INTRODUCTION

The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) launched the Human Resources Line of Business effort in April 2004 to build a set of interagency enterprise architectures in compliance with Federal Enterprise Architecture standards for the human resources business function. The OMB named the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) the managing partner for the new Human Resources Line of Business (HR LOB).

The architectures provide a blueprint for transforming the Human Resources business function throughout the Federal Government, providing a basis for the Federal Government to rethink its approach to human resources management. In addition, the architectures have the potential to enable the Government to significantly improve the delivery of HR services and address the pressing issues facing the management and operation of the Federal Government's human resources. These include:

- Redundant systems, operations and investments.
- Disjointed HR systems that are not linked and do not share data.
- Declining knowledge-based HR workforce.
- Declining HR service delivery.
- Lack of integrated HR service delivery.
- Absence of performance measures and metrics for HR service delivery.

The vision of the HR LOB is to provide “Governmentwide, modern, cost-effective, standardized, and interoperable human resource solutions providing common core functionality to support the strategic management of human capital and addressing duplicative and redundant HR systems and processes across the Federal Government.”

Objectives

The objective of the HR LOB Data Model (DM) is to identify the data needed to execute the HR LOB Business Reference Model (BRM) processes. The HR LOB DM is depicted at both the conceptual and the logical level to describe the data in as much detail as possible, but it does not specify how the data will be physically implemented in a database. The HR LOB DM also provides a blueprint of the data that is needed to execute the HR LOB BRM processes, but it does not prescribe a physical data structure for agencies and shared service centers. The HR LOB DM will not dictate how agencies or shared service centers design their physical data structures and their databases. Future versions of the HR LOB DM will continue to depict data at the conceptual and logical levels but will not depict or prescribe physical data models.

The HR LOB DM represents one of the interagency enterprise architectures. The long-term objectives of the HR LOB DM project are threefold:

- Define the data needed to execute HR LOB business processes.
- Enable the Federal Government to communicate more accurately and efficiently about the structure, content, and purpose of human resources data.
- Enable standardization across three basic areas:
 - Data Description: provides a means to more uniformly describe Federal data, encouraging use of standards and thereby supporting the data's discovery and sharing.
 - Data Context: facilitates discovery of data through an approach to the categorization of data according to category systems, or taxonomies, including linkages to the other Federal Enterprise Architecture (FEA) reference models. Under FEA Data Reference Model (DRM) guidelines, data context refers to a standard approach to representing taxonomies that agencies use to categorize their data in order to share information regarding their data architectures. Such categorization enables the business context of data to be well understood.
 - Data Sharing: supports the reuse and exchange of data in cases in which sharing can consist of ad-hoc requests, and exchange can consist of more routine and often fixed, and reoccurring transactions between parties.

Near Term

The near-term objectives and focus of this project are to:

- Establish a baseline that identifies data needed to execute HR LOB Business Reference Model processes. Since the BRM is a depiction of the “target” business processes within the Federal Enterprise Architecture, the HR LOB Data Model reflects the future state and is a forward-looking model.
- Create a model that can be used as a high-level planning tool to execute the HR LOB concept of operations.

Long Term

Over the long term, the data model will support the HR LOB business goals and objectives by documenting the recommended Federal government HR data elements needed to execute the HR LOB Business Reference Model. As the DM evolves, it will be used by agencies and shared service centers to perform gap analysis to determine the differences between existing data structures and the DM.

The DM is an iterative product and will advance as the following HR LOB and OMB Enterprise Architecture products are updated:

- Business Reference Model - provides the basis for the DM; as it is updated over time, the DM will also be updated to reflect changes.
- HR LOB Target Requirements - documents core and long-term business requirements that will impact the DM.
- OMB FEA Data Reference Model Guidance - provides direction on DM methodology and work products.

Data Model Views

The HR LOB DM version 1 is described by two different views, or models:

- Conceptual Data Model (CDM): a single integrated data structure which reflects the structure of the business functions rather than the processing flow or physical arrangement of data. At this level, high-level relationships are identified among different data objects. The purpose of the conceptual model is to depict a technology-independent specification of the data required to execute HR LOB Business Reference Model processes. It serves as the focus of communication between technical and business stakeholders and covers all BRM subfunctions.
- Logical Data Model (LDM): builds upon the BRM and includes a further level of detail that supports both processes and systems. At this level, the purpose is to describe the data in as much detail as possible, without regard to how data will be physically implemented in a database. The logical model includes entities, attributes and relationships between entities. In the LDM:
 - All entities and relationships between entities are displayed.

- All attributes for each entity are specified.
- The primary key for each entity is specified.
- Foreign keys (keys identifying the relationship between different entities) are specified.
- Normalization occurs. Normalization is a formal technique for organizing data into tables and deals with certain common problems of redundancy and incompleteness.

This document describes both the conceptual and the logical data models, providing a high-level business view and detailed view of the data required to execute the HR LOB Business Reference Model version 1 processes.

PROJECT APPROACH

Scope

The scope of the HR LOB Data Model version 1 is defined by two factors: “project breadth” and “project depth.” Project breadth is defined by the HR LOB Business Reference Model. Only BRM processes were considered for data definitions in the conceptual and logical models. Project depth is defined by Federal Enterprise Architecture (FEA) standards. The FEA standards describe three data types.

Subsection	Description
Structured Data	Data described via the E-R (entity-relationship) or class model.
Unstructured Data	Data that is not described according to an E-R model, but is rather of a more free-form format, such as multimedia files or unstructured text.
SemiStructured Data	Data that has characteristics of both structured and unstructured data.

Focus of this DM effort

Completed an initial analysis of BRM inputs/outputs

The first version of the HR LOB DM focuses solely on structured data. The DM team did not model unstructured or semistructured data for this version, but has identified certain BRM inputs and outputs that may fall into the unstructured and semistructured category.

Methodology

The following steps describe the process-based approach used to develop the conceptual and logical data models. The HR LOB BRM served as the base to develop the data models and offers a set of high-level “data requirements” (i.e., process inputs and outputs) upon which the data model was developed. The steps taken to create the DM are outlined below.

Step 1: Met with OMB FEA DRM representatives to validate approach and alignment with OMB DRM requirements.

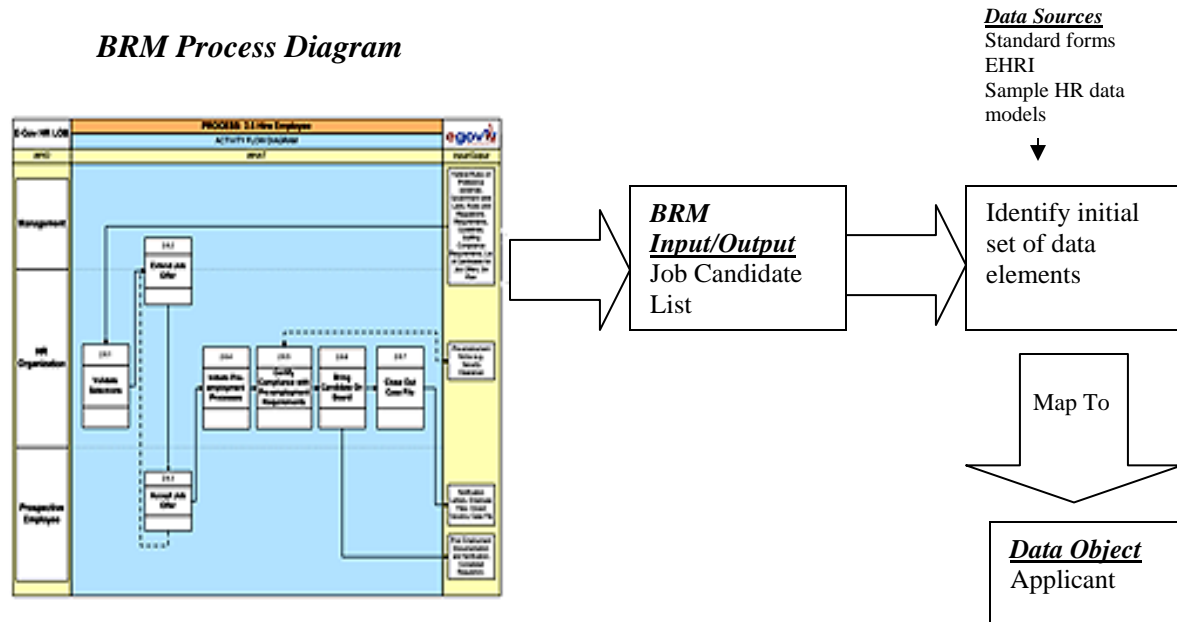

Step 2: Created the Conceptual Model²

- Analyzed BRM activities’ inputs and outputs to define possible data needed to execute BRM activities.
- Identified prospective data elements from several sources, including standard government forms, Enterprise Human Resource Integration (EHRI) metamodel and Interface Control Documents (ICDs), Central Personnel Data File (CPDF) reporting requirements, sample human resource data models, the HR Extensible Markup Language (XML) Consortium and OPM standard and optional forms.
- Defined high-level data objects. Data objects identify the highest level of common HR information from which data entities and attributes are derived. At the conceptual level, data objects represent a set of ideas, abstractions or things that can be identified with explicit boundaries that are specific to HR.

² The complete conceptual model is included in Appendix 2, including entity-relationship diagrams and textual descriptions of the data objects and dependencies between data objects.

- Mapped BRM inputs and outputs to data objects to create the conceptual data model. The illustration below describes the mapping process.

- Validated the model with DM workgroup participants.

Step 3: Created the Logical Data Model

The data model team expanded the conceptual model data objects to create entities and attributes for the DM logical model.

- The DM team examined all BRM processes and identified the data associated with each process. Figure 3, BRM Version 1 End-to-End Process Flow Diagram depicts the subfunctions and processes examined for the DM.

- The team also identified which BRM process inputs and outputs could be modeled. In some cases the DM project team could not identify structured data associated with a BRM input or output and/or the identified BRM input or output was classified as unstructured (e.g., a memo, a ruling or advice, etc.).
- Certain data objects defined in the conceptual model were not included in the logical model, based on whether or not these were structured data. For example, policy is included as a data object in the conceptual model. A policy is basically a text document and was classified as unstructured, and thus was not included in the logical model.

Step 4: Identified Information Exchange Packages for HR LOB Core Processes

Information Exchange Packages (IEP) represented in DM version 1 are specific recurring data exchanges between a shared service center and an agency or a shared service center and a third party, and are an important part of the FEA DRM data-sharing standardization area. HR LOB Business Reference Model process inputs and outputs provide the context for defining IEPs. The figure below details an example of a job offer information exchange package. In the HR LOB Acquire phase of the human resources lifecycle, the subfunction “Staff Acquisition” is composed of processes such as “Hire Employee.” The BRM subfunction and process (Staff Acquisition and Hire Employee, respectively) translate to the DM subject area and super type. The information exchange package includes data needed to pass a job offer between two organizations, such as offer name, date of offer and salary amount. A high-level list of IEPs and associated DM entities and attributes were identified for HR LOB core processes and are included in the logical model data file.

Data Model Workgroup Sessions

A collaborative approach was used to create both the conceptual and logical data models. A group of HR LOB agency representatives served on the DM workgroup and attended several validation sessions to provide input to the model. These are detailed below:³

DM VERSION 1 DOWNSTREAM USE

HR LOB DM version 1 will serve as a baseline, identifying the data needed to execute BRM processes. Establishing a baseline is the first step toward meeting OMB FEA DRM requirements and as such, the entities and attributes depicted in the model do not have a mandatory or optional designation. The mandatory and optional designation will be addressed in later versions of the DM for the following reasons.

- Long-term BRM requirements have not been validated. The DM should follow the BRM requirements; thus it is too soon to discuss mandatory vs. optional designation for the DM.
- DM version 1 is designed to identify data corresponding to BRM requirements. It tells providers “what’s done”, not “how to do it,” meaning the DM is not intended as a design-level document and will not now or in future iterations detail or prescribe a physical model structure. A future step will involve aligning to OMB DRM version 2 requirements, which includes further guidance on data description, context and sharing.
- OMB FEA DRM guidelines provide no guidance on mandatory vs. optional designation:
 - “The DRM needs to be tested in operation situations.... The DRM will tell agencies [that] certain things will be optional and certain things will be mandatory. We haven’t figured that out yet, and piloting the DRM will help us do that.”⁴

The OMB has a roadmap for the FEA DRM that specifies what will be contained in future volumes. Future volumes will continue to address the standardization areas necessary to promote a common approach to the categorization and exchange of data.⁵ Standardization is advanced through a focus on three areas:

- Information Management - Use of data and information in support of business operations.

⁵ OMB DRM vol.II is scheduled for release late December 2005.

- Information Architecture - Definition of the data linked to specific business operations (functions).
- Information Exchange - Standard, repeatable processes and technologies in support of exchanging data.

The HR LOB DM will follow this roadmap but will not prescribe a physical data model for shared service centers or customers.

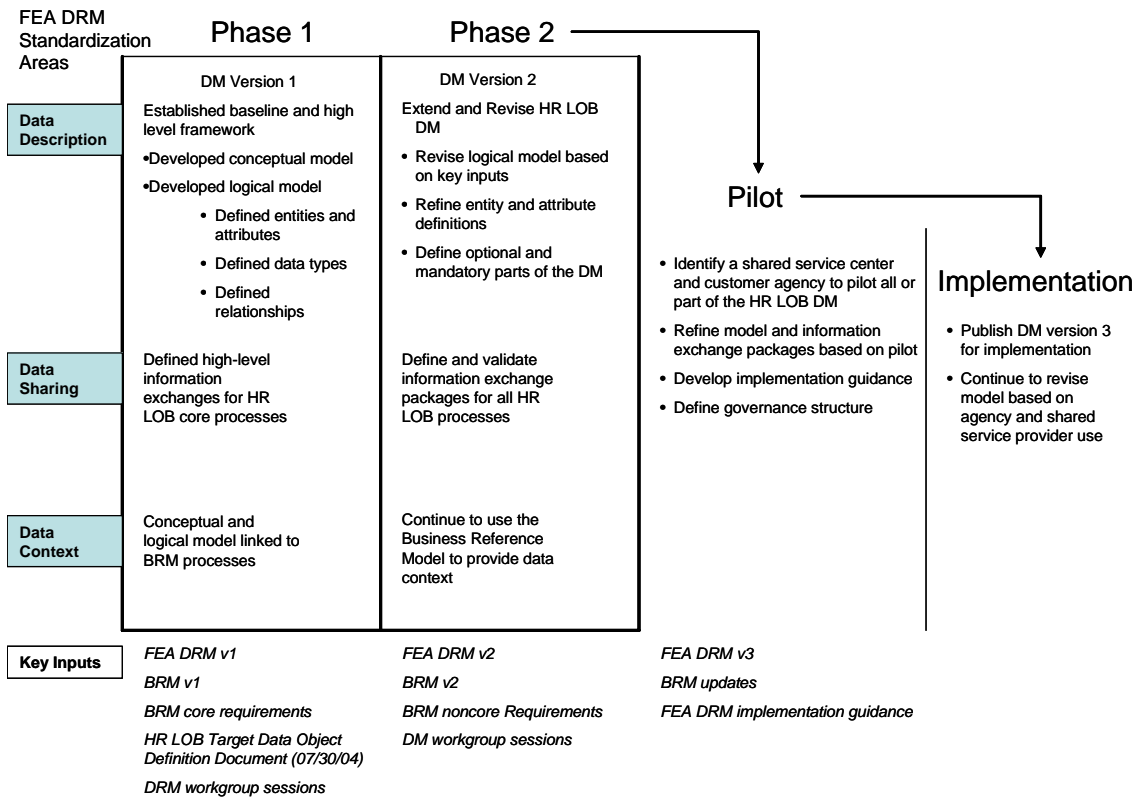

MIGRATION STRATEGY

DM version 1 establishes a framework that enables sharing and reuse of information across HR LOB Business Reference Model processes. DM version 1 provides a first step to meeting the three standardization areas set forth by the FEA DRM: data description, data standardization, and data context.

- Data Description: the HR LOB DM is described by a conceptual and a logical model.
- Data Sharing: for the HR LOB DM, data sharing is defined by information exchange packages.
- Data Context: the BRM provides the taxonomy, describing human resources subfunctions and processes.

Migration to the DM is an iterative process and will occur in phases. The graphic below depicts a high-level migration strategy for moving the DM forward and toward eventual implementation according to the FEA DRM standardization areas.

Phase 1

Phase 1 represents this DM project and DM version 1. The objective was to establish a baseline that represents the data needed to execute BRM processes.

Phase 2

During Phase 2, the emphasis is on revising the model and information exchange packages based on HR LOB long-term requirements and FEA DRM version 2 specifications. It is recommended that a DM workgroup consisting of shared service centers and customer agencies revise DM version 1 according to FEA DRM version 2 guidance. Phase 2 activities should include the following:

- Refine entities and attributes.
- Refine attribute definitions.
- Validate data types.
- Refine information exchange packages for HR LOB core processes.
- Identify and validate information exchange packages for HR LOB mid- and long-term processes.
- Identify and validate unstructured and semistructured data needed to execute BRM processes.

During the development of DM version 2, a key decision will involve how to pilot the HR LOB DM version 2. The decision will need to take into account many factors including, but not limited to, the following:

- FEA DRM guidance: currently FEA guidance states that the only cases in which the DRM is mandated to be followed or used (beyond its use as a high-level framework) are when repeatable data architecture blueprints are needed for new Lines of Business as defined in the Federal Enterprise Architecture and as charted by OMB.⁶
- HR LOB requirements: core and long-term requirements as well as the timeframes to institute these requirements will affect which parts of the DM are optional or mandatory and when to conduct a DM pilot.
- Shared service center and agency budget and system constraints: the timeframe for piloting and implementing the HR LOB DM will depend on current system capabilities and the budget for enhancements that may be required to add data elements to a system and processes to capture those data elements.

Pilot

The Chief Information Officer Council's Architecture and Infrastructure Committee (AIC) is planning to conduct a one-year test of the FEA DRM with interested departments and agencies to test and refine information sharing. A pilot of the HR LOB DM is necessary to accomplish the following:

- Provide context on cost to implement the model: the identified shared service center and agency can conduct a gap analysis to determine differences in data elements between the HR LOB BRM and the provider, and implementation feasibility, timeline to implement and potential costs.

- Revise the model based on pilot findings: this takes the model from a framework to reality-based findings on which parts of the model work and which will need revision based on actual implementation.
- Provide insight on the type of governance structure necessary to ensure that the model is implemented, feedback is taken from shared service centers and agencies, and a process is established to revise the model based on feedback.

Implementation

- Publish DM version 3 for implementation along with implementation guidance for use by HR LOB shared service centers. Implementation is defined as using DM version 3 as a framework for identifying and sharing data to execute BRM processes.
- Continue to revise model. Because the DM is a living model, it will need to be revised as new business requirements emerge from the HR LOB and as agencies and shared service centers use and provide feedback on the model.
- Establish a governance structure to capture feedback and revise the model accordingly.

Appendix 2: DM Conceptual Model

Note: The conceptual and logical models are issued solely for the purpose of description, from the data associated with the HR LOB Business Reference Model processes. The depictions in this document are in no way to be construed as an official interpretation of statutory or regulatory requirements administered by the Office of Personnel Management.

