♦The Actuarial Foundation – Advancing Student Achievement

SUMMARY: Advancing Student Achievement is a grant program that brings together actuaries and educators in local classroom environments with the belief that interaction with real-world mentors will boost students' interest and achievement in math. The Actuarial Foundation can provide a local network of actuaries ready to participate, as well as suggestions on how to integrate math concepts from the workplace into the classroom. Groups applying for grants will be given wide latitude in designing programs that enhance learning and create a "love of math" in each student.

ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS: All schools and groups willing to undertake a math mentoring program that involves local actuaries as volunteers are eligible. However, in order for a program to be viable, there must be a sufficient population of volunteer actuaries within easy traveling distance to make a regular program possible. To see the number of registered actuaries available by state, see the foundation's Web site

DUE DATE: There is no application deadline, but if applicants plan to start their program at the beginning of a semester, they should have the application completed at least one or two months prior to that date.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Administration for Children and Families

Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply to become Replacement Head Start and Early Head Start Grantees. The Head Start program provides grants to local public and private non-profit and for-profit agencies to provide comprehensive child development services to economically disadvantaged children and families, with a special focus on helping children develop the early reading and math skills they need to be successful in school. Intended primarily for preschoolers from low-income families, Head Start promotes school readiness by enhancing the social and cognitive development of children through the provision of educational, health, nutritional, social and other services to enrolled children and families. Head Start programs engage parents in their children's learning and help them in making progress toward their educational, literacy and employment goals. The Head Start Program also emphasizes the significant involvement of parents in the administration of local Head Start programs.

Early Head Start provides services for pregnant women and children from birth to three years of age while Head Start is intended for children from the age of three to the age when children enter kindergarten. Programs serve those families who have incomes below the poverty line or are eligible for public assistance.

All applications are due December 20, 2006.

Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply for a Matching Grant. The Matching Grant Program is an alternative to public assistance designed to enable refugees to become self-sufficient within four to six months from date of arrival into the United States. Services provided under this agreement include, but are not limited to, case management, maintenance assistance, and employment services. A total of $60 million is available to provide up to nine awards. Individual award amounts are up to $16 million for a one-year project period. Applications are due December 4, 2006.

•Qualified faith-based and other organizations may also apply to provide Regional Genetic and Newborn Screening Services. This program is divided into two parts: the Regional Genetics and Newborn Screening Service Collaboratives National Coordinating Center and the Regional Genetics and Newborn Screening Service Collaboratives.

The Coordinating Center will facilitate, coordinate and evaluate the implementation of activities carried out by the Regional Genetic and Newborn Screening Service Collaboratives (RCs) funded under Project 2. The Coordinating Center will serve as the primary vehicle for information sharing among the RCs and for the collaborative development, implementation, and dissemination of projects of interregional and national significance.

The Collaboratives will enhance and support the genetics and newborn screening service capacity of States across the nation. The Collaboratives are expected to improve the quality of health of children and their families by promoting the translation of genetic medicine into public health and health care services. They will take a regional approach to addressing the maldistribution of genetic resources and the problems families and primary health care providers have in accessing and utilizing those resources.

Approximately $800,000 is available to fund one Coordinating Center during the first year. Approximately $6 million annually is available to fund seven Collaboratives.

Letters of intent are due November 10, 2006. Applications are due January 5, 2007.

•Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply for two types of grants on Understanding and Promoting Health Literacy (R03 and R21). These projects will conduct empirical research on health literacy concepts, theory and interventions as these relate to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' public health priorities that are outlined in its HealthierUS and Healthy People 2010 initiatives. Health literacy is defined as the degree to which individuals have the capacity to obtain, process, and understand basic health information and services needed to make appropriate health decisions.

R03 grants may receive up to $50,000 annually over a two year project period. R21 grants may apply for up to $275,000 over a two year project period.

Letters of intent for both types of grants are due April 24, 2007, Applications are due May 24, 2007.

The R03 program announcement is at: http://grants.nih.gov/grants/guide/pa-files/PAR-07-019.html. The R21 program announcement is at: http://grants.nih.gov/grants/guide/pa-files/PAR-07-018.html.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

♦National Institute of Justice

Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply to conduct research on Communications Technology. Successful applicants will research, develop, and evaluate emerging communication technology solutions for public safety agencies. Specific areas of interest include: multiband radio technologies and associated operational issues, including software-defined radio and hardware radios; cognitive radio technologies; locator technologies with real-time updates; non-terrestrial technologies (i.e., satellite and airborne); alternative technologies for interconnection of repeater sites; multiband radio antenna; mobile hybrid technology for wireless broadband data; and voice over Internet protocol telephony issues such as location information and monitoring.

Each project may receive up to $500,000 annually.

Applications are due November 27, 2006.

The program announcement is at: http://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/sl000775.pdf.

◆Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply to conduct Crime and Justice Research. These projects will conduct social and behavioral research on and evaluations related to crime and justice topics relevant to state and/or local criminal and juvenile justice policy and practice. For evaluation research, funding priority will be given to applications proposing randomized experimental designs, regression discontinuity, propensity scores, or other enhanced quasi-experimental designs that maximize the validity and reliability of research results. Up to $2 million is available to fund projects, each receiving between $100,000 and $400,000.

Applications are due January 23, 2007.

The program announcement is at: http://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/sl000765.pdf.

◆Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply to conduct Information-Led Policing Research, Technology Development,Testing, and Evaluation. Successful applicants will conduct research, development, testing, and evaluation of information and data technologies that can be used to increase the effectiveness of state and local law enforcement agencies. More specifically, NIJ is interested in concepts in one of the following areas: identity matching and entity resolutions; positive identification information sharing; Global Justice XML Data Model-based messaging for law enforcement; data analysis tools for multidiscipline data sharing systems; alert system mechanism to notify law enforcement agencies of "hits"; proof-of-concept implementation of the Justice Reference Architecture; and proof-of-concept for matching, scoring, and filtering of data for law enforcement.

Each project may receive up to $500,000 annually.

Applications are due November 24, 2006.

The program announcement is at: http://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/sl000769.pdf.

•Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply for a program on Intimate Partner Violence and Stalking: Research for Policy and Practice. These projects will gain research knowledge to increase victim safety and improve the justice system and related responses to intimate partner violence and stalking. Research is sought on victim safety and protection; programs and policies to hold offenders accountable; law enforcement, prosecution, and judicial responses; coordinated community responses; and effective responses in diverse communities. Proposals on foundational and developmental research may be submitted, although the primary goal of the program is to support research on the effectiveness of strategies and interventions that will result in general and useful information for policy and practice. Proposed studies may focus on innovative policy or practice, the impact of training efforts, or the cost-effectiveness of interventions. Both rigorous quantitative studies and qualitative investigations are encouraged as well as studies that incorporate spatial analysis. Priority will be given to proposals that include experimental or randomized designs.

A total of $1 million is available to fund projects under this program.

Applications are due January 23, 2007.

The program announcement is at: http://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/sl000774.pdf.

•Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply for Research on Policing and Public Safety Interventions. This program will support research on policing and public safety interventions to improve law enforcement policies and operations at the state and local levels. Effective law enforcement and crime prevention are of critical importance to ensuring the safety of communities throughout the country. Given the limited resources of most police departments and other local agencies and groups, it is especially important to determine the effectiveness of police department policies and public safety interventions.

Up to $1 million is available to fund projects under this program. Three to five awards will be funded.

Applications are due January 30, 2007.

The program announcement is at: http://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/sl000779.pdf.

◆Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply to conduct research on *The Criminal Justice Response to Sexual Violence:*From Adolescence to Late Adulthood. This program will support research on sexual violence to increase women's safety by informing and improving policy and practice in the criminal justice system. Proposed research may address the criminal justice response to stranger or nonstranger sexual violence against adult women and adolescent girls. Both rigorous quantitative studies and qualitative investigations are encouraged, as well as studies that incorporate spatial analysis. Priority will be given to proposals that include experimental or randomized designs. Proposals in the following priority areas are specifically encouraged: research examining rape prosecution and factors influencing victim perception of the judicial process; evaluation of multisystem responses to sexual violence; and research on the use of forensic science to respond to sexual violence in stranger and nonstranger sexual assault cases.

Up to $750,000 is available to fund awards under this program.

Applications are due January 30, 2007.

The program announcement is at: http://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/sl000768.pdf.

◆Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply to conduct research on Transnational Crime. Transnational crimes are those that violate the laws and affect the interests of more than one country. This program seeks research proposals to develop and analyze information and empirical data having clear implications for criminal justice policy and practice at the federal, state, or local levels in the following focus areas: electronic crime, internet and related fraud, trafficking of human beings, illegal trafficking of goods, intellectual property theft, smuggling of natural resources and antiquities, organized crime, corruption, or money laundering.

A total of $1 million is available to fund awards through this program.

Applications are due January 23, 2007.

The program announcement is at: http://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/sl000770.pdf.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Office to Combat and Monitor Trafficking in Persons- International Programs

•Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply for International Programs to Combat Trafficking in Persons. These programs will nurture a 21st century abolitionist movement against slavery by prosecuting traffickers, protecting victims, and preventing trafficking in persons. Projects should focus on: engaging with foreign governments and civil society to focus attention to the problem; raising global awareness about the various forms of human trafficking and how it can be abolished; using diplomatic and foreign policy assets to encourage other nations, the United Nations, and other multilateral institutions to work together to combat human trafficking; enlisting businesses to prevent trafficking and to assist victims' reintegration into society; coordinating with other U.S. government agencies to ensure that the interagency anti-trafficking policy, planning, and grants, are complementary and consistent with legislative mandates and Presidential directives; supporting efforts by non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to assist, protect, and rescue victims around the world; supporting overseas education and training programs for law enforcement officers, immigration officials, border guards, military personnel, prosecutors and judges; and developing partnerships with NGOs, including women's, community, and faith-based organizations, and with private citizens who can provide resources and other assistance in the fight to eliminate human trafficking.

Approximately $1.5 million is available to fund projects, each receiving up to $300,000. Applications are due December 1, 2006.

The program announcement is at: http://www.grants.gov/search/search.do?oppId=11315&mode=VIEW.

U.S. AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

◆Qualified faith-based and other organizations may apply to form public-private alliances to carry out activities in support of USAID's international development objectives. Interested applicants are referred to the Annual Program Statement for the Office of Global Development Alliances. Alliances are expected to bring significant new resources, ideas, technologies and/or partners to address development problems in countries where USAID works. Alliances must clearly establish up front how the interests and objectives of each party converge. This expression of interests and objectives should then lead to an operational plan that, if successfully implemented, will produce clearly defined development results.

The following sectors will be considered for an award: agriculture; anti-corruption/governance/civil society strengthening; avian influenza; conflict/relief and humanitarian assistance; disaster assistance; food security; economic growth and trade capacity building; education; environment/energy; health; information technology; malaria; and urban programs.

Past projects have received between $200,000 and $1 million each.

Concept papers and applications are due September 30, 2007.

The annual program statement is at: http://apply.grants.gov/opportunities/instructions/oppM-OAA-GRO-EGAS-07-063-cfda98.011instructions.pdf.

Community ReConciliation: Policy and Practice November 17, 2006 - Cleveland, Ohio

Policy is a term used to describe the general principles by which government is guided in its management of public affairs. As commonly used, "practice" signifies the procedural methods and rules used in a particular occupation or profession. Policy and Practice in the area of ex-offender reentry are issues of national importance as the number of individuals incarcerated in America continues to grow, currently exceeding 2 million people. In addition, research shows that formerly incarcerated people commit a disproportionate number of new crimes, thus successful reintegration is particularly important in ensuring public safety. Community Reconciliation provides a powerful lens for all stakeholders to understand the impact of incarceration on people and their communities. The representative stakeholder groups that will be present at the event are: The Judicial System, Adult Parole Authority, Ohio Department of Rehabilitation and Correction, Law Enforcement, Community Service Providers, The Faith Community, Justice Advocates and Incarcerated and Formerly Incarcerated People and Their Families. OF SPECIAL NOTE: PowerNet of Dayton will be exhibiting a Documentary Film of the GEM Leadership Development Program currently being implemented at Dayton Correctional Institution. For more information go to: www.workplacereconnections.org or Call (937) 277-9141
