

Glacier Natural History Association

The Glacier Natural History Association (GNHA) is a nonprofit cooperating association of the National Park Service. GNHA helps to support Glacier National Park's educational, interpretive, cultural and scientific program needs. Support is generated by sales at bookstores in visitor centers and ranger stations located throughout the Park, in addition to our website bookstore, mail-order catalog, and annual membership program. We offer a variety of publications and materials which promote a better understanding of Glacier's diversity of landscapes, animal and plant life, culture, and history. The following publications and related products are recommended as educational tools detailing the flora, fauna, and history of Glacier National Park. All items are available at the Apgar Visitor Center, the Glacier Natural History Association office located at the Belton Train Depot, online at www.glacierassociation.org, or by phone at 406-888-5756.
