Presentation Overview: This presentation is designed to inform participants of the benefits of strategic social media exploitation for law enforcement purposes and to introduce a variety of tools for exploiting social media and other open source information. The presentation includes the results of an experiment using real-time social media exploitation during a tactical operation by the Baltimore Field Division. A variety of websites that offer social media search, alert and aggregation tools, as well as content analytics and visualization, are presented and discussed. A hand-out is provided with a list of such websites, including a link and a description for each.

Instructor Information: Christine Gribble is a Program Analyst at ATF Headquarters in the Firearms Operations Division, Criminal Groups and Gangs Branch. She is currently detailed to the Criminal Intelligence Division to develop and deliver ATF's first Social Media Exploitation course. She has over six years of experience in evaluating ATF programs, including Violent Crime Impact Teams (VCIT), Project Gunrunner and Gunrunner Impact Teams (GRITs). Christine has over 200 hours of open source intelligence and analysis training provided by the Director of National Intelligence (DNI) and Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). She has received the most current training available from the DNI's Open Source Academy in Social Media Analysis and Collection. She has applied her knowledge and skills in this area in direct support of ATF's mission and is continuing to research and develop ATF's social media exploitation program.
