

Representation of Children in Child Abuse and Neglect Proceedings

The Federal Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) requires States to document in their State plan provisions for appointing a guardian ad litem (GAL) to represent the child's best interests in every case of abuse or neglect that results in a judicial proceeding. The GAL may be an attorney or a court-appointed special advocate (CASA)—or both—who has received appropriate training.¹

¹ To be eligible for funding under CAPTA, a State is required to submit to the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services a written plan for improving the State's child protective services system. The plan must include an assurance that the State has in effect laws, policies, or procedures that address specific issues required by CAPTA (42 U.S.C. § 5106a(b) (2010)). The GAL represents the child at all judicial proceedings related to the case and has the responsibility to:

- Obtain firsthand a clear understanding of the situation and needs of the child
- Make recommendations to the court concerning the best interests of the child²

At the State level, statutes specify when the court must appoint a representative for a child who is involved in an abuse and neglect proceeding, and whom the court may appoint.³ As described in the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges' Resource Guidelines: Improving Court Practice in Child Abuse and Neglect Cases,⁴ there are a number of ways that a child's interests can be represented. In some instances, two or more of these representatives may work on the same case:

- A GAL may be appointed to investigate and represent the child's best interests as described above.
- An attorney may be appointed specifically to represent the child's expressed wishes before the court.
- A CASA may be appointed to assist the court by investigating a child's circumstances and providing recommendations on the child's needs. In some cases, a CASA may serve as the child's GAL as described in CAPTA.

Making the Appointment

All States, the District of Columbia, and all territories except the Northern Mariana Islands provide in their statutes for the appointment of representation for a child involved in a child abuse or neglect proceeding. Approximately 41 States, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, and the U.S. Virgin Islands provide for the appointment of a GAL to represent the best interests of the child.⁵ In 15 of these States, the District of Columbia, and the U.S. Virgin Islands, the GAL must be an attorney.⁶ In other States, volunteers who may or may not be attorneys may serve as GALs.

Fourteen States and Puerto Rico require the appointment of an attorney for the child;⁷ five States require both an attorney and GAL.⁸ Oregon requires the appointment of a CASA. In Wisconsin, a child has the right to counsel, and he or she may not be removed from the home unless counsel has been appointed. If the child is under age 12, the court may appoint a GAL instead of counsel. In four States, if the GAL is not an attorney, counsel may be appointed to represent the GAL.⁹

In all cases, the appointment of a GAL, attorney, or CASA is made by the court that has jurisdiction over the child abuse or neglect proceedings. In Louisiana, the attorney may be provided by a Child Advocacy Program. In Maryland, the court appoints an attorney with whom the Department of Human Resources has contracted to provide legal services. In Washington, the court may select a GAL from a rotational registry of qualified GALs.

⁶ Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

⁷ California, Connecticut, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, South Dakota, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming. In Wyoming, the attorney also shall serve as the child's GAL. In New Mexico, an attorney is required if the child is age 14 or older. In California, the appointment of an attorney is required unless the court finds the child would not benefit from the appointment; in that case, the court must appoint a CASA for the child.

⁸ Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, and Vermont. In Texas, the attorney may serve in the dual role of attorney and GAL, or a separate GAL may be appointed. In Mississippi and North Carolina, an attorney also must be appointed if the court appoints a nonattorney GAL.

⁹ Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and South Carolina.

The Use of Court-Appointed Special Advocates

Approximately 33 States and the U.S. Virgin Islands allow for the appointment of a CASA.¹⁰

In 17 of these States, the CASA may serve as the GAL.¹¹ In 13 States and the U.S. Virgin Islands, the CASA may be appointed in addition to the GAL.¹² A CASA may be appointed in addition to an attorney in five States.¹³ In Louisiana and New Mexico, a CASA may be assigned to assist the court, while in Utah a CASA may be selected to assist the court or the child's GAL.

