and territorial agreements approach, such issues are likely to receive the most attention, administration officials said yesterday.

Arafat seized on the opening offered by a come-one, come-all invitation from Clinton that broke a long taboo on contact with leaders of the organization.

Rabin accepted an invitation after midnight yesterday when Christopher called to urge him to attend. Arafat is scheduled to arrive in Washington this evening. Rabin is expected in the early morning hours Monday.

The attendance of the two adds more drama to an event that has consumed most of the White House since its announcement on Friday. Pennsylvania Avenue NW will be closed for several blocks Monday morning as about 2,500 people crowd through the White House gates and onto the South Lawn for the hourlong signing ceremony that begins at 11 a.m.

The ceremony will be televised live in almost 100 countries. Anchors from the three major U.S. networks and CNN will broadcast live from the White House as well, making much of the world witness to the historic moment.

As U.S., Israeli and Palestinian officials spent much of yesterday working out the details of the cer-emony, the White House was flooded with calls of acceptance. Officials are working on the seating, the security and the complicated protocol of welcoming to the White House two former presidents; dozens of foreign ministers; virtually all members of Congress; former secretaries of state; leaders of the American Arab and Jewish communities; leaders of the U.S. labor movement, which has long supported Israel; friends of the Clintons; officials who worked on the original Camp David peace accords in the Carter administration and on the Madrid talks in the Bush administration.

Symbolizing hope for the future, about 60 Palestinian and Israeli teenagers, already in the United States on a study project, also have been invited to the South Lawn to witness the signing. The number of invitees amounts to a full house at the White House, where officials warned of extraordinarily tight security. "This is an international situation where a lot of enmity runs deep," said one official. "We will allow no chances with security."

In Houston yesterday, the president welcomed the decisions of Arafat and Rabin to attend. On Monday, Israel and the PLO will come to the White House to sign a courageous and historic peace accord, the first step in replacing war with peace and giving the children of the Middle East a chance to grow up to a normal life," he told reporters.

life." he told reporters.

Clinton said he was "very excited" by the prospect. "I think it will heighten the atmosphere and reinforce the determination for peace," he added.

At the White House, a sense of the history of the moment mixed yesterday with controlled hysteria. "This whole thing, it is just wild, it is just unbelievable," said one young aide who was in high school when Carter hosted the signing of the Camp David accords more than a decade ago. Aides there have been viewing videotapes of that signing ceremony and reading news accounts of the event, the last of such impact at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Arafat is likely to be the object of the most intense curiosity. The mercurial survivor of a host of setbacks, he has come to embody both the frustrations and perseverance of the Palestinian nationalist cause. Reviled as a terrorist by many, his name is connected with some of the most notorious episodes of the conflict with Israel: the 1972 Munich massacre of Israeli athletes, commando raids on civilians in Israel and abroad, hijackings, and Palestinian support for Iraq in the Persian Gulf War.

Arafat made one visit to the United Nations in New York in 1974, but he was banned from Washington—as were other PLO representatives except those identified over the years as moderates within the organization. But Israel and the PLO signed a mutual recognition pact Friday that ended years of hostile exclusion. The accord paved the way for Clinton to alter a no-contact policy in force since 1990.

Arafat covets recognition from Washington, the last holdout among a string of governments that have endorsed the PLO's leadership of the Palestinian cause. The Clinton administration is still withholding formal links, agreeing only to open contacts for purposes of diplomacy, administration officials say.

Nonetheless, the visit will be a prestige boost for Arafat as he fights off opposition within the PLO. Originally, the PLO's foreign minister, Farouk Qaddoumi, regarded as second in command to Arafat in the ranks of his Fatah faction, was singled out early as the most likely participant in Monday's signing. But Qaddoumi opposed the PLO-Israeli agreement and refused to come.

Hard-liners in the PLO argue that Arafat has given up the Palestinian struggle in exchange for uncertain future gain.

The accord paves the way to Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, with an Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho as a first step. Final sovereignty over the land as well as the disposition of Jerusalem are to be negotiated later.

Rabin, a hero of the 1967 Middle East War, during which Israel won the West Bank and Gaza, was ambassador to Washington in the 1970s. He maintained frequent contact with Christopher by phone during the recent months of Middle East peace talks. Only his stamp of approval on the peace plan, devised by the PLO and Israel's Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, persuaded U.S. officials to take it seriously.

