

The Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program helps workers who have lost their jobs as a result of foreign trade get back to work quickly. The TAA program offers a variety of benefits and services to eligible workers, including job training, income support, job search and relocation allowances, a tax credit to help pay the costs of health insurance, and a wage subsidy to workers 50 years of age and older.

President Obama signed the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, which is referred to as the "Recovery Act" on February 17, 2009. The Trade and Globalization Adjustment Assistance Act of 2009 was part of the Recovery Act, and made changes to the TAA program.

When do the changes to TAA under the Recovery Act take effect?

In general, changes to worker benefits and certification criteria apply only to workers covered by petitions filed on or after May 18, 2009. The exception is that the increase in the amount of the Health Coverage Tax Credit (HCTC), which provides a tax credit towards health insurance costs, goes into effect beginning with the month of May 2009 and applies to all recipients, regardless of when their petition was filed.

How can I tell if I am covered under the Old TAA Program or the New TAA Program?

You can tell which program you are covered under by looking at the petition number, which is usually displayed in your paperwork as TA-W-XX,XXX. TA-W numbers that fall below 70,000 are associated with the Old TAA Program while numbers exceeding 70,000 will be associated with the New TAA Program.

What are some examples of new groups of workers that may now be certified under the New TAA Program?

Additional groups of workers that may be certified include, but are not limited to:

- Workers in firms that supply services.
- Workers whose firm has shifted production to any foreign country.
- Workers in public agencies.
- Workers whose firm produces component parts of a finished article produced by its customer(s).
- Workers in firms that supply testing, packaging, maintenance and transportation services to companies with TAA-certified workers.
- Workers whose firm is identified in an International Trade Commission “injury” determination listed in the Act.

I am a worker who is already part of a certified worker group. Can I get the benefits as provided under the New TAA Program instead of the benefits provided in the Old Program?

No. The law provides that workers covered by certification of petitions filed before May 18, 2009 will receive the benefits that were available under the old law. The exception is that workers covered by certifications of petitions filed under the Old TAA Program will receive the increased HCTC amount beginning in May 2009.

I filed a petition for TAA certification recently and my petition was denied. May I file a petition under the New TAA Program?

Yes. You may file another petition on or after May 18, 2009. If your petition meets the certification criteria that apply to a petition filed on or after that date, your petition will be granted and you will be eligible to apply for the benefits offered by the New Program. However, the amount of time you have to file a new petition is limited, since a certification does not cover workers laid off more than one year prior to the date of the petition.

I filed a petition currently under review by the Department of Labor but I think I want the benefits available under the New TAA Program. What should I do?

In order to be eligible for benefits under the New TAA Program instead of the benefits under the Old TAA program, workers must be covered by a petition filed on or after May 18, 2009. You (the petitioner) have the option of withdrawing the petition currently under investigation before a determination is made on that petition, then filing a new petition on or after May 18, 2009. If the new petition is certified, workers covered by that petition will be eligible to apply for benefits under the New TAA program.

Before withdrawing your petition, please note that a certification does not cover workers laid off more than one year prior to the date of the petition. This provision of law has not changed. Therefore, when deciding whether or not to withdraw your petition, it is important to consider how long before the filing of a new petition workers covered by that new petition would have been laid off. If workers were laid off nearly a year before the date of a petition currently under investigation, then withdrawing and resubmitting that petition could result in the exclusion of some workers from eligibility to apply for any TAA benefits. In addition, withdrawing and resubmitting a petition will result in the investigation of different time periods, which could change the outcome of the investigation from a certification to a denial (or from a denial to certification).

In order to withdraw your petition, you should contact the individual investigator assigned to your petition or the Trade Adjustment Assistance program office at 202-693-3560, if you do not have contact information for the investigator assigned to the case. Once the Department has issued a determination on your petition, it will not be possible to request a withdrawal. A written request should reference and confirm any oral request to withdraw a petition. While a new petition may be filed if your petition for certification has been denied, certifications issued under petitions filed before May 18, 2009 may not be modified to allow workers to apply for benefits available under the New TAA Program. In addition, while you may discuss your pending petition with the investigator, the decision on whether to withdraw a petition must be made by the individuals who originally filed the petition, and include all of the signatories to the petition.

I am considering filing a petition. Should I wait until after May 18, 2009 in order to receive the New Program benefits?

As stated in the response above, it is important to consider how long workers have been laid off when deciding whether or not to wait to file for the benefits provided under the New Program. If you decide to wait to file a petition on or after May 18, 2009, when the benefits provided under the New Program go into effect, workers who were laid off more than one year prior to the date of the petition will be precluded from receiving benefits altogether.
