This booklet should be used together with other booklets of the Comptroller's Corporate Manual. Users of this booklet should refer to the "General Policies and Procedures" (GPP) booklet for discussion of general filing instructions and procedures. Users should also refer to the "Business Combinations" booklet, if the bank will liquidate after combining with another national bank.

Background

This booklet covers the termination of national bank status when a bank wishes to relinquish its national bank charter. This occurs through a voluntary liquidation, a conversion to a state bank or federal savings association charter, or a merger or consolidation with a non-national depository institution.<sup>1</sup>

A bank that wishes to terminate its status as a national bank must give notice and return certain documents to the OCC before the termination is effective. This booklet contains the policies and procedures to guide national banks on terminating their status.

In an effort to reduce the burden and clarify the steps required to terminate a national bank's status, the OCC recently amended its corporate regulations 12 CFR 5 and revised 12 CFR 5.48 (voluntary liquidation). The regulation reduced the burden of dissolving banks remaining after a whole-bank purchase and assumption (P&A) transaction.

Applicability

A bank considering the termination of its national bank status must notify the OCC. A national bank undergoing a voluntary liquidation also must file a notice with the OCC once the liquidation plan is definite. A national bank may liquidate voluntarily in accordance with 12 USC 181 and 182.

A bank may convert to or be acquired by a state bank or federal savings association in accordance with 12 USC 214a - 214c, 321, and 1828(c). Although the OCC is not the approving regulator for those transactions, a national bank must follow certain procedures before its status is terminated.

Key Policies

A bank may convert or enter into a merger, consolidation, or P&A transaction that results in the termination of its national bank status without prior OCC approval, unless the acquiring and resulting institution is another national bank. The OCC, however, requires notice and return of the national bank's charter certificate (or copy), and, if applicable, any branch authorizations and trust permit (or copies). Additionally, all OCC reports of examination, and any related correspondence, must be shredded or returned. CRA Public Performance Evaluations are public documents, not reports of examination, and need not be shredded or returned.

Summary of Process

The OCC monitors the bank's termination process to ensure its compliance with applicable statutes, particularly those pertaining to shareholder rights and voluntary liquidation.

A bank that considers the termination of its national bank status must notify the OCC. If the termination will be a voluntary liquidation, the bank must submit a notice to the appropriate licensing manager and publish a public notice after its shareholders have voted for the liquidation. After the bank begins to liquidate its assets and liabilities, it submits an annual progress report to the OCC. The liquidating bank also continues to submit quarterly Consolidated Reports of Condition and Income (call reports).

If termination occurs through a conversion, merger, or consolidation with a non-national bank depository institution, the national bank submits notice to the appropriate licensing manager and complies with 12 USC 214a - 214c, 215c, 1828(c), and 12 CFR 5.33(g)(3), as applicable.

The termination of national bank status is completed after the bank returns all applicable OCC certificates, permits, and reports. At that time, the OCC inactivates the bank as a national bank.

Specific Requirements

Expedited Liquidation in Acquisitions

The OCC permits an expedited liquidation when the acquiring depository institution purchases all the assets and assumes all the liabilities, including contingent liabilities, of a target national bank. The remaining shell national bank may be dissolved immediately after the combination. However, if the target national bank will retain any liabilities, it must follow the standard liquidation procedures. In either case, the acquiring depository institution must comply with the Bank Merger Act (12 USC 1828(c)).

An expedited liquidation process is available in a P&A transaction, if:

- The national bank has notified the appropriate licensing manager of its plans at the same time that the application to be acquired by another depository institution is filed with the other regulatory agency.
- Two-thirds of the national bank's shareholders have voted to liquidate.
- The acquiring depository institution certifies to the OCC that it has purchased all the assets and assumed all the liabilities, including contingent liabilities, of the liquidating national bank.
- The acquiring depository institution and the national bank in liquidation have published notice that the bank will dissolve after the P&A transaction. Joint names of all banks involved should be included in the notice for the P&A required to be published under the Bank Merger Act and 12 CFR 5.33, if appropriate. (See the GPP and "Business Combinations" booklets for instructions on public notices.)

