JOINT DOCTRINE RESPONDS TO CHANGE

Joint doctrine has changed significantly in recent years. One third of approved joint publications have been revised or new ones created in just the last two years to address, among other developments, important lessons from the Global War on Terrorism, Operations ENDURING FREEDOM, IRAQI FREEDOM and NEW DAWN, various humanitarian assistance and civil support operations, and support to homeland security. Approximately 45% of the joint publications are under revision or in development. The joint community is learning faster than ever before. We are incorporating operational and training lessons learned, validated concepts, and national strategies into joint doctrine. Key examples include irregular warfare, cyberspace operations, interagency coordination, counterinsurgency, counterterrorism, stability operations, improvised explosive device defeat guidance, and strategic communication and communications strategy.

Recent changes to the Chairman's Joint Doctrine Development System aided updating joint doctrine and facilitated a reduction in joint publications. Consequently, the percentage of joint publications older than three years has been reduced from 61% to 40%. Also, numerous joint publications were consolidated with others so the joint doctrine library was condensed from 115 to the projected 82 joint publications—including a joint test publication on Total Force Fitness.

We have a searchable online joint doctrine library and Universal Joint Task List (UJTL). Further, the tasks are now hyper-linked to joint doctrine. We invite you to look at the new searchable tools, described on pages v and vi, for discovering joint operating practices found in joint doctrine publications and joint training tasks that are available to personnel with a government common access card (CAC). They can be used to maintain awareness of new information as quickly as a Google-type search.

The joint community knows we must adapt and respond quicker to stay ahead of our adversaries. We ask your help in doing this by providing feedback on joint doctrine through your combatant command and Service joint doctrine representatives. If you need to know who that is, please ask us.

Doctrine Guides, Commanders Decide!

KEY JOINT DOCTRINE PUBLICATIONS RECENTLY RELEASED

JP 2-01, Joint and National Intelligence Support to Military Operations, was approved and signed 5 January 2012. It provides doctrine for joint and national intelligence products, services, and support to joint military operations. It describes the organization of joint intelligence forces and the national intelligence community, intelligence responsibilities, command relationships, and national intelligence support mechanisms. It provides information regarding the fundamentals of intelligence planning, execution, dissemination, and assessment and discusses how intelligence supports the full range of joint and multinational operations. It also describes Intelligence and Department of Defense networks.
JP 3-0, Joint Operations, was approved and signed by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff 11 August 2011. This publication is the keystone document of the joint operations series. It provides the doctrinal foundation and fundamental principles that guide the Armed Forces of the United States in joint operations across the range of military operations. It discusses the strategic security environment, strategic considerations and the nature of war as a context for joint operations. It lists the fundamental principles of joint operations; discusses joint functions in joint operations, addresses the art of joint command, including operational art, operational design, joint operation planning, and assessment.

JP 3-07, Stability Operations, was approved 29 September 2011. It provides doctrine for the conduct of stability operations during joint operations within the broader context of US Government efforts. It provides guidance for operating across the range of military operations to support US Government agencies, foreign governments, and intergovernmental organizations, or to lead such missions, tasks, and activities until it is feasible to transfer lead responsibility. It provides an overview of stability operations and presents the principles of stability operations, addresses stability operations planning, and discusses the functions of stability operations to include security, humanitarian assistance, economic stabilization and infrastructure, rule of law, governance and participation. It stresses the need for unified action in stability operations.
JP 3-15.1, Counter-Improvised Explosive Device Operations, was approved 9 January 2012. It is a new joint publication developed by the JS, J-7 with the Joint Improvised Explosive Device Defeat Organization as the technical review authority. The project was presented at the 44th Joint Doctrine Planning Conference held in November 2009 with the joint doctrine development community. Voting members unanimously recommended approval and the JS, J-7 approved the project. The publication provides joint doctrine for planning and executing joint counter-improvised explosive device operations and outlines JTF staff responsibilities, C-IED enablers, the role of the C-IED Task Force, attack the network fundamentals, and targeting methodology.

JP 3-50, Personnel Recovery, was approved and signed 20 December 2011. This publication provides doctrine for the preparation, planning, execution, and adaptation of personnel recovery by the Armed Forces of the United States during joint and multinational operations. It provides an overview of personnel recovery and the Department of Defense Personnel Recovery System. It presents personnel recovery functions and responsibilities; discusses the planning for personnel recovery, describes command and control used for these operations, and explains the five personnel recovery execution tasks – report, locate, support, recover, and reintegrate.
JP 5-0, Joint Operation Planning, was approved and signed by the Chairman, 11 August 2011. As the keystone doctrine for joint operation planning throughout the range of military operations it reflects current guidance for planning military operations. It describes the nature of joint strategic planning, discusses strategic direction and guidance, describes the adaptive planning and execution system; describes the JOPP; addresses operational art, operational design, and the design elements as they relate to joint operation planning; and provides a sample joint operation plan format.

