The privacy risks associated with the PII collected are the unauthorized release of PII data. These risks are addressed by protecting the data collection resource with strong SSL encryption, programmatically restricting the system from releasing PII data through its interfaces, through strong SSL encryption with CAC of PII released to partner agencies under the routine use guidelines authorized in the Privacy Act SORN, through periodic Information Assurance certification of personnelists with access to the PII, and through access control restricted by CAC to internal network personnelists whose job functions require access to PII.
