Draft EIS nears completion; release delayed

The draft EIS will not be ready to publish this spring, as we had expected at the time of our last project update. Over the last few months we have been completing the analysis and making sure that we consider public input we received. We have also been working with federal and state agencies to further assess environmental issues and ensure the most thorough environmental analysis possible. This review helps us make a well informed decision about whether, and where, to build a new line and substations.

We will announce a new project schedule once we know more. We understand that this uncertainty may affect you and we appreciate your patience as we evaluate all aspects of this project.

For information about the project and the work we are doing now, visit our website www.bpa.gov/go/i5.
