

RECRUIT COMPANY COMMANDER (RCC)

This program requires the submission of a package and E-resume at the time of application.

Job Description

In terms of pure leadership, this is one of the more challenging and satisfying jobs in the Coast Guard for enlisted personnel!

The 60 Recruit Company Commanders (RCCs) at Training Center Cape May are diverse and represent a wide selection of ratings, missions, and personnel within the Coast Guard organization. A prospective RCC must be ready for a significant challenge that will require a high degree of dedication to the job and personal sacrifice in terms of physical, emotional and mental effort. With this sacrifice comes the satisfaction of seeing the life-changing process that takes place week after week, whereby young men and women transform from civilian volunteers to military members of the United States Coast Guard.

Company Commanders are the direct trainers and supervisors of 60-80 recruits through the entire eight weeks of basic training. A typical day for an RCC begins well before reveille and includes the preparation of uniforms and a thorough review of the day's events. The mornings are spent squaring away squad bays and quarterdecks, teaching and reviewing Close Order Drill (COD) and Manual of Arms (MOA), and handling other administrative matters before the company departs for the day. During the training day, companies participate in a wide variety of evolutions, including physical fitness, classroom lectures, practical training, and basic military fundamentals such as inspections and military drill. One of the RCC's primary roles is as an instructor. They teach many classes, conduct various physical fitness classes, and work extensively at developing the company's overall military bearing and appearance. If RCCs are not otherwise engaged with their company, they are conducting squad bay inspections and reviewing or making thorough documentation of individual recruit performance and behavior. In the evenings, RCCs spend a great deal of time running drills that aid in the development of teamwork, pride, and motivation by reinforcing the recruit training objectives of self-discipline, military bearing, esprit de corps, and the Core Values. Strict direction is provided and recruits are coached through these evolutions. Company and individual performance is monitored and feedback is provided to the company as a group and through one-on-one counseling.

Personnel selected for duty as a Recruit Company Commander must first complete Company Commander School conducted under TAD orders to Training Center Cape May in either the spring or summer of the transfer year. Upon reporting PCS to Cape May, new RCCs go through an extensive qualification process. This includes successfully passing an oral RCC qualification board, running three recruit companies, and completing an instructor and RCC PQS package. This process takes approximately seven months. For those in pay grade E-6 and above, they can pursue additional qualification for certification as a Lead Company Commander. Collateral Duty assignments are used to give RCCs a break from running recruit companies and providing additional opportunities to excel. Those RCCs who are recognized as top performers are often chosen to represent the Training Center at various functions such as military funerals at Arlington National Cemetery, Presidential Inauguration events, judging JROTC competitions, and serving on the RCC cadre at the CG Academy to train 2/C Cadets in military drill and discipline fundamentals. Duty as a Recruit Company Commander is truly a unique and rewarding experience that provides tremendous avenues for growth in leadership, administration, and career diversity.
