MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR
WASHINGTON, D.C.

It is my pleasure to present the United States Attorneys' Annual Statistical Report for Fiscal Year 2011. The report contains statistical tables displaying both national and district caseload data. These priorities represent just some of the many important areas of criminal prosecution and civil litigation handled by the United States Attorneys. The work of enforcing our federal laws and keeping our nation safe is more important than ever. The women and men of the United States Attorneys' offices are committed to enforcing these laws and representing the interests of the United States. The role of the United States Attorneys is to see "that justice shall be done," (Berger v. United States, 295 U.S. 88 (1935)), and accordingly, while statistics can provide a quantitative measure, they fail to capture the true spirit and accomplishments of the United States Attorneys.

I hope that you will find the United States Attorneys' Annual Statistical Report to be both interesting and useful. It provides a concise yet compelling sampling of the accomplishments of the United States Attorneys during Fiscal Year 2011. The women and men of the United States Attorneys' offices did a commendable job during the year. It is my great privilege to share this information with you and to congratulate the United States Attorneys, Assistant United States Attorneys, and their staffs for such a successful year.

H. Marshall Jarrett
Director

ORGANIZATION

The United States Attorneys serve as the nation's principal litigators. There are 93 United States Attorneys located throughout the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands. The United States Attorneys are appointed by, and serve at the discretion of, the President of the United States, with the advice and consent of the United States Senate. They report to the Attorney General, through the Deputy Attorney General. One United States Attorney is appointed to serve in each of the 94 federal judicial districts, with the exception of Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands, where a single United States Attorney serves both districts. Each United States Attorney serves as the chief federal law enforcement officer within his or her judicial district.

MISSION

- The prosecution of criminal cases brought by the Federal Government;
- The litigation and defense of civil cases in which the United States is a party;
- The handling of criminal and civil appellate cases before the United States Courts of Appeals;
- The collection of debts owed the Federal Government that are administratively uncollectible; and
- The role of liaison with federal, state, local, and tribal law enforcement officers, and with members of the community on various crime reduction programs.

The Executive Office for United States Attorneys (EOUSA) provides general executive assistance and supervision to the offices of the United States Attorneys.

EOUSA MISSION

- Evaluating the performance of the Offices of the United States Attorneys and taking corrective action;
- Policy development;
- Management direction and oversight for budgetary, personnel, and other administrative issues;
- Operational support;
- Coordinating and directing the relationship of the United States Attorneys' offices with other components of the Department and other federal agencies; and
- Supervising the Office of Legal Education to develop training of all Federal legal personnel.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS

The United States Attorneys' offices investigate and prosecute a wide range of criminal activities. The United States Attorneys are called upon to respond to changing priorities, and to become involved in specific crime reduction programs. The number one priority of the United States Attorneys is the prevention of terrorist acts, and the investigation and prosecution of those involved in terrorist attacks. During Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys also continued their longstanding commitment to address violent crime, the illegal use of firearms, and the accompanying acts of violence in our communities. Other special emphasis areas included civil rights violations, human trafficking, financial fraud, crimes against children, and victims of hate crimes.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURTS

- During Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys' offices received 163,908 criminal matters. This represents a decrease of 2,928, or two percent, in the number of criminal referrals received from law enforcement agencies, when compared to the prior year. The total number of criminal matters received includes immediate declinations, later declinations, and investigations initiated.
- After review, the offices declined a total of 25,102 criminal matters during the year. See Tables 14 and 15. As reflected on Tables 14 and 15, the reasons most commonly reported for the declination of these matters included lack of criminal intent, weak or insufficient evidence, suspect to be prosecuted by another authority or on other charges, agency request, and minimal federal interest.
- At the end of Fiscal Year 2011, a total of 80,089 criminal matters were pending, an increase of 1,577, or two percent, when compared to the prior year. Of these, 7,366, or nine percent, were matters where the defendant was a fugitive, was in a Pre-trial Diversion Program, was in a mental institution, or was unknown. See Table 10. Regarding all pending matters, 50,409, or 63 percent, had been pending for 24 months or less, and 59,281, or 74 percent, for 36 months or less, as of the end of the fiscal year.
- During Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys' offices filed 68,926 criminal cases against 93,920 defendants in United States District Courts. See Criminal Chart 2.1 and Table 1. This represents a less than one percent increase in the number of cases filed and a three percent increase in the number of defendants filed when compared to the prior year.