Conversion from the National Banking System

A national bank may convert to a state bank or a federal savings association without prior OCC approval. However, a converting national bank must notify the OCC when it first requests approval from the appropriate authorities to convert. At that time, the OCC will provide information about how to terminate its national bank status (see Procedures—Standard).

Termination of national bank status occurs when the conversion is consummated and after the appropriate licensing manager receives all applicable OCC certificates, permits, and reports. The conversion may be consummated after the bank completes the requirements of 12 USC 214a and/or 12 CFR 5.24.

Merger or Consolidation with Non-National Bank Resulting

A national bank may merge into or consolidate with another non-national depository institution without prior OCC approval. However, the merging or consolidating national bank must notify the OCC when it first requests approval from the appropriate authorities to merge or consolidate. At that time, the OCC will provide it with information about how to terminate its national bank status (see Procedures—Standard).

Termination of national bank status occurs when the merger or acquisition is consummated and after the appropriate licensing manager receives all applicable OCC certificates, permits, and reports. The merger or acquisition may be consummated after the bank completes the requirements of 12 USC 214a, 1828(c), and/or 12 CFR 5.33(g)(3).

Voluntary Liquidation Standard

A national bank that wishes to liquidate voluntarily does so in accordance with the terms of 12 USC 181 and 182. The bank must notify each shareholder of the meeting to consider a resolution for voluntary liquidation in the manner provided in its Articles of Association. Shareholders owning two-thirds of the bank's stock must approve the liquidation. If a bank has issued preferred stock, it should follow the provisions of the Articles of Association for the required vote to place it in liquidation (12 USC 51b and 51b-1). Shares of capital stock held by any holding company affiliated with the liquidating bank may be voted without obtaining permission from the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

The OCC recommends that shareholders' meetings be recessed, subject to recall, when further shareholder participation is required.

Shareholders must appoint a liquidating agent or committee (jointly, "agent") to conduct the liquidation. If a committee is appointed, a correspondent should be named. A national or state bank that lacks fiduciary powers may not act as liquidating agent. The board of directors supervises the bank's liquidation through the agent. The agent posts a bond in favor of the bank in an amount that the bank's board of directors deems adequate, after it considers the nature and value of the assets to be liquidated. The chairman of the board of directors, or a designee who is not the agent, holds the bond. No additional bond is required, if the bank in liquidation is a wholly owned subsidiary, and the liquidating committee is composed entirely of holding company officers who are covered under a banker's blanket bond. Shareholders may remove the agent at any time and appoint one or more other persons by a majority vote.

The resolutions adopted to liquidate voluntarily must specify the date and hour on which the liquidation is to commence. The commencement date of the liquidation cannot precede the date on which the resolutions are adopted by the shareholders, even though the bank already may have discontinued regular business and been absorbed by another institution.

Whenever a national bank exercising fiduciary powers is in voluntary liquidation, the agent shall liquidate in accordance with 12 USC 92a(j) and 12 CFR 9.

Notice and Publication

After shareholders' approval to liquidate, the bank must file a notice of liquidation with the appropriate licensing manager and publish it daily for two months in a local newspaper. If only weekly publication is available, the notice must be published for nine consecutive weeks. The notice must announce that the bank is closing its affairs, and that creditors should present their claims for payment. The first publication of the liquidation notice should appear on or before the date the liquidation commences.

Reports

The liquidating bank must submit a report of the condition of its commercial, trust, and other departments to the appropriate licensing manager as of the date it begins voluntary liquidation. The bank also must continue to file its quarterly call reports, until the liquidation is completed.

Annually, as of December 31, the agent must submit a "Report of Progress of Liquidation" to the appropriate licensing manager. This annual submission continues until the liquidation is completed.

The bank's liquidating agent must notify the licensing manager when the liquidation is completed, returning to the OCC the charter certificate, and if applicable, any branch authorizations or trust permit (or copies). The agent also must certify that all OCC reports of examination were destroyed.

Additionally, the agent must report annually to the shareholders at their annual meeting, until the liquidation is completed.

Examination and Field Investigation

The OCC may perform examinations or field investigations, until the claims of all creditors have been satisfied and the liquidation process is completed. The bank is responsible for the cost of any examination under 12 CFR 5.7 and 8.6.

The OCC imposes assessments on a national bank until the voluntary liquidation is completed.
