

CENTCOM ACTD OVERVIEW
Talking Points – Executive Summary❖ Defense Science Study Group (30 Jul 04)

- Fourteen PH.Ds with various degrees, however the majority specialize in computer science or medial fields.
- The course is run by the Institute for Defense Analysis (IDA).
- The group is mentored by several retired four and three star general officers.
- Objective of the course is to expose leading civilian scientist to DoD operations and requirements.

❖ What to Expect:

- The briefing is informational.
 - Provides an overview on the Advanced Technology Concept Demonstration (ACTD) process.
 - Reviews CENTCOM internal ACTD process.
 - Provides current and completed CENTCOM ACTDs.
 - Looks at selected FY05 ACTD candidates.
- Questions should center on how do they get their projects/expertise into the ACTD processes.
- Based on the composition of the study group questions should center on computer technology and medical projects.

❖ Things to Stress:

- ACTDs are a method to quickly get state-of-the-art technology into the hands of the warfighter.
- We need information technology to:
 - Allow for data sharing across distributed multi-INT databases.
 - Allow for data accessibility/exchange capabilities across multiple domains, security levels, and coalition partners.
 - Increased data throughput—a function of bandwidth and data compression.
- We need medical technology to:
 - Provide stand-off detection of chemical and biological threats.
 - Rapidly examine soldiers for presence of biological agents or diseases in the field.
