On-line 48-Hour Notices Available for the General Election

In order to reduce the number of faxed, mailed and hand-delivered 48-Hour Notices (Form 6), a Web-based filing system is being developed to enable filers to create and submit their 48-Hour Notices entirely on line. Even committees that do not currently file electronically and those that use software that does not allow for the creation of Form 6 will be able to use the on-line filing system to file their 48-Hour Notices electronically.

This Web-based filing system is different from the current electronic filing system, which allows committees to file Form 6 through the file upload process built into electronic filing software packages. Under those software systems, the transactions are keyed into the software, and the data reside on the local or network drive. By contrast, the new Browser-based version allows filers to log onto the FEC filing Web site and enter the transactions directly.

FEC Implements Administrative Fines Program

As part of its new Administrative Fines Program, the Federal Election Commission sent notices to committees that failed to file their July Quarterly Report, or filed this report late, informing them that the Commission had found reason to believe they had violated the Federal Election Campaign Act. Civil money penalties, ranging from $125 to $12,000, were included in the "Reason to Believe" notices. Committees had 40 days to either

Web Access to Senate Candidates' Campaign Finance Reports

Senate campaign finance reports are now available to the public on the FEC Web site. All Senate reports received after May 15, 2000, are currently accessible on the site, and the FEC will make future reports available within 48 hours of receiving them.

To view these reports, go to www.fec.gov, click on "Campaign Finance Reports and Data," and then select "View Financial Reports."

Reports

With this new system, the information is stored in local memory until the committee treasurer presses the "submit" button, thereby sending the report to the FEC.

The FEC will soon be sending, by mail, electronic filing passwords (PIN numbers) to treasurers for House and Presidential campaign committees that are running in the General Election¹ but do not yet have PIN numbers. With this PIN number, treasurers will have the option to log into the FEC Web site and fill out and submit a 48-Hour notice electronically. (Paper notices will also be accepted.)

For more information, visit the FEC Web site at www.fec.gov and click on the Electronic Filing logo. ♦ pay the penalties or submit written responses challenging the alleged violations or the amount of the penalties.

The July Quarterly Report was the first report handled under the new Administrative Fines program, and the number of late filers dropped significantly. While 30 percent of filers were late for the April quarterly filing, only 18 percent of filers were late for the July quarterly filing.

For more information on the Administrative Fines Program, see the May Record, page 1, and the July Record, page 1. Information is also available at the FEC's Web site at www.fec.gov.

Do You Need Copies of Campaign Guides?

The FEC publishes four Campaign Guides—each for a different type of committee—that explain the Federal Election Campaign Act and Commission regulations and their practical application to your committee. These guides are available free of charge.

If you would like to receive copies of any of the guides, please fill out and mail the order form on the inside of the back cover of this issue of the Record (see page 11).

Placing Political Advertisements on Internet for Academic Study

Third Millennium: Advocates for the Future, Inc., (Third Millennium) may place advertisements for Presidential candidates on the Internet to study their effects on voter participation among young adults.

Third Millennium—a nonprofit corporation that encourages younger Americans to participate in the electoral and legislative process—proposes to study the effect of Internet advertising on young voters. To this end, it has retained the services of Juno, an established Internet service provider that offers free Internet access to subscribers who agree to provide demographic information to Juno and to view on-line advertisements. Using Juno's demographic data, Third Millennium intends to randomly select subscribers to view advertisements supporting one or all of the current, ballot-qualified Presidential candidates, and then measure these subscribers' voting patterns through a post-election survey.¹

Third Millennium will either use the content and design of advertisements created by each Presidential campaign or create its own advertisements from available materials.

In doing so, Third Millennium will treat each candidate equally as it obtains or develops the ads, giving none a qualitative or quantitative advantage. It will not pay the campaigns for materials provided, and it reserves the right to reject material that mentions or alludes to another candidate. Third Millennium will present the study's results at a cross-disciplinary conference it will host in December 2000.