Arafat and Rabin To Sign Pact Here

Clinton Vows to Preserve Israel's Safety

By Daniel Williams and Ann Devroy
Washington Post Staff Writers

President Clinton confirmed yesterday that Yasser Arafat and Yitzhak Rabin, bitter enemies for more than a generation, will stand side by side on the White House South Lawn on Monday to sign a historic pact that maps the road to peace in the Middle East.

The presence of Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, and Rabin, prime minister of Israel, at the ceremony "gives greater substance to the agreement and is another bit of insurance that it will be carried out," Secretary of State Warren Christopher told an Israeli television interviewer.

Beyond the symbolism, administration officials said that a series of discussions over the U.S. role as "guarantor" of the agreement will be held in Washington as the Mideast delegations arrive. An administration official said that Clinton, for example, personally had pledged to Israel "additional guarantees" that its security will be protected as it takes steps toward a wider Middle East peace with its Arab neighbors. The official would not define the additional guarantees, but said the president "would make our position clear" in remarks on Monday.

In the past, Israel has sought assurance of continued military and economic aid, transfers of high-technology military equipment and direct feeds from U.S. intelligence satellites. As talks on final peace

How to Help Your Child Succeed in School

If only "gifted" students do well in school, why should children with average IQ's even bother to go? Because, our counselor says, what's in their hearts is more important than what's in their heads.

bviously brimming with pride, and with the child in question playing within earshot, Melanie's mother said, "My daughter's first-grade teacher says she's gifted."
"Who?" I asked, "The teacher?"

"No, silly, my daughter."

"Oh. And what do you suppose your daughter's teacher meant by gifted?"

"That Melanie has a high IQ, of course."

I understand why teachers tell parents things like that, but they really ought to know better. Every time teachers reinforce the widely held notion that a high IQ is the key to success in school, they shoot their entire profession in the proverbial foot.

In fact, teachers do know better. In the workshops I conduct for teachers, I ask for a show of hands from those who disagree with the following statement: "A child with an IQ of 95 who is respectful, responsible, and resourceful is a far better student than a child with an IQ of 165 who is deficient in those three traits." We're talking about a 70-point difference in IQ, folks, the difference between a child whose general ability is slightly below average and a so-called genius! I conduct close to 40 workshops a year, and not one teacher has ever disagreed.

So why, I ask, since teachers are obviously aware that academic success has less to do with how smart one is than such things as respect for adult authority, perseverance, and effort, do they conceptions concerning IQ? And why, when principals and teachers tell me that quite a few high-IQ kids have apparently been led to believe that they're entitled to good grades whether they earn them or not, do schools continue to define "gifted" primarily in terms of IQ? As any seasoned educator well knows, the "Three R's" of respect, responsibility, and resourcefulness are "where it's at," educationally speaking. Properly developed, the Three R's are the essence of true self-esteem and the elixir of success, whether academic, social, personal, spiritual, emotional, vocational, avocational, marital ... have I left anything out?

A child with these three attributes will come to school with the intuitive understanding that an education is something one gets as a result of that old-fashioned "E" for effort, not something one is given. In the final analysis, therefore, the Three R's define the truly educable child—a child who is receptive and responsive to educational opportunity.

Contrary to what many may think, schools do not, cannot, guarantee an education. Rather, they guarantee every child the right to pursue an education, to take advantage of the opportunity. And again, whether the child takes full advantage is a matter not of mental capacity, but the capacity to make the most of oneself.

FAMILY COUNSELOR

Success in school is a major stepping-stone toward a successful adult life. If success in school is mostly a matter of the Three R's, then certainly parents should be spending more effort enriching their children's characters than their IQ's. Indeed, respect, responsibility, and resourcefulness begin at home. Teachers cannot instill these qualities in children who lack them. They can only build upon foundations already established by parents.

Just exactly why are the Three R's so important to school success, and what can parents do to promote them?

Respect. Children who respect their parents will transfer that respect to teachers. As a result, they will pay attention in class; and it goes without saying, the more attention they pay, the more they will learn.

Respect for parents develops in two stages. First, children must trust that their parents are capable of providing for and protecting them under all circumstances. This cornerstone is laid during infancy and early toddlerhood. As children grow, however, parents must slowly but surely "turn the tables" so that by age 3 children pay more attention to parents than parents do to them.

This acceptance of parental authority defines stage two. From this point on, it is necessary that parents communicate their authority firmly, yet lovingly. Above all else, they must never enter into arguments with their child. If the child disagrees with a parental decision, the parents should give the reasons behind the decision, but make no attempt to reason-a child will understand and agree with an adult point of view only when the child becomes an adult. The child has complete permission to disagree, question, and express opinion (without which the seeds of rebellion are sown), but does not have permission to disobey.