The grand jury, a body of 16 to 23 citizens, functions to determine whether there is probable cause to believe a person has committed a criminal offense. An Assistant United States Attorney's responsibility is to advise the grand jury on the law and to present evidence for the grand jury's consideration. The grand jurors decide whether to return an indictment. In instances where more information is required, the grand jury can issue subpoenas to obtain additional evidence.

- The United States Attorneys' offices handled a total of 46,662 criminal matters during Fiscal Year 2011 in which grand jury proceedings were conducted, representing a one percent decrease when compared to the previous year.
- See Criminal Chart 2.2 for a display of criminal cases filed by program category, or case type, for Fiscal Years 2010 and 2011. Criminal Chart 2.2 does not include United States Magistrate Court or appellate cases.
- A total of 68,668 cases against 90,461 defendants were also terminated during Fiscal Year 2011, representing a one percent increase in the number of cases terminated and a less than two percent increase in the number of defendants terminated, when compared to the prior year.
- A total of 3,051, or three percent, of the terminated defendants went to trial. This represents a less than one percent decrease in the number of defendants tried when compared to the prior year. See Table 2.
- Of the 90,461 defendants terminated during Fiscal Year 2011, 83,860, or 93 percent, either pled guilty or were found guilty. See Table 3. The rate of conviction remained over 90 percent, as it has since Fiscal Year 2001.
- During Fiscal Year 2011, a total of 81,228, or 97 percent, of all convicted defendants pled guilty prior to or during trial. This represents a less than one percent increase in the percentage of convicted defendants who pled guilty when compared to the prior year.

- As of the end of Fiscal Year 2011, 74,321 criminal cases against 115,791 defendants were pending. This represents a one percent increase in the number of cases pending and a three percent increase in the number of defendants pending, when compared to the prior year. See Table 1.
- Of the 74,321 pending criminal cases, 44,881, or 60 percent, had been pending for 24 months or less, and 50,921, or 69 percent, had been pending for 36 months or less. See Table 11. In 20 percent of pending cases the defendant was a fugitive, was in a mental institution, or was in a Pre-trial Diversion Program.

Of the 83,860 defendants who either pled guilty or were found guilty during the fiscal year, 66,955, or 80 percent, received prison sentences. A total of 180 guilty defendants received sentences of life in prison during Fiscal Year 2011.

UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE COURT

- In addition to those criminal cases filed in the United States District Courts, the United States Attorneys also handle a considerable criminal caseload that is filed in the United States Magistrate Courts. Congress created the judicial office of Federal Magistrate in 1968. The United States district judges in each district appoint magistrate judges, who discharge many of the ancillary duties of the United States district judges. The utilization of magistrate judges varies from district to district in response to local conditions and changing caseloads.
- Magistrate judges are authorized by statute to perform a variety of duties as assigned by the United States District Courts, including presiding over misdemeanor trials, conducting preliminary hearings, and entering rulings or recommended dispositions on pretrial motions. Influenced by the Civil Justice Reform Act of 1990, expanding caseloads, and tightening fiscal constraints, the United States District Courts continue to find new, innovative ways to use magistrate judges. The flexibility of the magistrate judge system was further enhanced in 1996 by the Federal Courts Improvement Act which abolished, for certain petty offenses, the requirement that defendants consent to adjudication by a magistrate judge and allowed defendants in other misdemeanor cases to give their consent orally. In order to meet the dictates of the Speedy Trial Act, courts are referring an increasing number of motions, hearings, and conferences in felony cases to magistrate judges.
- In addition to those cases filed and handled in United States District Courts, the United States Attorneys filed criminal cases against 71,387 defendants in United States Magistrate Courts during Fiscal Year 2011. This represents a decrease of three percent when compared to the prior year. See Table 1. A total of 67,039 defendants were also terminated during the year, which represents a decrease of six percent when compared to Fiscal Year 2010. As of the end of Fiscal Year 2011, criminal cases against 23,681 defendants were pending in United States Magistrate Courts, representing an increase of less than one percent when compared to the number of defendants pending at the end of Fiscal Year 2010. See Table 1.
- Of the defendants terminated in United States Magistrate Courts during Fiscal Year 2011, 1,064, or two percent, were terminated after a court or jury trial. See Table 2A. This represents a decrease of 142 defendants terminated by trial, or 12 percent, when compared to the prior year.

