

Make Sure Your Children Know You Care This Holiday Season

By Greg Abbott
Attorney General of Texas

Anyone who has ever purchased a Christmas gift or hosted a big holiday meal knows the value of a dollar at this time of year. Many single parents know this dilemma all too well, especially if they depend on regular child support payments to make ends meet each month.

Child support enables parents to put a roof over their children's heads, clothes on their backs, and food on the table. During the holidays, these challenges are compounded as parents also try to put gifts under the tree or gas in their car for a long trip to grandma's house. That's why I am giving parents this special reminder to pay their child support.

To those parents who regularly pay their child support in full and on time, I extend my heartfelt thanks. Your faithfulness will reap great rewards as you help your children remember the holidays as a time of provision rather than hardship.

I know that sometimes circumstances arise, such as losing a job, that make it difficult to meet one's child support obligation. For parents who are in a situation like this, I encourage you to contact my office so we can work together to determine a course of action. As an additional service, my office partners with the Texas Workforce Commission and workforce development boards across the state to help low-income parents find good-paying jobs so they can meet their child support obligations.

Ultimately, what children need most is to know their parents care about them. For unmarried parents, this begins with establishing paternity. When paternity is established, a child has a legal connection to his or her father that protects the child's access to a whole range of benefits fathers can provide, starting with having dad's name on the birth certificate. Through the Paternity Opportunity Program, my office trains and certifies employees of hospitals and birthing centers to assist parents with the process of acknowledging paternity just after their child's birth. We can also facilitate DNA tests to scientifically and legally establish fatherhood.

As children grow up, my office also encourages their parents to stay involved in their lives beyond paying child support. For example, we are part of the Tarrant County Fatherhood Coalition, a collaboration of more than 20 agencies and organizations seeking to strengthen the role of fathers and families in the lives of their children. We also help parents who are having trouble getting the access to their children that they desire. My office just administered nearly $500,000 in federal grants to 23 groups across Texas who facilitate parents' access to and visitation with their children.

Kids will remember forever what happens during this holiday season. Please, help make those memories good ones by being there for them and paying your child support.