In the final analysis, children do as they are told not because of bribe or brutality or persuasive explanation, but because they are told. Old-fashioned? I prefer tried-and-true. Consider also that teachers expect exactly the same in class.

Responsibility. In school, children -

Continued from Page 88 are given assignments on a daily basis. They are expected to do those assignments properly and to turn them in on time. In order to properly prepare a child for these expectations, parents should create similar ones in the home. In other words, parents should assign a daily routine of chores that the child must do according to a specific schedule. These chores, by the way, should be contributed, as opposed to paid for.

Talking with parents around the country, I find that those children who accept full responsibility for their homework tend to occupy positions of responsibility within their families. It makes sense, doesn't it? A child who is in the habit of accepting assignments at home will be more likely to accept it at school. Not complicated at all.

Resourcefulness. This third "R" can be defined as the ability to do a lot with a little. Resourcefulness cannot be taught. Its potential exists within every child and emerges as the child must make-do. In other words; resourcefulness develops in response to scarcity and the need to be an active, inquisitive problem solver. It follows that too many toys, an overload of adult-organized after-school activities, and too much television all interfere with the emergence of resourcefulness. Having too many toys (more than a toy box full) overrides the need to make-do. Participating in too many after-school activities (more than one at a time) prevents self-reliance. Watching too much television (more than five hours a week) induces a state of near-perpetual inactivity.

In the course of my travels, I often seek out teachers who've been teaching for 30 years or more. I ask them how today's child differs from the typical child of a generation ago. They consistently report that today's child tends to try fewer approaches to a problem before giving up and asking for adult assistance. On the other hand, parents consistently report that when they cut back on toys, television, and organized after-school activities their children eventually occupy their time more independently and creatively. The inescapable conclusion: The less adults do for children, the more children do for themselves; the fewer things children have, the more improvisational they become. I'm not suggesting that adults should do absolutely nothing for children, or that children should have no toys at all. I'm simply suggesting a conservative approach to adult involvement and benevolence.

The Three R's add up to learning, which adds up to self-esteem. Without these Three R's, a high IQ will amount to very little.

GODS IN THE MAKING

This month marks another season of textbooks and tests for millions of students around the world. In addition to the basics, however, schools must provide students with the confidence that they can succeed.

n too many cities, too many children get sidetracked by the temptations of the street. Advancement and achievement take a backseat to drugs and gangs.

In this battle for young minds, education proves a valuable weapon. It starts with the basics—reading, writing, mathematics, and science. But children, especially in neighborhoods battered by high crime and unemployment, need something more. They need schools and teachers who foster in students confidence, self-esteem, and the belief that they can overcome the odds and beat the street.

The American journalist Donald

Marquis wrote that the great desideratum of human education is to make all people aware that they are gods in the making, and that they can all walk upon water if they will.

In a country where one in four students—one out of two in major urban areas—drops out of high school, America clearly is failing to convince children that they are "gods in the making."

Still, against this bleak backdrop, stories of persistence and success cut through the darkness. One such shining light is Providence/St. Mel, a private school in Chicago. Firmly planted in the soil of one of the most violent neighborhoods in America, where unemployment hovers around 60 percent, this 1st- through 12th-grade school offers hope in a community of desperation. The vacant windows in abandoned buildings on each block are outnumbered only by the vacant eyes of people devoid of hope.

Within the walls of Providence/St. Mel, the students' eyes sparkle—with confidence, a love of learning, and the knowledge that they can create a better tomorrow.

The school ignites students' spirits with an emphasis on hard work and strict discipline. Students receive two to three hours of homework each night. They are suspended if they cut class just once, and they cannot return until their parents come to school. Even walking across the lawn brings a $10 fine.

Such an exacting atmosphere may make outsiders uneasy, but the school provides structure in the midst of a world ruled by chaos. Love and caring are measured out in even greater doses. Teachers routinely give their personal time to assist and encourage students who need a helping hand.

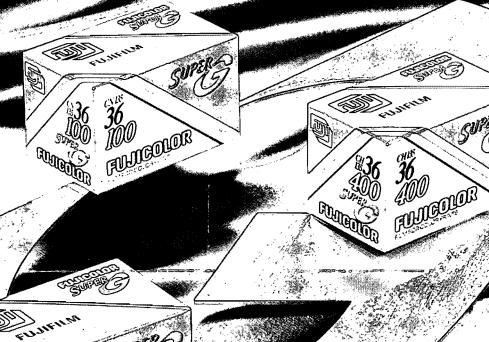

As proof of Providence/St. Mel's effectiveness, nearly 50 percent of the students make the honor roll each year. And for the past four years, graduating classes have had 100 percent college acceptance rates. In addition to providing an excellent education, the school takes insecure, unresponsive children and turns them into young adults with drive and dreams. The school's Summer of a Lifetime (SOAL) program plays a major part in this accomplishment. In grades 9 through 12, some students attend summer classes at Andover, Radcliffe, and Oxford. Others outwit the elements on Outward Bound adventures. And some work as interns in corporations.