HOT TOPIC JOINT PUBLICATIONS IN DEVELOPMENT
JP 1, Doctrine for the Armed Forces of the United States, is in revision and is now in signature draft. This publication is the capstone joint doctrine publication and will provide doctrine for unified action by the Armed Forces of the United States. As such, it will specify the authorized command relationships and authority that military commanders can use; provide guidance for the exercise of that military authority; provide fundamental principles and guidance for command and control; prescribe guidance for organizing and developing joint forces; and describe policy for selected joint activities. It also will provide the doctrinal basis for interorganizational coordination and for US military involvement in multinational operations. It is scheduled to be approved in the next couple of weeks.

JP 3-01, Countering Air and Missile Threats, is currently in revision. The publication is to provide doctrine for joint counterair operations and protection against air and missile threats across the range of military operations. It is to provide background and fundamentals of joint counterair operations. It is to address command and control relationships, responsibilities, including those for the area air defense commander and the airspace control authority. It is to describe counterair planning and the airspace control plan. It will discuss offensive counterair planning and operations and offensive counterair as part of the joint air operations plan and explain defense counterair planning and operations and the area air defense plan. It is scheduled to be approved and signed the spring of 2012.
JP 3-12, Joint Cyberspace Operations, was initiated based on the National Military Strategy for Cyberspace Operations Implementation Plan, which directed USSTRATCOM to assess joint doctrine in support of operations in cyberspace and the five National Military Strategy Cyberspace Operations Ends. Initially a joint test publication (JTP), there was unanimous support by the joint doctrine development community to end development of the JTP and instead develop a JP. This JP will address the uniqueness of military operations in cyberspace, clarify cyberspace operations-related command and operational interrelationships, and incorporate operational lessons learned. Evaluation determined deconfliction is needed between JP 3-12 and JP 3-13, Information Operations. These two JPs will be developed/ revised simultaneously to ensure consistency.

OPERATIONS, TRAINING, AND EDUCATION RESOURCES

The Joint Doctrine, Education and Training Electronic Information System* (JDEIS) Web Portal is the primary source of authoritative information for conducting joint operations, training, and interorganizational coordination that is approved by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (CJCS). It provides a search capability of joint doctrine and the Universal Joint Task List (UJTL). The joint tasks are linked back to the doctrine on how to perform them. JDEIS is a one stop shop for information resources ranging from US National Security Strategy, DOD directives, and interagency links to joint concepts, Service doctrine, and lessons learned links. JDEIS, located at https://jdeis.js.mil/jdeis/index.jsp?pindex=0 (CAC required), is managed for CJCS by JS, J-7 (Operational Plans and Joint Force Development). Interagency, intergovernmental, nongovernmental, and multinational partners can access the same information through the Joint Electronic Library (JEL) at http://www.dtic.mil/doctrine/, but there is no inherent search capability because of security restrictions.
The Combatant Command Headquarters Training Guide* (CCHQTG) is an internet-based, searchable tool that describes the tasks performed by a combatant command headquarters staff, boards, centers, and cells across the range of military operations. It is based on UJTL and doctrine information with added detail from lessons learned, practices, and other insights. The CCHQTG can be found in JDEIS on the joint exercises and training page. It is updated monthly to incorporate changes in policy, joint and Allied doctrine, training tasks; and inputs from the warfighter.

The Common Joint Task Force Headquarters Standing Operating Procedure* (CJTFHQSOP) is an internet-based tool for establishing, organizing, and operating a JTF. It is updated monthly and can be found on JDEIS on the joint exercises and training page. It is based on policy, UJTL, and doctrine information with added detail from lessons learned, practices, and insights. It addresses, among many other subjects, the roles and responsibilities of the commander, key staff members, boards, centers, and cells; and provides the basis for developing a working SOP for a newly formed JTF.

The Joint Task Force Headquarters Training Guide (JTFHQTG) is a searchable, internet-based tool that identifies the tasks that a JTF HQ staff performs. It lists steps, practices, and procedures that aid the JTF staff member in performing those tasks across the range of military operations. It is based on policy, UJTL, and doctrine information with added detail from lessons learned, practices, and other insights provided by the warfighters. It can be found in JDEIS on the joint exercises and training page. This web portal replaced the old paper copy Master Training Guide last published in 2003.

JP 1, Doctrine for the Armed Forces of the United States

This is the capstone publication in the joint doctrine hierarchy

Signed by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff – 14 May 2007
Incorporating Change 1 – 20 March 2009
(Currently in revision and expected for approval early 2012)

Summary of Contents:
