The museum, after a two year renovation, has reopened with an updated and stunning new look. It is home to the Star-Spangled Banner, now shown majestically in its own chamber that creates a sense of being flown in "the dawn's early light." The flag joins the first ladies gowns, Lincoln's top hat, Dorothy's ruby slippers, trains, and cars in a gleaming new environment. A five-story skylight breathes life into the museum, and objects rarely seen before are now displayed in artifact walls throughout the galleries. Cafes and stores serve visitors.

Housed in the historic Patent Office Building, the museums offer visitors a chance to watch conservators at work in a visible conservation center, walk through collections in open storage, and dine in the beautiful and relaxing Courtyard Café.