SOAL is a sink-or-swim program. The majority of these students have never been on an airplane, some never out of the Chicago area: The experiences open their eyes to a world they may never have believed existed and convince them that they can compete with students from any background, no matter how privileged. These children will work in trades, be engineers, doctors, and teachers. They will become tomorrow's leaders. They will succeed—because Providence/St. Mel gave them the tools and because now they know they can "walk upon water if they will."

meeting the Challenge

State governments are being challenged to achieve a higher level of effectiveness. State policymakers are looking at the need to change government and realizing that it's necessary but not easy.

THE STATE OF THE STATES

The federal-state relationship is changing; and states are being confronted with emerging issues: an aging population, telecommunication breakthroughs and an urban vs rural dilemma. Add to that some fiscal problems, and what you have are opportunities disguised as challenges.

on the Front Line

State policymakers are finding little guidance in such catchy phrases as "reinventing government," "reengineering organizations," and "right-sizing government." The CGPA's 1993 annual meeting will go beyond the rhetoric, providing substantive programs with practical tips for practitioners and a place to share experiences and wisdom.

As the President's chief domestic policy advisor, Ms. Rasco supervises and coordinates the work of the White House staff of the President's Domestic Policy Council. She also serves on the Department of Education's National Education Goals Panel.

In Arkansas, Ms. Rasco was Governor Clinton's Senior Executive Assistant responsible for the staff and operations of the Governor's office. From 1985 through 1992, she was Governor Clinton's Liaison to the National Governors' Association. During this period, she worked closely with the NGA's Washington staff both during Governor Clinton's Chairmanship and while he was lead Governor on welfare reform, child care and health care reform.

Before moving to her job in the White House, Ms. Rasco served on the National Board of the Home Instruction Program for Preschool Youngsters (HIPPY), a program of the National Council of Jewish Women; the Board of Little Rock New Futures, an Annie E. Casey Foundation Project; and the Little Rock School District Special Education Parent Advisory Committee.

Carol received a bachelor's degree from the University of Arkansas and earned a master's from the University of Central Arkansas. She has taught in the public school system and established a psychological counseling program in the middle school in Bryant, Arkansas.

Prior to joining Governor Clinton's staff in 1983, Carol worked extensively as a volunteer in Arkansas with arts organizations, disability advocacy groups and the United Methodist Church.

meeting the Challenge

State governments are being challenged to achieve a higher level of effectiveness. State policymakers are looking at the need to change government and realizing that it's necessary, but not easy.

The State Of the States

The federal state relationship is changing, and states are being confronted with emerging issues an aging population, telecommunication breakthroughs and an urban vs rural dilemma. Add to that some fiscal problems and what you have are opportunities disguised as challenges.

on the Front Line

State policymakers are finding little guidance in such catchy phrases as "reinventing government," reengineering organizations," and "right-sizing government." The CGPA's 1993 annual meeting will go beyond the rhetoric, providing substantive programs with practical tips for practitioners and a place to share experiences and wisdom.

Dear Ms. Rasco:

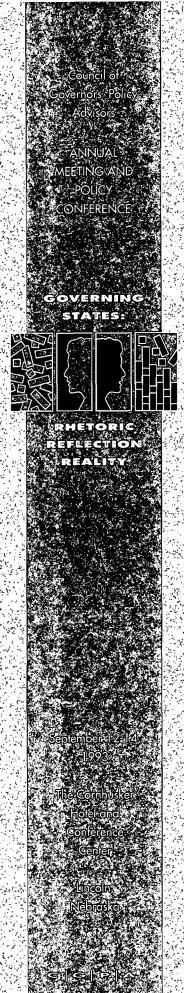

★ Enclosed is the registration confirmation packet that all conference participants will receive. (CGPA will make your hotel reservations according to your travel plans.)

★ We invite you to attend as many events as you are able. Please indicate which events you would be interested in attending on the enclosed registration form, and return it to me as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

Matt Bonaiuto

P.S. If you have not already faxed us your bio and the audiovisual and accommodations form, please do so as soon as possible.

