Technology - Community Computer Centers

Talking Points on Community Computer Centers

- As you know, we have taken a number of steps to ensure that individuals have access to computer technology. Our budget has committed over $2 billion over five years for the Technology Literacy Fund, and the FCC recently voted unanimously to provide up to $2.25 billion a year to provide schools and libraries with access to telecommunications.

- I very much like your idea of establishing community computer centers. My staff is exploring ways to advance this goal, whether through our existing technology programs or in some other way. I look forward to working with you on this project.
