President Clinton asked Secretary Shalala to release the following statement at her press conference announcing the formation of the National Task Force on AIDS Drug Development:

Statement of President Bill Clinton

"Finding effective treatments for AIDS is one of our highest national priorities," President Clinton said.

"The National Task Force on AIDS Drug Development represents an unprecedented high-level collaboration focused on that single goal."

"I am especially heartened that leaders of the pharmaceutical industry and the AIDS-affected community joined Secretary Shalala to make the announcement. Their participation underscores the fact that we must all work together to achieve our goal."

[Acknowledgements: Father O'Donovan, president of Georgetown University; Dr. John Griffth, head of Georgetown Medical Center; Kristine Gebbie, AIDS Policy Coordinator; others, to come]

Today, on World AIDS Day, we remember those we have lost. And we rededicate ourselves to winning the fight against this dreaded and deadly disease.

Amidst all the human tragedy, AIDS has brought out some of the best in the American spirit -- courage, compassion, and the spirit of community.

On Monday, I met with religious leaders who are responding to the AIDS crisis. They told me about people cared for and comforted; families reconciled and reunited; and differences accepted and even celebrated.

Bishop Fritz Mutti of Topeka, Kansas, has lost two gay sons to AIDS. He told how he and his wife have toiled against fear and loneliness to educate people about this disease. The Rev. Steve Pieters is living with AIDS. He said he stays alive through hope.

For me and for a growing number of Americans, the face of AIDS is no longer the face of a stranger. It is the face of a mother who must leave children before they grow up; loved ones who must say goodbye before they grow old together; an athlete who will leave the world a little less graceful; and a child who will leave the world a little less hopeful.

It is the face of the journalist Jeffrey Schmalz, who died on November 6th of this year. His article in last Sunday's New York Times Magazine challenged all of us with these words: "I am dying. Why doesn't someone help us."

Today, we honor those who are helping. We honor the dedicated medical professionals, here at Georgetown Hospital and at health care facilities throughout this country. We honor the volunteers providing hospice care. And we honor the teachers, business leaders, community activists, and government employees who are working every day to help people with AIDS.

The AIDS epidemic is an unprecedented health emergency -- and it requires urgent action. Our strategy against AIDS includes education and prevention, research, and care. And we are working and praying for a cure.

Education and prevention must be everyone's responsibility.

Our budget provides for a $45 million increase in funding for prevention programs. We are working with communities to plan their own efforts for prevention and public education.

I have issued a directive requiring every federal office to provide its employees with education about AIDS prevention. We ask the three million federal employees to take this information home to their families and communities. And we ask every business in America to undertake similar education.

We are increasing funding for AIDS research by 21% in this year's budget, including $1.3 billion for the National Institutes of Health. And we have called to action the greatest scientific minds of our country in the effort to find effective treatments and vaccines. Just yesterday, we announced the formation of a National Task Force on AIDS Drug Development, bringing together people from government, business, medicine and AIDS-affected communities for the first time to streamline the drug approval process.

While we must emphasize education, prevention, and research to stop the disease from ever happening, we must not overlook the importance of competent and sensitive treatment for people who already live with HIV or AIDS. Over 200,000 Americans are living with AIDS, and at least another million are infected with HIV. To improve and expand treatment for those suffering from this disease, we have increased funding for the Ryan White CARE Act by $300 million over last year's budget.

I know that many people with AIDS also live in fear of losing their health insurance. That's a fear that we can -- and must -- remove from their lives. Our health security plan will guarantee that no one with AIDS or HIV infection will be denied coverage due to a pre-existing condition or because they change their job.

For all we have done and all that we plan to do, we must do more. And government cannot do it alone.

The theme of World AIDS Day is "Time to Act." Today, I ask every American to act, to educate our children, to insure that our schools and churches and temples are doing their part, to replace ignorance and indifference with caring and concern.

AIDS is a terrifying disease. But it is a disease, like polio or smallpox, that we can defeat. And, as we fight the disease, we must also fight the fear and prejudice that all too often accompanies the disease. With commitment and courage and action, we can meet this challenge, not only on World AIDS day but every day, until humanity has prevailed.