We have received your registration for the 1993 CGPA Annual Meeting and Policy Conference in Lincoln, Nebraska. Please note the following information:

TRANSPORTATION

Conference participants are responsible for making their own travel arrangements to Lincoln Municipal Airport; and then to the Cornhusker Hotel and Conference Center in Lincoln. The Cornhusker Hotel does provide complimentary shuttle van service from Lincoln Municipal Airport—reservations must be made with the hotel. Taxi service is also available; fares are approximately $10 one-way. Major car rental companies are located at Lincoln Municipal Airport. Please note that all CGPA events are located within walking distance of the Cornhusker Hotel.

(Note that conference participants arriving on Friday for the University of Nebraska-Texas Tech football game should fly into Omaha and fly out of Lincoln. A chartered bus will bring you from Omaha to Lincoln on Saturday morning.)

HOTEL ACCOMMODATIONS

For hotel reservations, please phone the hotel directly and tell them you are with the CGPA Annual Meeting. Please make your hotel reservations immediately. The hotel will assign rooms according to choice and availability as reservations are made.

The Cornhusker Hotel and Conference Center (800) 793-7474 or (404) 474-7474

RESERVATIONS MUST BE RECEIVED BY THE HOTEL BY AUGUST 20. Reservations made after this date may be subject to higher rates and are subject to availability. All hotel reservations must be guaranteed with a check or major credit card for the first night's deposit. If you must cancel your reservation, you must contact the hotel at least 48 hours prior to your scheduled arrival in order to receive a full refund.

CONFERENCE REGISTRATION

Due to required advance guarantees; CGPA will only refund 75% of registration fees for cancellation notices received after August 27, 1993. No shows will be billed the applicable registration fee.

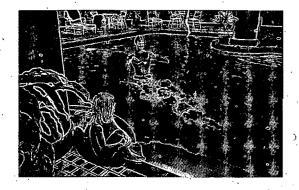

At registration in the Conference Center Atrium of the Cornhusker Hotel, CGPA will have a display table to provide conference participants with information on activities available in and around Lincoln. CGPA publications will also be on display. Conference registration will be at the following times:

Sunday, September 12 9:00 am to 12:00 noon Monday, September 13 8:30 am to 10:00 am

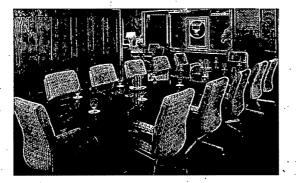

APPROPRIATE ATTIRE

For all business sessions, casual business attire is appropriate. Casual attire is suggested for Saturday's events. For Sunday and Monday evenings, business attire is suggested. Seasonal temperatures in Lincoln range from the mid-60s to low-70s during the day, with cooler temperatures (low-50s) in the evenings.

Please contact Matt Bonaiuto or Gabriela Nosari at CGPA if you have any questions: (202) 624-5386 or fax (202) 624-7846.

Clinton adviser stresses new three R's for kids

BY FRED KNAPP Lincoln Journal

Stressing children's issues, White House domestic policy adviser Carol Rasco today told advisers to the nation's governors that policies should promote the "three R's" of respect, responsibility and resourcefulness. Before speaking to the Council of Governors' Policy Advisors at the Cornhusker, Rasco also met about 50 Lincoln middle and high school students for questions she said touched on the North American Free Trade Agreement and employer mandates, jobs, crime and drugs around schools, gun control, and help for students not headed for college.

Her office's policy is that "Every child shall be empowered to develop to her or his greatest potential," Rasco said. To that end, she said, policies should be examined to see if they promote respect for the self and others, if they promote responsible behavior, and if they are as resourceful as possible in addressing prob-

Rasco also promoted the national health-care plan that President Clinton is scheduled to propose in a speech to Congress Sept. 22.

The plan will focus on security, simplicity and savings, she said. Asked if it would continue what some call a pattern of federal cost-shifting of mandates like Medicaid to the states, Rasco said "No. We hope we have been very sensitive to that."

The plan envisions all states' being covered by the end of 1997, although some would enter the system earlier. "In order to do that, we really need this in place no later than the end of next June," she said of the enabling 💎 legislation.

Rasco, who worked for Clinton when he was governor of Arkansas. also spoke of the transition to working in Washington.

She said Clinton's habit of scrawling notes on newspaper clippings on E note cards for staff follow-up had initially caused some confusion. Staff of tially caused some confusion. Staff ofthe National Security Council in particular felt overwhelmed because they thought that they should respond to each presidential note with a fivepage memo, she said. The staff also, needed people from Arkansas famile w iar with Clinton's handwriting to decipher the notes, she said.

