SIGIR calculates the GOI’s contribution to reconstruction by summing the following amounts: Iraqi funds overseen by the CPA; the official capital budgets for 2003–2005; MOF-reported capital expenditures for 2006–2009; and the official capital budgets for 2010–2011. This total likely overstates the actual contribution made by the GOI, because official capital budgets typically exceed capital expenditures. Currently, certified expenditure data is not available from the MOF for 2003–2005 or 2010–2011.

SIGIR calculates expired funds as appropriations less obligations, as of the expiration date. Some ESF was transferred to other agencies under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, Sec. 632(b). NEA-I did not indicate whether its reported obligations include such transfers, so SIGIR’s calculations may overstate expired funds. In addition, NEA-I was not able to provide the complete status of funds for the $50 million in FY 2003 appropriations to the ESF; only approximately $9 million were reported obligated and expended as of March 31, 2011. It is likely that more of these funds were obligated and expended than reported, which would affect the overall status of funds and the amount of expired funds.

136. In an effort to create a replacement database, ABO worked with SIGIR to match the complete financial data it provides to the abbreviated project-level data that USF-I provides, which could conceivably yield a complete data set that is both accurate at the aggregate level and detailed at the project- and category-level. However, as reported last quarter, SIGIR discovered two unresolvable obstacles while trying to create this new database: 1) prior to FY 2008, USF-I did not consistently include the document reference number (DRN) in its CERP Project Tracker, making it impossible to use ABO data to track individual projects to completion for FY 2004-FY 2007 CERP appropriations; and 2) for FY 2008-FY 2010 CERP appropriations, some projects (mostly CERP microgrants) are bundled under a single DRN, making it impossible to distinguish which specific projects or grants under that DRN have been paid out or canceled.

SIGIR calculates the GOI's contribution to reconstruction by summing the following amounts: Iraqi funds overseen by the CPA; the official capital budgets for 2003–2005; MOF-reported capital expenditures for 2006–2009; and the official capital budgets for 2010–2011. This total likely overstates the actual contribution made by the GOI, because official capital budgets typically exceed capital expenditures. Currently, certified expenditure data is not available from the MOF for 2003–2005 or 2010–2011.