DATE: November 23, 1993

Attached is a copy of a fax I received from Elizabeth today regarding World AIDS Day. Because I will be out tomorrow morning through Sunday evening I am passing this along to you, Ricki Seidman and Mark Gearan for appropriate handling. I have called Elizabeth's home as that is the number she left when she called to tell my office the fax was on the way. She was not in, so in addition to thanking her, I simply told her I was passing along the information to the scheduling office and the speech writers who are working on next week's activity.

I also want to share with you that in response to her SOS fax a few weeks ago to George which he passed along to me in which she was urging our recognition of World AIDS Day, I faxed her a long memo since she was not available by phone telling her that we were definitely looking at appropriate activities for the recognition of the day, and also told her of my conversation in general with you relating to her concerns about our AIDS operations. I encouraged her to call me at anytime and to let me know the next time she would be in town as I would be happy to visit with her. I have tried to stay in contact with her every week or so by phone or fax since you last visited with me about her concerns. I did not know with this latest fax if there is an appropriate event or the desire to contact her to be here for anything next week...but again, because I will be gone through Sunday I did not want to let the issue drop entirely.

Rosalyn and/or White House switchboard operators can reach me over the holiday period if there is anything we need to discuss. Thank you.

The second of the second

Broad thoughts on the President's address for . World AIDS Day.

I believe the President's speech must be a visionary and impassioned address. The country is needing his moral leadership on AIDS. It has been a year and it must happen now. A photo op with someone who has AIDS is fine, but it just isn't enough (Bush and Reagan both did photo ops -- so what -- it made no difference.) We need a speech to all America saying --

1. It is our choice as a country how we fare in this war.

AIDS is a preventable disease -- but not if we are in denial. IF we don't face up it is our country's youth who will die -- just like in any other war.

- We need to educate those not infected to be sure that everyone, especially our youth, know how this virus is transmitted, and the dangers of not paying attention.
- 3. We need to let those infected know that American communities want to help them, not push them away. Take my word for it -many thousands of people who have HIV are still living in fear and secrecy afraid for friends, family and workers to know because they are afraid of being rejected, losing their job, apartment or insurance. At the Pediatric AIDS Foundation we get calls from hundreds of infected families around the country -- they are almost all in "hiding".
- Support can only happen with a letting go of fear and that comes through education. (You talked about the politics of fear in regards to NAFTA -- well it is the same enemy here.)
- We decide what kind of a people what kind of a country we want to be. This war against AIDS has taken more lives than all previous wars put together.
- In productive years lost, by 1995 AIDS will account for more years of productive lives lost before the age of 65 than all forms of cancer combined.
- The government is finally doing what it must -- now, all parts, of all communities in America must do their part.

CO-FOUNDERS: Susan OnLaurentis/Elizabeth Claser/Susan Zoogen 1311 Colorado Avenue, Santa Monica, California 90404 TEL. (310) 395 9051 FAX: (310) 395-5149

8. I have a challenge for our country — for our people, for our governors. We have already begun on the federal level to implement these challenges.

In the next year let each community make certain there is AIDS education and policies in every school, in every workplace, in every religious and ethnic community.

Then each town, each village, each city can know they have reached out to be sure the AIDS epidemic is halted — and each community can send a message to those already infected that they want to help — but they can't if people are in hiding.

We must come together -- we must join hands -- we must offer a greater family of support -- and then each individual in each community can be proud of who they are.

And let us know what happens in your town so that next year on World AIDS Day I can report back to you, and let you know that action was taken from all corners of America.

Just some thoughts - I hope they are helpful.

With Great Care, Blizabeth Glaser

Dear Carol:

I simply cannot overstate the importance of President Clinton soon giving a major address on the AIDS epidemic. Not only is his credibility very much on the line, but that of Kristine Gebbie's is as well. World's AIDS Day, December 1, should be the date.

As you know, this was the first of the two recommendations in the National Commission on AIDS's September, 1993 final report. I know this is a tough time, but a huge number of his loyal supporters are praying for this, and time is running out.