But the notes were intended simply intended to start the process of considering issues, she said. "That's Bill Clinton's style of scanning," she said. And if the staff did respond with five pages, "He'll never read a memo that long," she said.

Rasco urged the governors' advisers to fax her copies of communication tions from the federal bureaucracy that they couldn't understand. She gave the fax number of (202) 456-2878

Rasco pushes ahead with Clinton's work

Carol Rasco missed Monday's historic event at the boose where she works

As Israeli and Palestinian leaders took the first step down the road to an uncertain peace at a White House ceremony, Rasco was in Lincoln nurshing what she characterized as another. peace agenda.

"A whole lot of children in the United States need peace of mind" she says.

Rasco is the president's domestic policy ansistant

'That means health care, welfare, education, all the programs that directly impact kids. Programs that are about to take center stage now that the president's budget initiatives have moved through the congressional minefields.

So while Rasco's boss, Bill Clinton, was playing host to history on Monday. Rasco was pushing ahead with his work.

She's been doing that for a decade now.

She first joined the Clinton administration -Arkansas version - in 1983 after serving as a key county coordinator in his 1982 comeback gubernatorial campaign.

Rasco, a former teacher who has a physically and mentally disabled son, had served as an appointed member of a state board dealing with developmental disabilities during Clinton's first term as governor. She was "very determined to get him back in office" after he lost his first reelection bid in 1980.

Clinton won that comeback effort two years later, and she went to work for his administration at the Capitolin Little Rock, focusing on human services.

When Clinton set out upon his presidential campaign 10 years later, he turned to Rasco to coordinate his gubernatorial staff and cabinet and keep state government functioning effectively during his long absences from Congressional approval will be needed by cext spring to meet all the time lines in the emerging Clinton plan, she says.

Rasco, who has participated in the lengthy inhouse process leading toward unveiling of the package on Sept. 12, freely describes it as "a work in progress."

"There will be changes," she says, even from

Ask Rasco to assess Bill Clinton's strengths. and she immediately points to a characteristic that some critics quickly point to too.

"He listers very well."

Some of the president's critics suggest that he listens too long before making a decision.

"I know that some say he wants to continue to gather information for too long . . . but whathe wants to be able to do is make an informed decision.

"I don't see that as a weakness.

"Bill Clinton has shown that he can make decisions."

Clinton, she says, is "very smart and very welread. He brings people logether. He has this ability to assimilate information and to help people be collaborative.

"I think over time he has learned, as many of us do, to listen more and talk less. And I think that's a strength"

One element in Clinton's decision-making process is that he remains flexible. Rasco says.

That was amply demonstrated during the internal health care reform debate, she says.

"There was no preconceived direction. As more and more layers of decisions were reached, there were significant changes here and there."

Rasco is aware that some critics also think Clinton is unfocused.

"Some people say he's trying to get too much 🐣 done, that he's displaying youthful impatience. I think that's been tempered. But he hasn't lost it entirely, and I'm really glad"

Rasco brushes aside questions about the Washington Beltway mentality that has turned bashing of public officials into a blood sport, practiced with obvious relish by some segments of the national news media.

"I don't spend much time thinking about that. "I get in. I go to work, I do the best I can.

"It can work, we can do it," said Carol Rasco, assistant to the president for domestic policy.

"Let's not let people who profit from the system the way it is stand in the way of providing health security istall Americans."

The president is scheduled to officially unveil his health care reform proposal Sept. 22 to a joint session of Congress.

In a keynote speech delivered Mooday morning at the Combusker Hotel to the Council of Governors' Policy Advisors, Rasco said the administration expects a tough fight but believes success can be achieved if people don't lose sight of the "three or four things we can all agree on."

THE PROPOSAL calls for, among other things, a guarantee of health care for all Americans, including the 37 million who do not now have health insurance, and an end to tving health care to one's job.

Judge in Bjorklund Case Awaits Briefs

Lincoln (AP) - Attorneys have one more week to convince a index whether some evidence should be excluded from the trial of a man charged with killing a University of Nebraska-Lincola student.

Lancaster County District Judge Donaid Endacott concluded nearly 11 days of testimony in the case of Roger Biorklund Monday night. He gave atterneys a week to file written briefs on the matter before he makes a decision.

Bjorkhand's attorney, Deputy Lancaster County Public Defender Scott Helvic, said statements Eprklund allegedly made to police should be excluded because his client wasn't properly advised of his rights.

