Dear FTC,

After reading an article in the Daily News about U.S.A. labeling, I do not approve of putting Made in U.S.A. labels on anything that is not made of 100% parts produced or manufactured in this country.

Due to many items not being made in this country I understand a need for some imports, but this should be noted in the labels, and you should not lower the standards for labeling. This is entirely dishonest to the consumer. We deserve better than that.

I think we should stop buying any goods made in sweat shops, by slave labor or China. Manufacturing and production should be brought back to this country. But wherever the material comes from, it should be labeled so. Thank you for hearing my point of view as a concerned American citizen.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Wilbur Landry