1791 The 1st United States Congress grants the right of a speedy trial

1968 Congress creates the judicial office of Federal Magistrate to help with changing caseloads

1990 Civil Justice Reform Act requires each federal district court to appoint an advisory group to aid utilization of judges

1996 Federal Courts improvement Act abolishes the requirement that defendants consent to adjudication by a magistrate judge

2011 U.S. Attorneys file criminal cases against 71,387 defendants in magistrate court

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SUPERIOR COURT

- The United States Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia also bears responsibility for the prosecution of criminal cases in the District of Columbia Superior Court. The Superior Court Division of the United States Attorney's Office prosecutes adults (including juveniles charged as adults) charged with criminal violations of the District of Columbia Code. The vast majority of these cases are presented to the United States Attorney's Office as arrests by the Metropolitan Police Department. The Superior Court Division is comprised of four litigation sections: the General Crimes Section; the Felony Major Crimes Section; the Sex Offense/Domestic Violence Section; and the Homicide Section.
- While violent crime and weapon offenses continued to be the primary focus of the Superior Court Division, some of the workload reflected cases brought as a result of a variety of initiatives including: Community Prosecution; Project Safe Neighborhoods; Human Trafficking Initiative; Community Court; Drug Court; and a number of domestic violence programs. Problem solving, rather than mere case processing, also continued to be a goal. The high number of dismissals in misdemeanor cases in part reflects the growing trend towards the use of alternative dispositions (mediation, diversion, community service, etc.) in lower level, quality-of-life offenses.

- The following data details the Superior Court Division's caseload during Fiscal Year 2011. This data is not included in the other charts and tables contained in this report.

ASSET FORFEITURE LITIGATION

The federal asset forfeiture laws and regulations are powerful law enforcement tools that serve several important purposes. First, they deter criminal activity by taking the profit out of crime, depriving criminals of their illegal proceeds and instrumentalities. Second, they are used to restore funds to victims. And finally, forfeited monies and property are used by federal law enforcement agencies, and the state, local, and international law enforcement agencies that work with those federal agencies in investigating and prosecuting federal criminal activity, for a variety of law enforcement purposes such as equipment, training, investigative expenses, purchase of evidence, and drug and gang awareness programs.

- As reflected on Table 16, at the end of Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys' offices had 5,741 criminal asset forfeiture cases pending, representing an increase of seven percent when compared to Fiscal Year 2010, and 2,840 civil asset forfeiture cases pending, representing a three percent increase over Fiscal Year 2010. The United States Attorneys also obtained final forfeiture orders in 3,595 criminal cases and disposed of 1,788 civil forfeiture cases in Fiscal Year 2011, representing a seven percent increase and a less than one percent decrease, respectively, when compared to Fiscal Year 2010.

The United States Attorneys' offices use both criminal and civil asset forfeiture laws which are available for almost all serious federal offenses. Whether through civil or criminal proceedings, the laws governing asset forfeiture provide due process to all persons claiming an interest in the property.