Chief Deputy Lancaster County Attorney John Colborn said notice were meticulous in reading Bioskland his rights during each of the dozen or so conversations they had with him. He said many of the conversations were initiated by Biorkland.

Endacott said jury selection for the trial would begin Oct. 18 in Chevenne County.

Bjorklund, 31, was charged with firstdegree marder and use of a weapon to commit a felony in the abduction and shooting death of 18-year-old Candice Harms of Lincoln.

Miss Harms was missing for more than two months before another man charged in the case led police Dec. 6 to her shallow grave beneath a tree in a snow-covered field southeast of Lincoln.

Lancaster County Attorney Gary Lacey has said he will seek the death penalty for Bjorklund.

Bjorkhind and Scott Barney, 24, were in fail on charges stemming from a string of robberies when Barney's attorney contacted Lacey's office about the grave.

Under an agreement with prosecutors. Burney agreed to plead quilty to first-degree murder and testify against Bjorkfund. The prosecution agreed not to seek the death penalty against Barney.

The hearing on the defense's request to keep some evidence out of the trial began more than three weeks ago. The judge closed parts of the hearing to prevent disclosure of the specific statements in question.

OMAHA WALD-HERALD 9-14-93

Lincoln (AP) - President Clinton's top domestic adviser said Monday that she is trying to bring reality to government by stressing the three R's.

Respect, responsibility and resourcefulness are important elements for policy advisers in all that they do, Carol Rasco told a Council of Government Policy Advisers convention.

"We need to turn the attention of government to real people and real issues," said Ms. Rasco, assistant to the president for domestic policy.

An Arkansas native who worked with Clinton in the governor's office for 10 years, Ms. Rasco said, "States are still the true laboratories for democracy."

"The gridlock (in federal government) is discouraging, but it's taught me a new and invigorating respect for the individual vote. Ms. Rasco said.

As a former teacher, she said, she's long known the importance of the traditional three R's - reading, writing and arithmetic. As a mother of two, she said. she has come to realize the importance of the new three R's --- respect, responsibility and resourcefulness.

"Every policy should do something to enhance the new three R's. Every piece of paper affects real people," she told the audience of about 70 state government policy-makers from across the country.

Ms. Rasoo met earlier Monday with a group of Lincoln jurior and senior high students.

The greatest concern of the students was "what are we going to do about the high school students who don't go on to college," she said.

Ms. Rasco touted the National Health Security Act, which gets an official introduction when Clinton addresses Congress Sept. 22,

SEPTEMBER 12-13, 1993 VISIT TO LINCOLN, NEBRASKA

You may recall on your last visit to Lincoln, you visited an elementary building that housed students that were participating in a variety of federal programs. I am requesting that on your visit this time you consider visiting for approximately 30 minutes with a group of middle level and high school students to discuse the role of the Assistant to the President for Domestic Policy. My idea would be to have a press conference type format with you saying perhaps 3-5 minutes at the beginning and then allowing students to ask you questions. I understand that you will be on a very tight timeline, so we would be willing to accommodate whatever time schedule or location that would meet your time requirements.

We will be pleased to meet with you at the Cornhusker or any other site that is convenient to your schedule. I would anticipate approximately 15-20 students. I am fully aware of your very busy schedule and would understand if nothing can be worked out, however, after meeting you I felt it would be a shame not to attempt to have you meet with other students while you were in town.

If something can be arranged, please contact me at 402-436-1815. Thank you for your consideration.

In Nebraska yesterday, Tim Roby of the North Dakota Governor's office told me they are having some type problem getting answers from Labor. He said there is a chance his Gov. would get his answers today in DC but in the meantime if someone could give Tim Roby a call on Wednesday upon his return to North Dakota from the CGPA meeting in Nebraska to check on this it would help our responsiveness effort I think. E. Benjamin Nelson Governor

June 24, 1993

Executive Suite State Capitol Lincoln, NE 68509 402-471-2244

Carol Rasco
Assistant to the President for Domestic Affairs
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Carol:

I'm very pleased to hear that you will be coming to Lincoln in September for the Annual Meeting of the Council of Governors' Policy Advisors. You will add a great deal to the program, and we're always happy to have you in Nebraska.

I understand that you will be speaking to the group on Monday morning, September 13. If your schedule permits you to fly to Lincoln on Sunday, Diane and I would be pleased to have you as our guest overnight at the Governor's Residence.

There will be a reception for meeting participants at the Residence early Sunday evening. Following the reception, we'd like to have you join us for dinner. The Residence is only a few blocks from the conference location at the Cornhusker Hotel, so you should be able to have a leisurely breakfast prior to arriving at the meeting.

