

National Tribal Health Reform Training - April 18-19

The partners of the National Indian Health Outreach and Education Initiative (NIHOE), including the National Congress of American Indians, the National Indian Health Board, and Indian Health Service invite you and others from your community working directly with tribal citizens in health to attend two days of training at Mystic Lake Casino Hotel in Minnesota, April 18-19, 2012.

The NIHOE National Tribal Health Reform Training will provide community representatives with tribal-specific health reform education opportunities, consumer-oriented materials to use in local outreach efforts, and training to help them actively manage education campaigns for four consumer groups including individual consumers, health directors, tribal governments, and employers.

About NIHOE

NIHOE is a national partnership between all Indian Health Service area trainers, the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI), the National Indian Health Board (NIHB), and Indian Health Service (IHS) headquarters. Together, the partners plan to provide local trainings, national marketing tools, and e-resources that clearly explain health reform changes and their impact in tribal communities. All e-resources will be available online after the conference and the location will be announced following the conference