CIVIL LITIGATION

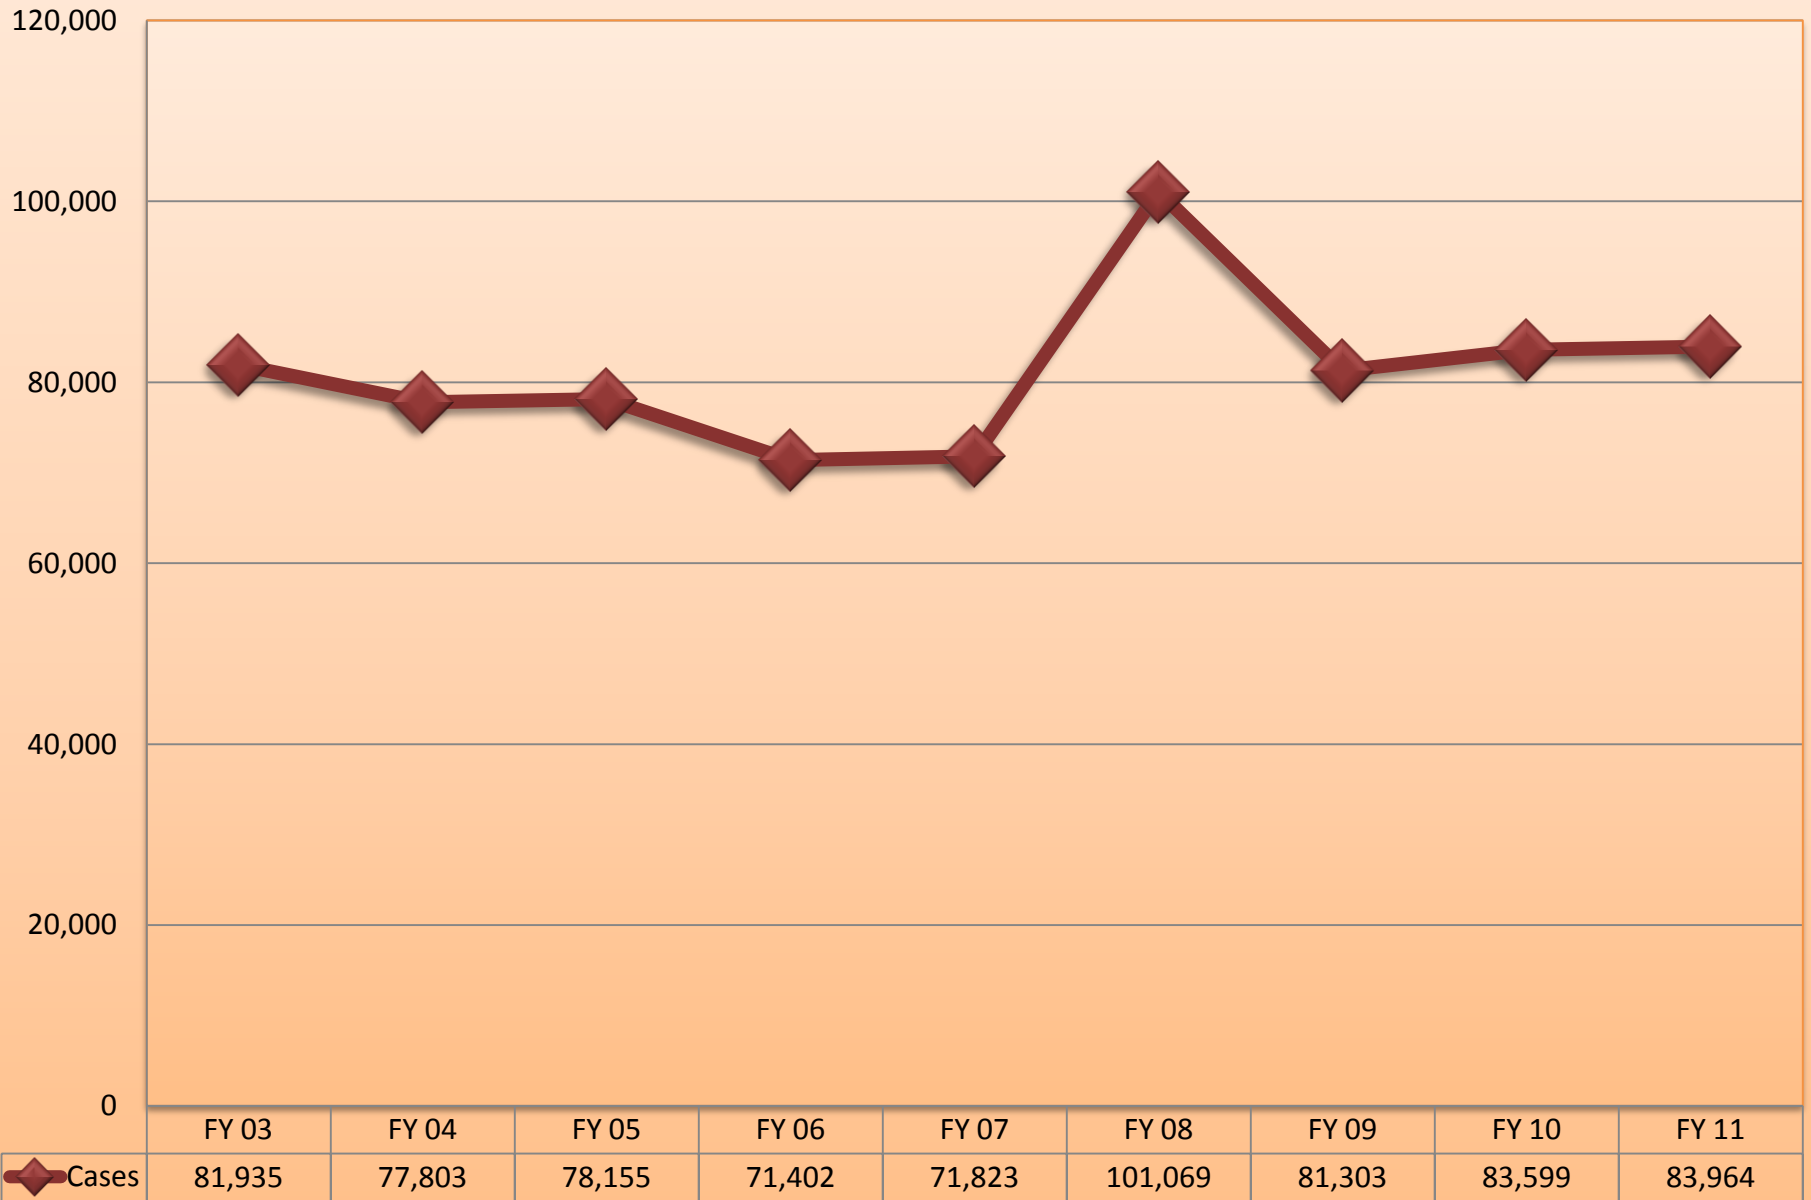

Civil litigation by the United States Attorneys arises in various contexts: affirmative litigation, in which the United States, as plaintiff, initiates actions to assert and protect government interests; defensive litigation, in which the United States, as defendant, protects its interests in lawsuits filed against the government; bankruptcy litigation, in which the United States is a creditor, an intervener, a party in interest, or is otherwise involved in a bankruptcy matter; and a variety of other matters, not easily categorized, in which the United States has an interest and which require the expertise of civil attorneys.