The Commission found Third Millennium's proposal permissible under the Federal Election Campaign Act and Commission regulations. Individual Commissioners explained their reasons for voting to approve this opinion in separate concurring statements.

Closing Date of Matching Fund Period for Nader 2000

The primary matching fund payment period for Ralph Nader's primary campaign committee, the Nader 2000 Primary Committee, Inc. (the Committee), ended August 12, 2000, which was the day he received the South Carolina United Citizen's Party's (UCP) Presidential nomination.

Mr. Nader's effort to get on the general election ballot in substantially all states had three components:

- His convention nomination by the Association of State Green Parties (ASGP)—the final step in securing ballot access in 14 states where the Green Party or its state affiliate had previously attained ballot access for its Presidential candidate.¹

¹ The Commission did not consider the question of whether the June 25 Green Party convention was a national convention or whether the procedure used to nominate Mr. Nader at that convention represented the culmination of the Green Party's nomination process.

- The submission of petitions seeking ballot access for either Mr. Nader (as an independent) or the state Green Party in states where neither the Party nor its state affiliate had previously attained ballot access for its candidates. In 30 of these states, the petition process was not complete until after the ASGP convention and, in six states, the deadline fell after the Presidential convention held by the Democratic National Convention on August 14-17, 2000.
- His convention nomination by the South Carolina United Citizen's Party (UCP) on August 12, 2000.

Under the Matching Act² and Commission regulations, the term "matching payment period" means the period beginning at the start of the calendar year in which a Presidential general election is held and ending on the date the national convention of the candidate's party nominates its Presidential candidate. In the case of a party that does not nominate its Presidential candidate by national convention, the matching payment period ends on the date the party nominates its Presidential candidate or on the last day of the last national convention held by a major party, whichever is earlier. 26 U.S.C. §9032(6) and 11 CFR 9032.6.

In several past advisory opinions (AOs), the Commission has applied the statute to situations where candidates sought the nomination of several non-major parties. In two of these cases, candidates of non-major parties asked whether their matching payment periods ended on either the date of their nomination by the last state party to make its nomination or the last date of the last major party Presidential nomination convention, whichever date was earlier.³ In these cases, the Commission found that neither the Matching Act nor Commission regulations require that the matching payment period for one non-major party Presidential candidate be shorter than that for another such candidate solely because one was seeking a national party nomination by national convention and the other was seeking nomination by several state political parties.

In Mr. Nader's case, the Commission found that his matching payment period would end August 12, 2000, the date he received the nomination of the UCP, which predated the close of the Democratic National Convention (the last national convention held by a major party).

³ For example, the Commission considered the matching fund status of an individual seeking the Presidential nomination of several minor parties that were active in several states. AO 1984-11. The Commission also considered the status of a candidate seeking the nomination of a minor party with a recognized national committee and national nominating convention while at the same time pursuing the nomination of several minor parties at the state level that had no national conventions. AO 1984-24.

AO 2000-19

Retroactively Reallocating Party's Ballot Composition Ratio

The Republican Party of Florida (the RPF) may retroactively adjust its federal-to-nonfederal allocation ratio to reflect the addition of two state offices, which became vacant in recent months. Further, in accordance with its request, the RPF may retroactively reallocate its administrative expenses for the period starting on June 1, 1999, using a ballot composition ratio that includes points for the two state offices that are now on the November 2000 ballot.

Under Commission regulations, state and local party committees are required to allocate their administrative expenses and costs of generic voter drives using the "ballot composition method." 11 CFR 106.5(d). Under this method, committees determine their ballot composition ratios at the start of the election cycle "based on the ratio of federal offices expected on the ballot to total federal and non-federal offices expected on the ballot in the next general election to be held in the committee's state or geographic area."¹

In this case, two state officials (Commissioners Bill Nelson and Tom Gallagher) decided to run for the Senate when Senator Connie Mack announced, on May 5, 1999, that he would not seek another term. Florida has a "resign-to-run" law that requires state office holders to resign from state office in order to run for federal office.² The two officers were not required to resign, however, until the governor officially declared their candidacies for the Senate opening. By law in Florida, the governor may not make this declaration until federal ballot qualification week, which began on May 8, 2000. The two state officials remained in their state positions until their candidacies were officially announced. Consequently, the state vacancies did not occur until May of 2000.

