replacement value for both excess and surplus as of September 30, 2006.⁴

Summary Results (Appendix I)⁵: Agencies reported 18,393 excess assets with a replacement value of approximately $13.8 billion. Agencies also reported 3,409 assets as surplus with a replacement value of approximately $3.9 billion. Agency specific information can be found in Appendix I.

Most Eligible Surplus Property

...the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall submit a report on surplus and excess government property to Congress including a list of the 100 most eligible surplus government properties for sale and how much they are worth

Methodology: The FRPC defined the most eligible surplus government properties for sales in two parts: (1) those domestic properties that are within or in close proximity to the top 20 office or industrial market locations as defined in the 2007 Global Real Estate Markets Annual Review & Forecast (published by Newmark Knight Frank) and (2) all overseas properties. This criterion was applied to all properties owned by the Federal government which are currently available for

² 40 U.S. Code § 102 defines excess property as any property under the control of any Federal agency not required for its needs and responsibilities as determined by the head thereof.

³ 40 U.S. Code § 102 defines surplus property as any property which has been declared excess by a particular Federal agency and which, after a survey of the needs of other Federal agencies, is determined by the Administrator of the General Services Administration to be no longer required by the Federal Government as a whole.

⁴ In some limited instances, agencies were able to provide more current data.

⁵ The excess and surplus asset report does not include assets subject to the Base Realignment and Closure action.

sale. Properties were reported at the constructed asset level (e.g., a building on a Federal facility versus reporting the facility itself). However, many of the assets will be marketed and sold as a facility or grouping of assets. For example, a facility may include land, a warehouse, the associated utility system, and parking.

Summary Results (Appendix II): As of April 1, 2007, there were 509 properties for sale government-wide.⁶ Of these, OMB deemed 130 (which includes 76 domestic and 54 overseas properties) of these as the most eligible for sale.^{7,8} The total estimated replacement value of the identified buildings and structures is approximately $362 million. An itemized list of these most eligible properties is found in Appendix II.⁹ In addition, Appendix III includes an itemized list of the other 379 properties (with an estimated replacement value of $573 million) that were available for sale as of April 1, 2007.

Future Plans for Enhanced Data Sharing

...the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall (1) develop and implement procedures requiring Federal agencies to share data on surplus and excess Federal real property under the jurisdiction of each agency; and (2) report to Congress on the development and implementation of such procedures.

Federal agencies are currently sharing information on excess assets through three primary channels: (1) the FRPP Performance Assessment Tool, (2) agency specific sharing processes, and (3) the General Services Administration's (GSA) Property Disposal Resource Center website. These channels are described below followed by a discussion on plans to enhance reporting for increased data sharing on surplus and excess Federal real property.

The Federal Real Property Profile Performance Assessment Tool

The FRPC is enhancing the data sharing process by providing agencies with the most updated information on assets that are available for sharing or Federal transfer. The FRPP Performance Assessment Tool uses the inventory and performance data reported annually by each agency to the FRPP database to assist the agencies in managing their real property portfolios. The Performance Assessment Tool sorts the real property data into different categories (based on a series of filters) to better identify those assets that should be analyzed for potential disposal, prioritized for condition or utilization improvements, or managed at the current level. Authorized agency administrators of the Performance Assessment Tool have the ability to run reports and tailor them to highlight specific inventory or performance factors such as cost, condition, utilization, geographic location, or asset type.

⁶ Four properties on this list from the Department of Defense were grouped (i.e., multiple constructed assets) for reporting purposes.

⁷ The assets identified for sale do not include assets subject to the Base Realignment and Closure action.

⁸ Section 408 requires a list of the 100 most eligible surplus government properties for sale. Because all foreign assets were included as the most eligible, Appendix II contains more than 100 assets. However, a break was inserted after the first 100.

⁹ The assets included in Appendix II are not listed in order of priority or relative eligibility. However, the Department of State assets are listed in order of those most likely to close.

The Performance Assessment Tool also has the capability to produce inter-agency reports focusing on underutilized and excess assets available for sharing or Federal transfer. All agencies participating in the FRPC or contributing data to the FRPP database have access to the inter-agency report module of the Performance Assessment Tool. Agency users can query the available data to locate information by asset type, use, size, and location. Based on the search criteria, the Performance Assessment Tool generates a list of assets along with the custodial agency names and contact information.

Agency Specific Sharing Processes

Agencies which have independent statutory disposal authority, and which are not subject to the Property Act, have established agency specific processes for sharing information on properties that are available for transfer with other Federal agencies.

The GSA's Property Disposal Resource Center Website

Current statutes and regulations require Federal agencies that are subject to the Property Act¹⁰ to have implemented pro-active Federal screening processes to share information on excess real property that is available for Federal transfer. Specific guidelines and procedures for providing agencies information on excess and surplus properties are currently contained in the Federal Management Regulations (FMR) 41 CFR § 102-75-1220. GSA also maintains an electronic list of available property on its Property Disposal Resource Center website (<http://propertydisposal.gsa.gov/ResourceCenter>).

Future Plans for Enhanced Data Sharing on Surplus and Excess Federal Real Property

As described above, agencies currently have the ability to: (1) run reports on their own assets using the FRPP Performance Assessment Tool; (2) run inter-agency reports on underutilized and excess assets available for sharing or Federal transfer; and (3) view available excess real property for agencies subject to the Property Act on a central website. GSA recently established a link between the FRPP Performance Assessment Tool and the Property Disposal Resource Center website to provide authorized users of the FRPP Performance Assessment Tool with additional information on assets that have entered the Federal screening process.

Because there are a number of agency specific asset management and disposition statutory authorities, the assets posted on the Property Disposal Resource Center website are primarily from agencies subject to the Property Act. To enable improved data sharing, the FRPC and the Federal real property community are establishing standard procedures for sharing information on all assets available for Federal transfer. As part of these enhancements, GSA will establish a single website for posting information on the available assets. To develop and implement the procedures, the FRPC has prepared the following timeline:

¹⁰ Select agencies have been authorized by Congress acquisition and disposition authorities independent of the Property Act. Agencies include the State Department and Veterans Administration.

Date	Milestone
04/30/2007	Working group to review and document formats and processes currently being used by agencies established.
09/30/2007	Standardized format to be used for “Notices of Availability” screening notices developed.
09/30/2007	Standardized screening processes developed.
12/31/2007	Standardized processes implemented.