Qualifications and Training

Approximately 45 States, the District of Columbia, and the U.S. Virgin Islands address the qualifications and training required for those who can be assigned to represent a child involved in a child abuse or neglect proceeding.¹⁴ While most States that require the appointment of an attorney for the child do not require additional specific training, some States do have certain requirements that must be met. Texas, for example, requires the attorney to have training in child advocacy or experience equivalent to that training, while West Virginia requires 3 hours of continuing legal education per year in representation of children and child abuse and neglect.¹⁵

For attorneys serving as GALs, training requirements vary considerably from State to State. In four States, additional training is not specified.¹⁶ In 17 States and the District of Columbia, laws require attorneys to receive training specific to their roles as GALs.¹⁷ For example, Delaware requires

¹⁰ Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin.

¹¹ Arizona, California, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana (the court may appoint a CASA to act as GAL or appoint both a CASA and GAL), Iowa, Maine, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, and Washington.

¹² Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Indiana, Kansas, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, and Wisconsin.

¹³ Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Oklahoma, and Wisconsin.

¹⁴ In all States except Arizona, Hawaii, Iowa, Michigan, and Oregon.

¹⁵ Louisiana requires attorneys to possess training or education relevant to child abuse and neglect cases. Attorneys in Massachusetts must complete an initial 5-day certification course and meet annual continuing education requirements.

¹⁶ New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, and Pennsylvania.

¹⁷ Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

GALs to complete training offered by the State Office of the Child Advocate, and Florida requires training to be provided by the Statewide Guardian ad Litem Office. In Georgia, the requirement for training can be satisfied within the State's existing continuing legal education obligations. The statutes in six States provide more specific requirements about the content of training, including knowledge about the needs and protection of children; applicable statutory, regulatory, and case law; and the roles, responsibilities, and duties when representing the best interests of a child.¹⁸

For nonattorneys acting as GALs and CASAs, the laws in many States provide more detailed training requirements. Typically, an initial training program must be completed before a person may be assigned to a child's case, followed by ongoing in-service training. The training programs are designed to ensure that the child's advocate possesses the knowledge and skills to represent the child's best interests competently. Topics covered in these programs may include:

- Child abuse and neglect
- Child development
- Roles and responsibilities of the child's advocate
- Cultural awareness
- The juvenile court process
- Federal, State, and local laws, regulations, and rules
- Interview techniques and information gathering
- Documentation and report writing

Seven States specify that the training provided to CASAs must comply with standards set by the National Court Appointed Special Advocates Association.¹⁹

In addition to training requirements, volunteers are screened and interviewed prior to acceptance in a GAL or CASA program.

¹⁸ Arkansas, Connecticut, Kansas, Utah, Virginia, and Wyoming.

¹⁹ Those States are Arkansas, California, Kentucky, Louisiana, Nevada, Tennessee, and Utah. For information on the National CASA Association curriculum, see http://www.casaforchildren.org/site/c.mtJSJ7MPIsE/b.5466267/k.5DB0/Training_Staff_and_Volunteers.htm

Specific Duties

Sixteen States require criminal background checks.²⁰ Checks of the State's child abuse and neglect registry are required in 10 States.²¹ California, Florida, and Idaho require checks of the State's sex offender registry.

The primary responsibility of a GAL is to represent the best interests of a child in child abuse and neglect proceedings. The laws in 40 States, American Samoa, Guam, and the U.S. Virgin Islands list specific duties that may be required as part of that responsibility.²² These duties include, but are not limited to:

- Meeting face-to-face with the child on a regular basis, including before all hearings
- Conducting an independent investigation of the circumstances of the case
- Attending all hearings and staffings related to the case
- Monitoring cases to ensure that court orders for services have been fulfilled
- Submitting written reports to the court