His moral leadership got him elected. He has been demonstrating it on a number of fronts. Now convince him to give it the shot on AIDS--the plague of our times.

Sincerely,

Jama Ryus David E. Rogers, M.D.

WORLD AIDS DAY MEMOS

Thanks for your help concerning this matter.

There are a total of five memos included in this package. Attached to this memo is the memo for Carol Rascoe. This memo outlines all of the events for POTUS, FLOTUS, VP and Mrs. Gore. This memo is for Carol's review and approval of the participation requested.

If she approves the recommended participation as outlined in the memo to her, the other memo packets need only to be dropped in the mail. They are essentially the same as Carol's memo, but they are tailored to each scheduler respectively.

If Carol does not approve the recommended participation, then please give me a call so that we can discuss what needs to happen next.

Kristine has expressed her concern that these memos reach their respective schedulers ASAP.

I hope this clear, if not, please feel free to give me a call at 632-1090.

Thanks again.

Gebbie has talked w/Mack McLarty about this already.

ATTACHMENT 1. OVERVIEW OF PROPOSED ADMINISTRATION OBSERVANCE OF WORLD AIDS DAY 1994

Five cross-cutting events are planned or proposed to highlight the Administration's commitment to the 1994 World AIDS Day theme of A Time to Act. They will be complemented by more personal actions by Administration principals and Cabinet officials.

Events already planned include:

- a five-agency event having workplace education at its core which will take place at the Departments of Justice, Labor, and Health and Human Services; at the Small Business Administration; and in the Rayburn House Office Building.
- displays of the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt at all sites listed above, as well as the White House, Vice President's Residence, State Department, Department of Commerce, and other venues.
- issuance of a Presidential Proclamation urging all Americans to observe World AIDS Day.
- briefly darken the White House on the evening of December 1st as requested by the American Association for World Health.

Events proposed, and for which White House approval is sought at the earliest possible date, include:

- a late afternoon reception in the East Room for the purpose of issuing a Presidential Proclamation (with attendance by the Clintons and the Gores) on November 30th to kick off the next day's events, and to honor those participating in them, and
- darkening of all monuments on the Mall for x minutes in conjunction with the already agreed-to darkening of the White House.

The events above are reinforced by recommendations for additional action by the President, the Vice President, the First Lady, Mrs. Gore, and the National AIDS Policy Coordinator. These are outlined on the next two pages, and detailed in an attachment to this document. Additionally, the Office of the National AIDS Policy Coordinator has developed, and is prepared to forward to the relevant departments or agencies, recommendations for action which each Cabinet Secretary may want to undertake on World AIDS Day.

NOTE: See following page for background and rationale on recommendations.

Background and Rationale for Activities for Administration Principals

- The President should make a morning speech in the D.C. area -- preferably on a college campus -- which emphasizes his commitment to acting to stop the epidemic and ensuring care for those already ill. This will be his first address on HIV/AIDS since taking office, and many in the activist community think it is already overdue.
- The President should act in service to a person with AIDS by visiting an adult AIDS patient in his home. We suggest Philadelphia as a site for this visit. We have done some preliminary advance work, and this office would make the appropriate final arrangements in conjunction with the President's Scheduling and Advance office. This reinforces the World AIDS Day theme, and communicates that people have nothing to fear from casual contact.
- The Vice President should visit Howard University's AIDS Clinical Trials Unit and the clinical care unit on the campus of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda. He would see both pediatric and adult patients at both sites, with all (or the vast majority) of those at Howard being people of color. This reinforces the need to stay focused on treatment and a cure.
- The First Lady should host a breakfast or luncheon at the White House for national religious leaders. We have discussed this possibility with representatives of the National Council of Churches and the AIDS National Interfaith Network. Both organizations are enthusiastic about helping to make this happen. This provides an opportunity to salute the meaningful work of faith communities to date, and to challenge those who aren't yet doing much to get on board.
- Mrs. Gore should host a luncheon or an early afternoon reception at the Vice President's Residence for long-term (e.g., five years post diagnosis) survivors of AIDS. This provides an opportunity to emphasize that many people have full and productive lives long after diagnosis a sign of hope when we're a little bit short on it. Given her expressed interest in the issue, it is also recommended that Mrs. Gore participate in the First Lady's event and join the multi-agency "road show" for the stop at the Small Business Administration.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR CABINET MEMBER/AGENCY HEAD/ KEY PUBLIC HEALTH OFFICIALS ACTIVITIES ON WORLD AIDS DAY

AGRICULTURE

• The Secretary should take part in an HIV prevention/education program through a USDA extension program.