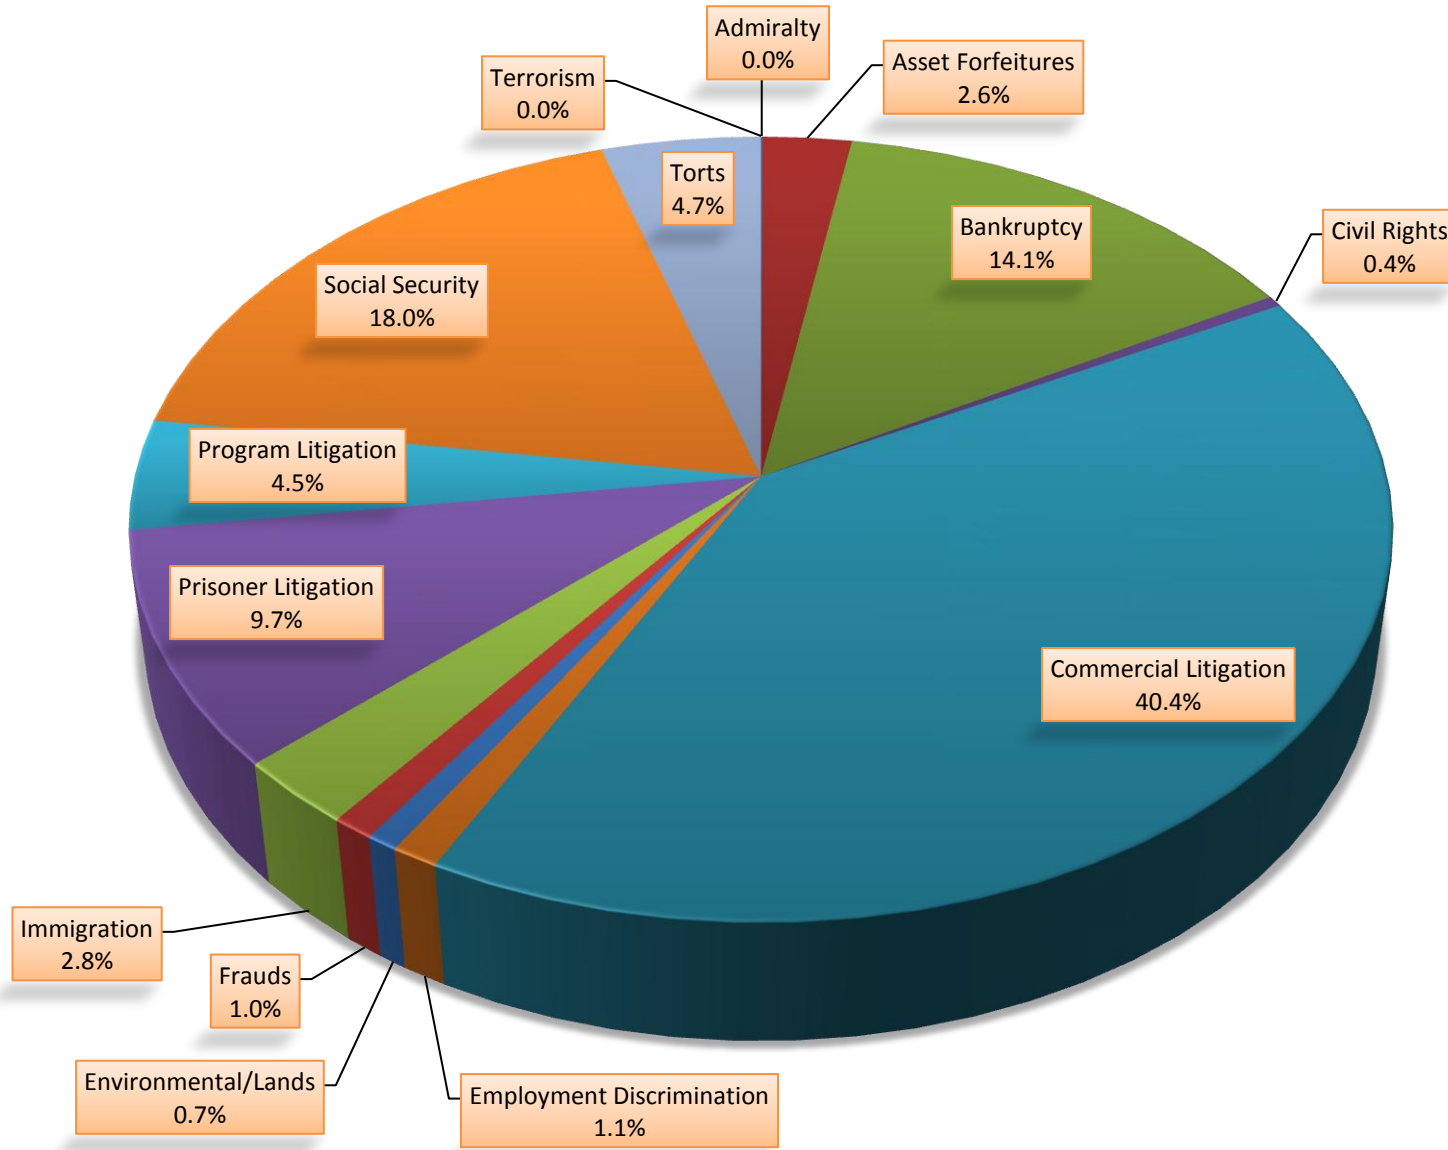

- During Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys' offices received a total of 93,685 civil matters. The majority of civil matters received during the year were from components of the Internal Revenue Service, the Department of Justice, and Department of Housing and Urban Development. See Table 6. Of the matters received, 11,395, or 12 percent, were affirmative matters, 64,888, or 69 percent, were defensive matters, and 17,402, or 19 percent were other civil matters. During that same period, the United States Attorneys' offices terminated a total of 8,659 matters. United States Attorneys terminate civil matters for a variety of reasons, including when settlements are reached with the opposing party, when referrals are made for agency actions, and when declinations are appropriate.
- Civil matters and cases represent a significant portion of the United States Attorneys' caseload. As of the end of Fiscal Year 2011, there was a total of 122,884 pending civil matters and cases, representing 44 percent of the 277,294 total pending criminal and civil matters and cases in the United States Attorneys' offices. Of those pending civil matters and cases, 16,975, or 14 percent, were affirmative litigation, 90,407, or 74 percent, were defensive litigation, and 15,502, or 13 percent, were other civil cases and matters handled by the United States Attorneys. See Table 5.
- While the pending civil matters and cases represent a diverse range, 81 percent of these matters and cases were classified as bankruptcy, commercial litigation, prisoner litigation, program litigation, and social security. See Table 5. The data on Table 5 does not reflect case complexity, and, as with any statistical representation of workload, cannot paint an accurate picture of the time and effort required to investigate and litigate these matters and cases. For example, matters and cases in the areas of asset forfeiture, employment discrimination, civil rights, constitutional torts, and fraud are some of the most complex cases handled by the United States Attorneys' offices, and represent only 16 percent of all pending matters and cases. These matters and cases may involve months of investigation, depositions, discovery, and lengthy trials. Conversely, a tax lien case may involve one short appearance before a judge. Nonetheless, each matter or case is treated the same for statistical purposes.

