

Hepatitis B and C

You Can't Live Without Your Liver

In early 2010, the Institute of Medicine released a national strategy “for prevention and control of Hepatitis B and C.” This presentation covers these two “silent killers”—how they are contracted, how they affect the liver, and what can be done to prevent infection. Discussion includes details of diagnosis, treatment and factors that increase risk of infection. Millions of Americans have chronic hepatitis from these two viruses, and many of them don't even know they are infected. Could you be one of them?