COMMERCE

• The Secretary should participate in the planned CDC-sponsored Business Responds to AIDS breakfast event in Boston for key business leaders from throughout New England.

DEFENSE

• The Secretary should visit DoD patients with AIDS at Wilford-Hall Air Force Medical Center in San Antonio (preferred location) or at Walter Reed Army Hospital if he cannot travel that day.

EDUCATION

• The Secretary should, accompanied by HIV+ students and/or their friends, visit a public school (preferably in Iowa or elsewhere in the heartland) that has openly accommodated/accepted a student or student with HIV/AIDS. Alternatively, Secretary Riley might wish to visit a school with a successful peer education program, where teens are helping other teens stay healthy and uninfected; or join Dr. Elders for her school event (see below).

ENERGY

• The Secretary should visit either Oak Ridge or Bonneville facilities -- each with a workforce in the thousands -- to initiate HIV/AIDS workplace education.

HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

- The Secretary of Health and Human Services will perform volunteer service at a DC AIDS service organization in the morning, and will deliver an AIDS speech at the Mayo Clinic in the afternoon.
- The Surgeon General will perform volunteer service at a DC AIDS service organization in the morning, and will participate in the multi-agency event. She will also visit a junior high or high school to lead a prevention/education program for teenagers.
- The Assistant Secretary for Health should lead HHS observances of World AIDS Day planned as part of the multi-agency observance.

HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

• The Secretary of should visit a project funded by the Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS Program (HOPWA).

INTERIOR

• The Secretary should visit a Reservation (with a representative of the Indian Health Service) to call attention to the growing epidemic among Native Americans.

JUSTICE

• Attorney General Reno will kickoff the multi-agency observance at 8:30 a.m., which will be available for satellite downlinks.

LABOR

• The Secretary should meet with Federal employees' unions to announce their endorsement of and participation in implementing the Presidential Directive on HIV/AIDS education in the workplace, and to salute the leadership of organized labor in responding to AIDS at work.

STATE

• The Secretary should hold a reception for the diplomatic corps at which the World AIDS Day observances around the world could be highlighted, and the global consequences of the epidemic upheld.

TRANSPORTATION

• The Secretary should hold a press conference with representatives of local transit authorities that are successfully using Federally-developed HIV/AIDS public service advertisements, buscards, etc. and encourage others to do likewise.

TREASURY

• The Secretary should make an address on the positive economic implications of health care reform for individuals with HIV and AIDS, and the cost to them and the nation of failure to enact reform.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

• The Secretary should visit patients with AIDS (preferably those in research protocols) in a V.A. Hospital.

ODJECI. HUMANDU DUY

I. EVENT: World AIDS Day 1993 falls on Wednesday, December 1st. We have forwarded to the appropriate scheduling offices the attached requests for the President, the Vice President, Mrs. Clinton and Mrs. Gore. The final attachment lists possible activities which Cabinet Secretaries may wish to undertake, and we are prepared to forward them to the appropriate department with your approval.

- II. BACKGROUND: The previous two administrations limited White House participation in World AIDS Day to lowering the lights and placing candles in the windows of the residence. I strongly believe that this Administration can and must do more. Many of the proposed activities can directly reinforce the Presidential Directive on HIV workplace education and/or can be used as opportunities to promote health care reform.
- III. RECOMMENDATION: I request and recommend that you lend your full support to the proposed activities outlined in the attached documents. If there are additional suggestions you have for observing World AIDS Day, I would be happy to discuss them with you.
