

Consumer Reporting Agencies

Below is a list of consumer reporting companies – companies that collect information and provide reports on consumers that are used to decide whether to provide consumers credit, insurance, or employment, and for other purposes. This list doesn't cover every company in the industry. It's a list of companies that have identified themselves as consumer reporting companies or provide consumers access to their consumer reports. The list includes both the biggest nationwide credit reporting companies and a longer list of "specialty reporting companies." Presence on or absence from the list does not indicate whether the consumer reporting company is subject to the CFPB's supervisory or enforcement authority.

Specialty reporting companies focus on certain industries. There are a lot of these companies on the list. So we're also trying to give tips on which of them may be important to you. The list also includes information about how you can obtain copies of your reports. In addition to the information below about when you can get a free copy of your report, under federal law all consumer reporting companies must provide you with a copy of your report for a reasonable fee (the current maximum is $11.50).

This list includes entities that have identified themselves as consumer reporting companies or particular types of consumer reporting companies or have indicated when they provide consumers access to their consumer reports. The list incorporates information from the companies' own self-descriptions that has not been independently verified by the Bureau. It is not intended by the Bureau to be an all-inclusive list, nor does it reflect any determinations by the Bureau as to whether any particular entity is or is not subject to the Fair Credit Reporting Act or any part thereof or complying with it. Furthermore, presence on or absence from the list does not indicate whether the consumer reporting company is subject to the CFPB's supervisory authority.
