

I think that requiring that a consumer who has experienced an adverse action based on a credit report receive a copy of the same credit report that the creditor relied on in taking the adverse action would be a tremendous aid in discovering errors on the consumers credit report.