My Director of Policy, Rod Armstrong, will follow up with your scheduling staff to see if this can be arranged. Rod is President of the CGPA Executive Board this year, and I know he shares my gratitude that you are taking the time to offer your insights to the group.

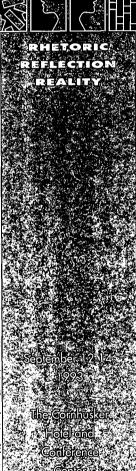

Diane and I look forward to seeing you in September!

Sincerely,

E. Benjamin Nelson Governor

9:00-10:30 a.m. Toward A New Foderalism

Carol Rasco, Assistant to the President for Domestic Policy, will share with participants her views on how the Clinton Administration is working with the states and how states can be effective in the changing federal-state relationship. She will also share some reflections about working in the White House after many years in state government.

10:45-12:00 noon Reinventing State Government: H's Harder Than You Think

This panel, composed of Paul Light, Professor of Public Affairs at the Humphrey School of Public Affairs, and some hands-on state practitioners, will take a look at what you can really expect when making major organizational changes in state government.

12:30-2:00 p.m. LUNCHEON

State Policy Trends: Hyperbole and the Hard Facts

Hal Hovey, publisher of State Policy Reports, will tell it like it is. Hovey is known for separating the wheat from the chaff, the hyperbole from the hard facts. He will talk about the self-promotion inherent in the political realm, the tendency to oversell policy proposals, and the medio's record in covering state governments.

AFTERNOON WORKSHOPS

2:00-4:00 p.m. Porils, Problems and Potentials

Participants can choose from three concurrent workshops on:

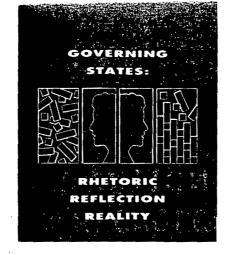

- Aging Population: Burdens and Opportunities. The population of those over 65 is expected to double during the next 30 years. Are states ready?
- Telecommunications and Advanced Technologies. This interactive workshop will demonstrate how telecommunications is making state government more effective and efficient.
- Communities and the Politics of Place. What are states doing to address the special and divergent needs of inner city neighborhoods and rural communities. Is it working?

Attending a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Cornhuskers football game is both a cultural experience and an unforgettable sporting event. Every Nebraska home game has been sold out since October 1962 and season tickets have figured prominently in many area divorce settlements. It is a day-long happening not to be missed.

- A limited number of complimentary tickets are available for the football game. They will be distributed on a first come, first served basis with your mailed-in registration forms. No phone calls, please.
- There are no hotel rooms available in Lincoln on Friday, September 10, and we have reserved a block of rooms for CGPA attendees at the Red Lion Hotel in Omaha, Nebraska (just 50 miles away) for that night. Please indicate on the registration form if you plan to attend the game and will need hotel accommodations in Omaha. Reservations will be available in Lincoln for the rest of the meeting.
- Special transportation will be available from the Red Lion Hotel on Saturday morning, September 11, from Omaha to Lincoln, a 45-minute ride. Details will be mailed to you with your registration confirmation kit prior to the meeting.

 While CGPA will make your reservations in Omaha, conferees will be responsible for making their own reservations at the Cornhusker Hotel in Lin-coin. Conferees are responsible for all charges associated with overnight accommodations.

NOTE: Those conferees arriving on Friday for the football game should fly into Omaha and fly out of Lincoln.

Carol Rasco Domestic Policy Advisor to the President The White House Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Carol:

Although you have just left the world of state policy advisors, I am writing to ask if you would consider speaking to your former colleagues at this year's CGPA The event will be held in Lincoln, Annual Meeting. Nebraska (the home of Rod Armstrong, our Board President) from September 12-14, 1993. I know this is a long way off, but I suspect your calendar is filling up rapidly, and I wanted to get my request in early.

Although we're still hammering out the specific theme of the meeting, we will certainly be talking about the issues of governance in the 1990's. I know that our members are very interested in the impact which the Clinton Administration will make on state programs, and you are in a prime position to speak to them about this. September may also be a good time to review the various proposals in the domestic area which the President is proposing with an audience directly affected by changes in the federal-state arena.

this time, I would like to ascertain possibility of your coming and inquire if you had any preferences for date and time. Of course, you know that you are welcome to be with us for any or all of the If you can indicate your availability, we can meeting. work out the specifics as soon as it is convenient for you.

I hope you will accept our invitation, and I look forward to hearing from you soon.
