

Tribal New Source Review webcast to be held March 5.

The U.S. EPA has proposed two Tribal New Source Review rules to address significant regulatory gaps in the protection of air quality in Indian country, to clarify jurisdiction where states are issuing permits in Indian country, and provide a level playing field for economic development in Indian country. These rules may affect businesses located in Indian country and may affect Tribal governments and communities.

The goal of this webcast is to:

Reach as many Tribes as possible

Present the proposed rules

Explain how the rules will work

Ensure tribes gain an adequate understanding of the provisions of the rules to enable them to comment on the rules. The comment period has now been extended to March 20, 2007.