The GAL also is expected to make recommendations to the court about specific actions that would serve the best interests of the child. Sometimes, the GAL's determination of best interests may conflict with the child's expressed wishes. In 25 States, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, the GAL is obligated to communicate the child's wishes to the court along with his or her own recommendations.²³ In 14 States and Guam, the court may appoint a separate counsel to represent the child's wishes.²⁴

The statutes in 13 States list specific duties for a CASA who is appointed in addition to an attorney or GAL.²⁵ Typically, these duties may include:

- Investigating the case to provide independent, factual information to the court
- Monitoring the case to ensure compliance with court orders
- Determining whether appropriate services are being offered to the child and family
- Preparing regular written reports for the court and parties to the case

Compensating the Representative

Many States provide in statute that reasonable compensation should be paid to attorneys and GALs who are appointed to represent a child.²⁶ In Arkansas and Delaware, the child's attorney is contracted through a State agency, while in Colorado, Kentucky, and Oregon, attorney expenses are paid by either a State agency or a specially designated fund. In Connecticut, the child's attorney and GAL are assigned by the office of the Chief Public Defender, which also has the responsibility to pay the fees of the attorney and GAL.

In 33 States, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, and Guam, fees and expenses for attorney and/or GAL services are ²³ Arkansas, California, Delaware, Idaho, Hawaii, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

²⁴ Alaska, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Washington (if a child who is age 12 or older requests separate counsel), and Wisconsin.

²⁵ Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Nebraska, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, and Wisconsin.

²⁶ Alabama, Arizona, California, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands do not address this issue in their statutes.

paid by the court handling the case.²⁷ In six States and American Samoa, these costs are funded by the State;²⁸ in 15 States, expenses are paid by the county.²⁹ To the extent that they are able to pay, the court in 22 States and Guam may require the parent or guardian of the child or other appropriate party to reimburse the court for any attorney or GAL fees that have been paid.³⁰ In Tennessee and American Samoa, the person found responsible for the abuse or neglect is required to pay these expenses.

Since they serve as volunteers, CASAs are not compensated. However, in Maine and Missouri, they may be reimbursed for any expenses they incur.

California

Making the Appointment

Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 317(c), 326.5; 326.7; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.660(b)

If a child is not represented by counsel, the court shall appoint counsel for the child unless the court finds that the child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel. The court shall state on the record its reasons for that finding.

The Judicial Council shall adopt a rule of court effective July 1, 2001, that complies with the requirement of the Federal Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA, P.L. 93-247) for the appointment of a guardian ad litem (GAL) for a child in cases in which a petition is filed based upon neglect or abuse of the child or in which a prosecution is initiated under the Penal Code arising from neglect or abuse of the child.

Appointment of a GAL shall not be required for a minor who is a parent of the child who is the subject of the dependency petition unless the minor parent is unable to understand the nature of the proceedings or to assist counsel in preparing the case.

The court must appoint counsel for a child who is the subject of a petition under § 300 and who is unrepresented by counsel unless the court finds that the child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel.

In order to find that a child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel, the court must find all of the following:

- The child understands the nature of the proceedings.
- The child is able to communicate and advocate effectively with the court, other counsel, other parties, including social workers and other professionals involved in the case.
- Under the circumstances of the case, the child would not gain any benefit by being represented by counsel.

If the court finds that the child would not benefit from representation by counsel, the court must appoint a court-appointed special advocate (CASA) volunteer for the child, to serve as the CAPTA GAL, as required in § 326.5.

The Use of Court-Appointed Special Advocates (CASAs)

Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 326.5; 356.5; 102; 103

The rule of court may include guidelines to the courts for determining when an attorney should be appointed rather than a CASA, and caseload standards for GALs.

A child advocate appointed by the court to represent the interests of a dependent child shall have the same duties and responsibilities as a GAL and shall be trained by and function under the auspices of a CASA/GAL program, formed and operating under the guidelines established by the National Court Appointed Special Advocate Association.