The RPF adjusted its ballot composition ratio to reflect the vacancies in May of 2000. It may now retroactively adjust its ratio for the period from June 1, 1999, to May of 2000 as well. In reaching this determination, the Commission noted several events that support the RFP's assertion that, in fact, it began supporting candidates for these two state offices prior to June 1, 1999:

- One of the state officials filed his Statement of Candidacy for the Senate on March 22, 1999, and the other established a testing-the-waters committee in April 1999;
- On May 13 and 14, 1999, state candidates began registering for the anticipated vacancies in the state offices held by Commissioners Nelson and Gallagher; and
- Both Commissioners had collected enough federal contributions by June 1, 1999, to cross the threshold for federal candidacy.

Under these circumstances, the RFP may retroactively reallocate its administrative expenses for the period between June 1, 1999, and May 8, 2000. The RFP has 30 days from the August 11, 2000, publication of this advisory opinion to submit an amended schedule H1 for the period in question and to transfer funds between its federal and nonfederal accounts to correct its prior allocation for this period.

Date Issued: August 11, 2000;
Length: 6 pages. ♦

¹ The regulations explain how federal and state offices should be counted for purposes of the ratio. When anticipated on the next general election ballot, the offices of President, U.S. Senator and U.S. Representative each count as one federal point, while the offices of Governor, State Senator and State Representative are counted as one nonfederal point each. The rules further require committees to count the total of all other partisan statewide executive candidates expected on the ballot as a maximum of two nonfederal offices and include up to two points for those offices in their ratios. State party committees may also include an additional nonfederal point. 11 CFR 106.5(d)(1)(ii). See also the Campaign Guide for Political Party Committees, pages 47-64.

² Florida's "resign-to-run" law states that "the resignation creates a vacancy in office to be filled by election, thereby permitting persons to qualify as candidates for nomination and election as if the officer's term were otherwise scheduled to expire." FLA STAT. Ch. 99.012(4)(g). Thus, prior to the office holders' submission of their resignations, no vacancy existed.

AO 2000-21New York Conservative Party Qualifies as State Committee of Political Party

The State Committee of the New York State Conservative Party meets all of the Federal Election Commission's (the Commission) requirements for state committee status, even though it is not affiliated with a recognized national committee or other national political party organization.

The Federal Election Campaign Act (the Act) defines a state committee as "the organization which, by virtue of the bylaws of a political party, is responsible for the day-to-day operation of such political party at the State level, as determined by the Commission." 2 U.S.C. §431(15).

Through a series of advisory opinions, the Commission has established two criteria necessary for an organization to qualify as a state committee. First, the organization must engage in activities that "are commensurate with" the day-to-day operations of a party at a state level. Second, the state organization must gain ballot access for its federal candidates who, in turn, must qualify as "candidates" as defined at 2 U.S.C. §431(2).¹

The New York Party meets both of these requirements:

- Its rules describe activity commensurate with the day-to-day functions and operations of a political party on a state level; and
- Representative Vito Fossell—a "candidate" under 2 U.S.C.

¹ Under 2 U.S.C. §431(2), an individual becomes a candidate for the purposes of the Act if he or she receives contributions aggregating in excess of $5,000, or makes expenditures in excess of $5,000.

§431(2)—appeared on the ballot as a Conservative Party House candidate in the 1998 election and will again in the 2000 election.

