

Be safe on the water!

Rivers are ever-changing dynamic systems with inherent dangers. Here are some safety tips and river ethics to help you enjoy your time on the water.

State and federal laws require paddlers to have:

- A personal flotation device for each person
- An efficient sound-signaling device (an approved whistle would suffice)
- A white-light source visible from 360 degrees if paddling in reduced visibility or from sunset to sunrise

Recommended Safety Tips

- Never paddle alone
- Always file a "float plan": tell someone where you are going and when you are expected to return
- Check weather forecasts
- Carry a map of the stream or chart of the bay so you can find your location at any time
- Carry a cell phone or a handheld VHF radio in coastal areas
- Carry a handheld Global Positioning System (GPS) unit
- Wear protective footwear and carry drinking water, sunscreen and insect repellent
- Plan your trip so that your paddling skills are equal to the water conditions

Conservation

- Get to know your local stream by learning about its watershed, riparian zone, and native vegetation.
- Conserving riparian areas is important, as these areas filter pollutants and protect against flooding and erosion.
- When paddling, be sure to take a bag to hold your trash for proper disposal when you leave the river. Visit Leave No Trace (www.Int.org) for more information.
- Share the water; when approaching anglers or other paddlers, give them a wide berth and proceed quietly so as not to interfere with their recreation.

- It's your river - keep it clean
- Stow it, don't throw it
- Alcohol and boats don't mix
- Respect private property rights
- Take a safe boating course

Why Canoe or Kayak?

Canoeing and kayaking offer a more personal way to connect with nature. The quiet of being out on the water allows paddlers to experience a closer view of wildlife and scenery, drop a line and go fishing, or just relax. By traveling along river corridors, around lakes, or through bays and bayous, paddlers see nature from a new viewpoint. Learn more about canoeing and kayaking with the information below, and start your next paddling adventure soon!