- A total of 14,350 civil matters were pending at the end of Fiscal Year 2011. Of these pending matters, 4,489, or 31 percent, had been pending for less than six months, 6,856, or 48 percent, had been pending for less than 12 months, and 9,536, or 66 percent, had been pending for less than 24 months. See Table 12.
- During Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys' offices filed or responded to a total of 83,964 civil cases, an increase of less than one percent when compared to the prior year. Civil cases filed or responded to during the year were from various agencies including components of the Department of Justice, the Internal Revenue Service, and the Department of Homeland Security. See Table 6 and Chart 4.1.
- Of the 83,964 civil cases filed or responded to by the United States, 5,534 or seven percent, were affirmative civil cases, 64,337, or 77 percent, were defensive civil cases, and 14,093, or 17 percent, were other civil cases. Also during Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys' offices terminated a total of 81,245 cases. Judgments were issued in 28,118, or 35 percent, of these cases. A total of 20,558, or 73 percent, of these judgments were in favor of the United States. Additionally, 11,298, or 14 percent, of the cases were settled. See Table 5.
- A total of 108,534 civil cases were pending at the end of Fiscal Year 2011. Of these pending cases, 32,241 or 30 percent, had been pending for less than six months, 54,627, or 50 percent, had been pending for less than 12 months, and 80,666, or 74 percent, had been pending for less than 24 months. See Table 13.
- Civil Chart 4.2 displays civil cases filed or responded to by cause of action, or case type, during Fiscal Years 2010 and 2011.

CRIMINAL AND CIVIL APPEALS

Criminal Appeals

- Appeals, in general, are time consuming, requiring a thorough review of the entire record in the case, the filing of a brief and reply brief, and in many cases, participation in an oral argument. Furthermore, the complexity of appellate work and the time required to handle that work increases when convictions are based on complex facts such as those found in organized crime, organized crime drug enforcement, financial institution fraud, armed career criminal, public corruption, health care fraud, and computer fraud cases.
- Criminal appeals involve both defensive and affirmative litigation, in which the government responds to defendants' appeals from their convictions and sentences, and appeals adverse orders suppressing evidence, dismissing counts of indictments, and granting new trials. During Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys handled a total of 8,673 criminal appeals filed by or against the United States, representing a one percent decrease when compared to Fiscal Year 2010.
- A total of 9,483 appeals were terminated during Fiscal Year 2011, representing a less than one percent increase in the number of appeals terminated when compared to the prior year. The United States Courts of Appeals ruled in favor of the United States in 8,074, or 93 percent, of the appeals terminated during the year. See Table 7.

The largest category of criminal appeals filed during Fiscal Year 2011 was narcotics, which accounted for 2,742, or 32 percent, of all criminal appeals filed during the year. See Appeals Chart 5.1. Other large categories of criminal appeals included violent crime, with 2,471 appeals filed in Fiscal Year 2011, and immigration, with 1,530 appeals filed during the fiscal year.

Civil Appeals

- During Fiscal Year 2011, the United States Attorneys' offices handled a total of 3,527 civil appeals filed by or against the United States. This represents a decrease of four percent in the number of appeals handled when compared to the prior year.
- The United States Attorneys terminated 4,192 civil appeals during the year, a decrease of 15 percent when compared to the prior year. Of the appeals terminated during the year, 3,256, or 78 percent, were decided in favor of the United States. See Table 7.

CENTRALIZED ALL DEBT COLLECTION INFORMATION FROM PREVIOUSLY USED DEBT COLLECTION SYSTEMS.

* DATA FOR THE DISTRICTS OF GUAM AND NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS ARE COMBINED.