Reconsideration of Advisory OpinionAO 2000-08Donations to Federal Candidates for Personal Living Expenses

On August 24, 2000, the Commission denied Philip D. Harvey's request that it reconsider its June 14, 2000, advisory opinion (AO 2000-08), which stated that Mr. Harvey's proposed anonymous donations to federal candidates for their personal living expenses would count as contributions under the Federal Election Campaign Act (the Act). The Commission found that Mr. Harvey did not offer arguments that were substantively different from those offered in the initial Advisory Opinion Request (AOR).

In his AOR, Mr. Harvey had proposed giving monetary gifts—up to $10,000—to show his gratitude to individuals willing to engage in the difficult and time-consuming process of running for federal office. He planned to donate the funds anonymously, thereby avoiding any appearance that he was trying to curry favor with the recipient candidates. He also intended to instruct the recipients to use the funds only for personal living expenses, not for their campaigns.

Under the Act and Commission regulations, gifts given for the purpose of influencing a federal election are considered contributions, while those given for other purposes may or may not be. 2 U.S.C. §431(8)(A)(i) and 11 CFR 100.7(a)(1). For example, gifts of a personal nature are not considered contributions if they have been customarily given prior to candidacy. If not, they are considered contributions. 11 CFR 110.10(b)(2).

Similarly, under the Commission's personal use regulations, payment of a candidate's personal expenses by anyone other than the candidate constitutes a contribution, unless the payment would have been made irrespective of the candidacy. 11 CFR 113.1(g)(6).

In this case, Mr. Harvey's proposed donations would not be made irrespective of the individuals' candidacies and would not be "gifts of a personal nature which had been customarily received prior to candidacy." As a result, the gifts would be considered contributions under the Act and, as such, would be limited to $1,000 per candidate, per election. ♦

Alternative Disposition of Advisory Opinion RequestsAOR 2000-9

The requester withdrew the request for this advisory opinion on August 29, 2000. The request, submitted on May 2, 2000, sought the Commission's opinion on the application of FEC regulations and advisory opinions to a commercial Web site that sells space and other Web site services to federal and local candidates and issue organizations. ♦

Court Cases

On Appeal?

FEC v. Colorado Republican Federal Campaign Committee

The Federal Election Commission has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to review this case. The Commission seeks review of a 10th Circuit opinion that found that coordinated party expenditure limits at 2 U.S.C. 441a(d)(3) are unconstitutional. See July 2000 Record, p. 1.

Public Funding

Public Funding for Gore-Lieberman

On August 18, 2000, the Federal Election Commission approved public funding for the general election campaign of Democratic Presidential nominee Al Gore and his running mate Joseph Lieberman. The U.S. Treasury Department made the payment of $67.56 million in federal funds shortly thereafter.

Under the Presidential Election Campaign Fund Act, the Democratic and Republican nominees are each entitled to a grant of $20 million increased by a cost-of-living adjustment (COLA). In order to receive public funding, the Gore-Lieberman campaign agreed to abide by the overall spending limit and other legal requirements, including a post-campaign audit. Additionally, as major party nominees, they agreed to limit campaign spending to the amount of the public funding grant and not to accept private contributions for their campaign. They also agreed not to spend more than $50,000 in the aggregate of their own personal funds. The campaign may, however, accept contributions designated for its general election legal and compliance (GELAC) fund. This fund is a special account maintained exclusively to pay for legal and accounting expenses related to complying with the campaign finance law. Compliance expenses do not count against the expenditure limit. Contributions to the GELAC fund are, however, subject to the limits and prohibitions of the federal campaign finance laws.

The Democratic National Committee may spend an additional $13,680,292 for coordinated expenditures on behalf of the Gore-Lieberman campaign. These funds are subject to the limits, prohibitions and disclosure requirements of the Federal Election Campaign Act. ♦

Public Funding for Buchanan-Foster

On September 14, 2000, the Federal Election Commission approved public funding for the general election campaign of Reform Party Presidential candidate Patrick J. Buchanan and his running mate Ezola Foster. The U.S. Treasury Department made the payment of $12,613,452 in federal funds shortly thereafter. Mr. Buchanan was eligible to receive the funds as the candidate of a minor party. To qualify as a minor party, a party's Presidential candidate must have received at least 5 percent of the popular vote in the prior Presidential general election.