A CASA may be appointed in juvenile dependency proceedings and in actions to terminate parental rights to custody and control, as deemed appropriate by the juvenile or other superior court judge hearing the matter.

A judge may appoint a CASA when, in the opinion of the judge, a child requires services that can be provided by the CASA consistent with the local rules of court.

To accomplish the appointment of a CASA, the judge making the appointment shall sign an order that may grant the CASA the authority to review specific relevant documents and interview parties involved in the case, as well as other persons having significant information relating to the child, to the same extent as any other officer of the court appointed to investigate proceedings on behalf of the court. \

Qualifications/TrainingWelf. & Inst. Code §§ 102; 103; Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 5.660(d)(1)-(3)

The Judicial Council shall require an initial and ongoing training program to all persons acting as a CASA, including, but not limited to, the following:

- Dynamics of child abuse and neglect
- Court structure, including juvenile court laws regarding dependency
- Social service systems
- Child development
- Interview techniques
- Report writing
- Roles and responsibilities of a CASA

- The court receiving notice of the emergency removal of the child
- An application for an order for removal of the child prior to the filing of a petition

The Use of Court-Appointed Special Advocates (CASAs)

This issue is not addressed in the statutes reviewed.

Qualifications/Training

Family Court Act § 242

The term 'attorney for the child' refers to an attorney admitted to practice law in the State of New York who has been designated to represent a minor.

Specific Duties

Family Court Act §§ 1016; 1075; NY Ct. Rules § 7.2

Whenever an attorney has been appointed by the family court to represent a child, the appointment shall continue without further court order or appointment during an order of disposition issued by the court directing supervision, protection, or suspending judgment, or any extension thereof; an adjournment in contemplation of dismissal; or the pendency of the foster care placement. All notices and reports required by law shall be provided to the attorney for the child. Such appointment shall terminate upon the expiration of the order, unless another appointment of an attorney has been made by the court or unless the attorney makes application to the court to be relieved of his or her appointment. Upon approval of an application to be relieved, the court shall immediately appoint another attorney for the child to whom all notices and reports required by law shall be provided.

In addition to all other duties and responsibilities necessary to the representation of a child, an attorney for the child shall upon receipt of a report from a child protective agency, review the information contained therein and make a determination as to whether there is reasonable cause to suspect that the child is at risk of further abuse or neglect or that there has been a substantive violation of a court order. When the attorney makes such a determination, he or she shall apply to the court for appropriate relief. Nothing contained in this section shall relieve a child protective agency or social services official of its duties pursuant to this act or the social services law.

In proceedings in which the child is the subject, the attorney must zealously advocate for the child's position. The attorney must ascertain the child's position by consulting with the child in a manner consistent with the child's capacities, and by gaining a thorough knowledge of the child's circumstances. If the child is capable of knowing, voluntary, and considered judgment, the attorney for the child should be directed by the wishes of the child, even if this conflicts with the attorney's belief that what the child wants is not in the child's best interests. The attorney should fully explain the options available to the child, and may recommend a course of action that in the attorney's view would best promote the child's interests.

When the attorney for the child is convinced either that the child lacks the capacity for knowing, voluntary, and considered judgment, or that following the child's wishes is likely to result in a substantial risk of imminent, serious harm to the child, the attorney for the child would be justified in advocating a position that is contrary to the child's wishes. In these circumstances, the attorney for the child must inform the court of the child's articulated wishes if the child wants the attorney to do so, notwithstanding the attorney's position.

How the Representative Is Compensated Family Court Act § 1016

An attorney for the child shall be entitled to compensation pursuant to applicable provisions of law for services rendered up to and including disposition of the petition. The attorney shall, by separate application, be entitled to compensation for services rendered subsequent to the disposition of the petition.

The GAL has the authority to obtain any information or reports, whether or not confidential, that may in the GAL's opinion be relevant to the case. No privilege other than the attorney-client privilege may be invoked to prevent the GAL and the court from obtaining such information. The confidentiality of the information or reports shall be respected by the GAL, and no disclosure of any information or reports shall be made to anyone except by order of the court or unless otherwise provided by law.

How the Representative Is CompensatedGen. Stat. § 7B-603

An attorney or GAL shall be paid a reasonable fee fixed by the court or by direct engagement for specialized GAL services through the Administrative Office of the Courts.

The court may require payment of the fee for an attorney or GAL from a person other than the child. In no event shall the parent or guardian be required to pay the fees for a court-appointed attorney or GAL in an abuse, neglect, or dependency proceeding unless the child has been adjudicated to be abused, neglected, or dependent or, in a proceeding to terminate parental rights, unless the parent's rights have been terminated. If the party is ordered to reimburse the State for attorney or GAL fees and fails to comply with the order at the time of disposition, the court shall file a judgment against the party for the amount due the State.

Qualifications/TrainingND R. Ct. 8.7(c)

To be eligible for appointment as a GAL, an attorney must have completed 18 hours of GAL-related training. To remain eligible to be appointed as GAL, an individual shall complete an additional 18 hours of GAL-related training every 3 years.

Specific DutiesND R. Ct. 8.7(d)

A GAL shall advocate the best interests of the child as to legal custody, physical placement, visitation, and support. A GAL shall function independently, in the same manner as an attorney for a party to the action, and, consistent with the Rules of Professional Conduct, shall consider, but not be bound by, the wishes of the child or others as to the best interests of the child.

After appointment, a GAL shall:

- Work with a custody investigator, if appointed, to coordinate investigation activities and avoid duplicating services
- Interview and observe the child to ascertain the facts relevant to custody, the child's wishes, the need for independent evaluation, and the need for and appropriateness of interim judicial relief
- Advise the child and the child's parents of the role and responsibilities of the GAL

He or she also may request an independent court-ordered evaluation or study, including a custody investigation.

The GAL shall also participate in all pretrial procedures and negotiations and endeavor to resolve the case without the need for a trial. The GAL may not disclose or participate in the disclosure of information to any person who is not a party to the case, except as necessary to perform the GAL duties or as may be specifically provided by law.

How the Representative Is CompensatedCent. Code § 27-20-49

The supreme court shall pay reasonable compensation for a GAL. If, after due notice to the parents or other persons legally obligated to care for and support the child, and to a child older than age 18, and after affording them an opportunity to be heard, the court finds that they are financially able to pay all or part of the costs and expenses payable by the supreme court, the court may order them to pay the same and prescribe the manner of payment.

Unless it finds that there is no likelihood that the party is or will be able to pay attorney's fees and expenses, the court shall order the parents (or other persons legally obligated to care for and support the child) and the child, if older than age 18, to reimburse the presumed amount of indigent defense costs and expenses, as determined by the Commission on Legal Counsel for Indigents, and the court shall notify the party of the right to a hearing on the reimbursement amount. If the party or the State requests a hearing within 30 days of receiving notice, the court shall schedule a hearing at which the actual amount of attorney's fees and expenses must be shown. In determining the amount of reimbursement and method of payment, the court shall consider the financial resources of the party and the nature of the burden that reimbursement of costs and expenses will impose.

If the court determines that one or more of the parties are able to defray the fees and expenses of an attorney ad litem or GAL for the child as determined by the reasonable and customary fees for similar services in the county of jurisdiction, the fees and expenses may be ordered paid by one or more of those parties, or the court may order one or more of those parties, prior to final hearing, to pay the sums into the registry of the court or into an account authorized by the court for the use and benefit of the payee on order of the court. The sums may be taxed as costs to be assessed against one or more of the parties.

If indigence of the parents is shown, an attorney ad litem appointed to represent a child shall be paid from the general funds of the county according to the fee schedule. The court may not award attorney ad litem fees against the State, a State agency, or a political subdivision of the State except as provided by this subsection.