As minor party candidates, Mr. Buchanan and Ms. Foster are entitled to partial public funding, based on the amount certified to each major party candidate ($67.56 million). The portion that Mr. Buchanan received is based on the ratio of the Reform Party's popular vote in the preceding Presidential election to the average popular vote of the two major party candidates in that election. In this case, Ross Perot, the Reform Party candidate in 1996, received 8.4 percent of the popular vote.

In order to receive funding in a given election, the minor party's nominees must provide evidence showing that they have qualified to appear on the ballot as the candidate of that party in at least 10 states.

Pre-election minor party funding has only occurred once before, in 1996, when Mr. Perot received $29,055,400 based on his vote from the 1992 general election.

Under the Presidential Election Campaign Fund Act, Presidential candidates who accept public funding must agree to a $67.56 million spending limit for the general election and a $50,000 limit on their use of personal funds to support their campaign. Minor party candidates may accept contributions up to an amount equaling the difference between the federal funds they receive and the spending limit. These candidates may also accept contributions to their general election legal and accounting fund (GELAC fund). This fund is a special account maintained exclusively to pay for legal and accounting expenses related to complying with the campaign finance law. Compliance expenses do not count toward the expenditure limit, but they are subject to the contribution limits and prohibitions of the Federal Election Campaign Act (the FECA).

The Reform Party may spend an additional $13,680,292 for coordinated expenditures on behalf of the Buchanan-Foster campaign. These funds are also subject to the limits, prohibitions and disclosure requirements of the FECA. For more information on the Reform Party's eligibility for public funding, see the January 2000 Record, p. 16. ♦

August Matching Fund Payments

On August 31, 2000, the Commission certified $1,000,080.32 in matching funds to six Presidential candidates. The U.S. Treasury Department made the payments the first day of September.

With these latest certifications, the FEC has now declared ten candidates eligible to receive a total of $59,989,411.85 in federal matching funds for the 2000 election. The above chart lists the most recent certifications and cumulative certifications (and payments) for each candidate. ♦

Revised National Mail Voter Registration

On August 8, 2000, the Commission approved changes to the state information in the national voter registration form for Alaska, California, Connecticut, Hawaii, Louisiana and Michigan. The Commission also approved a procedural change that allows the Office of Election Administration (the OEA) to make such changes more rapidly in the future. Instead of requesting a formal Commission vote approving the update of state information, the OEA will make the changes and notify the Commission of them. The OEA will, however, continue to submit for a formal Commission vote any changes to the form that are not specific to a given state. ♦

¹ Nonconnected PACs must use their own funds to pay fundraising and administrative expenses, while the other categories of PACs have corporate or labor "connected organizations" that are permitted to pay those expenses for their PACs. On the other hand, nonconnected PACs may solicit contributions from the general public, while solicitations by corporate and labor PACs are restricted.

² During the first six months of 1997, 227 PACs were administratively terminated because of inactivity.

Campaign Guides Available!

It has been brought to our attention that many committees do not have copies of the Campaign Guides – the single most valuable tool available to committees.

For each type of committee, a Campaign Guide explains, in clear English, the complex regulations regarding the activity of political committees. It shows readers, for example, how to fill out FEC reports and illustrates how the law applies to practical situations.

We publish four Campaign Guides, each for a different type of committee, and are happy to mail your committee as many copies as you need, free of charge. We encourage you to view them on our Web site (go to www.fec.gov, then click on “Campaign Finance Law Resources” and then scroll down to “Publications”).

If you would like to place an order for paper copies of the Campaign Guides, please call 800-424-9530, or return the form below by mail.