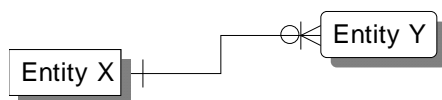

Model Assumptions

- The conceptual model is based on the HR LOB Business Reference Model.
- Only major relationships in the model are shown to reduce the complexity of the model. It is expected that as parts of the model are implemented, other relationships will be added. Additionally, the model highlights the major data objects needed to perform BRM processes.

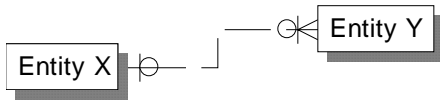

Reading the Model

The graphical version of the conceptual model depicts relationships in the following manner.

Relationship Types

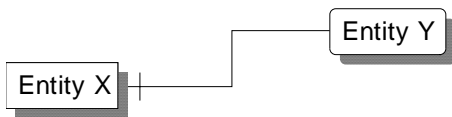

Identifying Relationship – This relationship is one in which the child entity (entity Y) is considered dependent on the parent entity (entity X). A solid line indicates an identifying relationship.

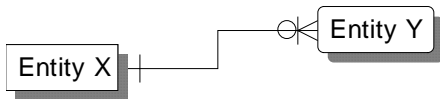

Non-identifying relationship – This relationship is one where the child (entity Y) can be identified independently of the parent (entity X). A dashed line indicates a non-identifying relationship.

Cardinality

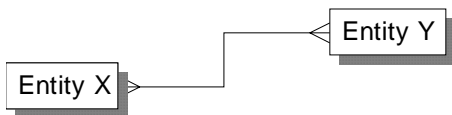

Cardinality is the frequency of a relationship between two entities. The basic types are One to One, One to Many, and Many to Many.

One to One relationship – Every record in entity X matches exactly one record in entity Y. Every record in entity Y matches exactly one record in entity X.

One to Many relationship – Every record in entity X matches zero or more records in entity Y. Every record in entity Y matches exactly one record in entity X.

Many to Many relationship – Every entry in entity X matches zero or more records in entity Y. Every entry in entity Y matches zero or more records in entity X.

Subject Areas

A complete end-to-end conceptual model is shown in the pages that follow along with a conceptual model for each subject areas. A subject area is a major data category with relevance to the organization from a business point of view. Subject areas span one or more processes or functions; data objects frequently appear in multiple subject areas. The data subject areas are as follows:

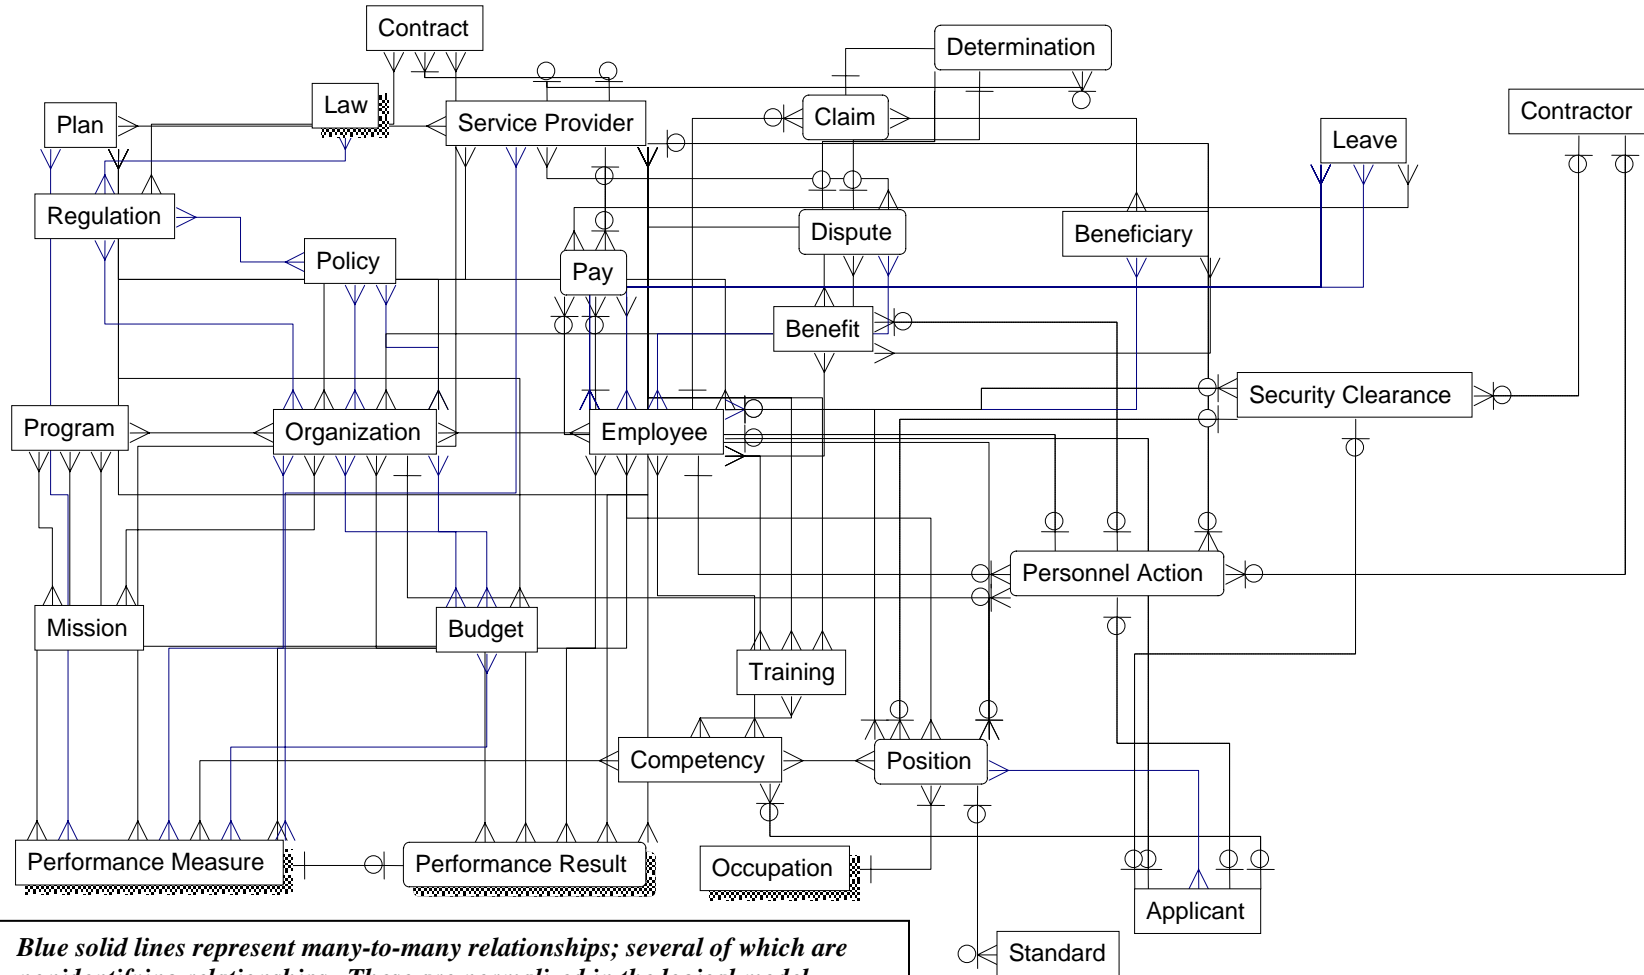

Employee: captures information and shows associations for an individual appointed or elected to a position in or under the executive branch of the U.S. government and who occupies a position in an organization of the U.S. government. Data associations include performance measure, benefit, and pay.

Organization: captures information and shows associations for a U.S. government administrative structure with a mission to include all levels of U.S. governmental organizations. Data associations include employee, policy, and plan.

Service Provider: captures information and shows associations for an external organization that provides an ongoing service (HR LOB subfunctions) to an organization and/or an employee. Data associations include contract, budget, and personnel action.

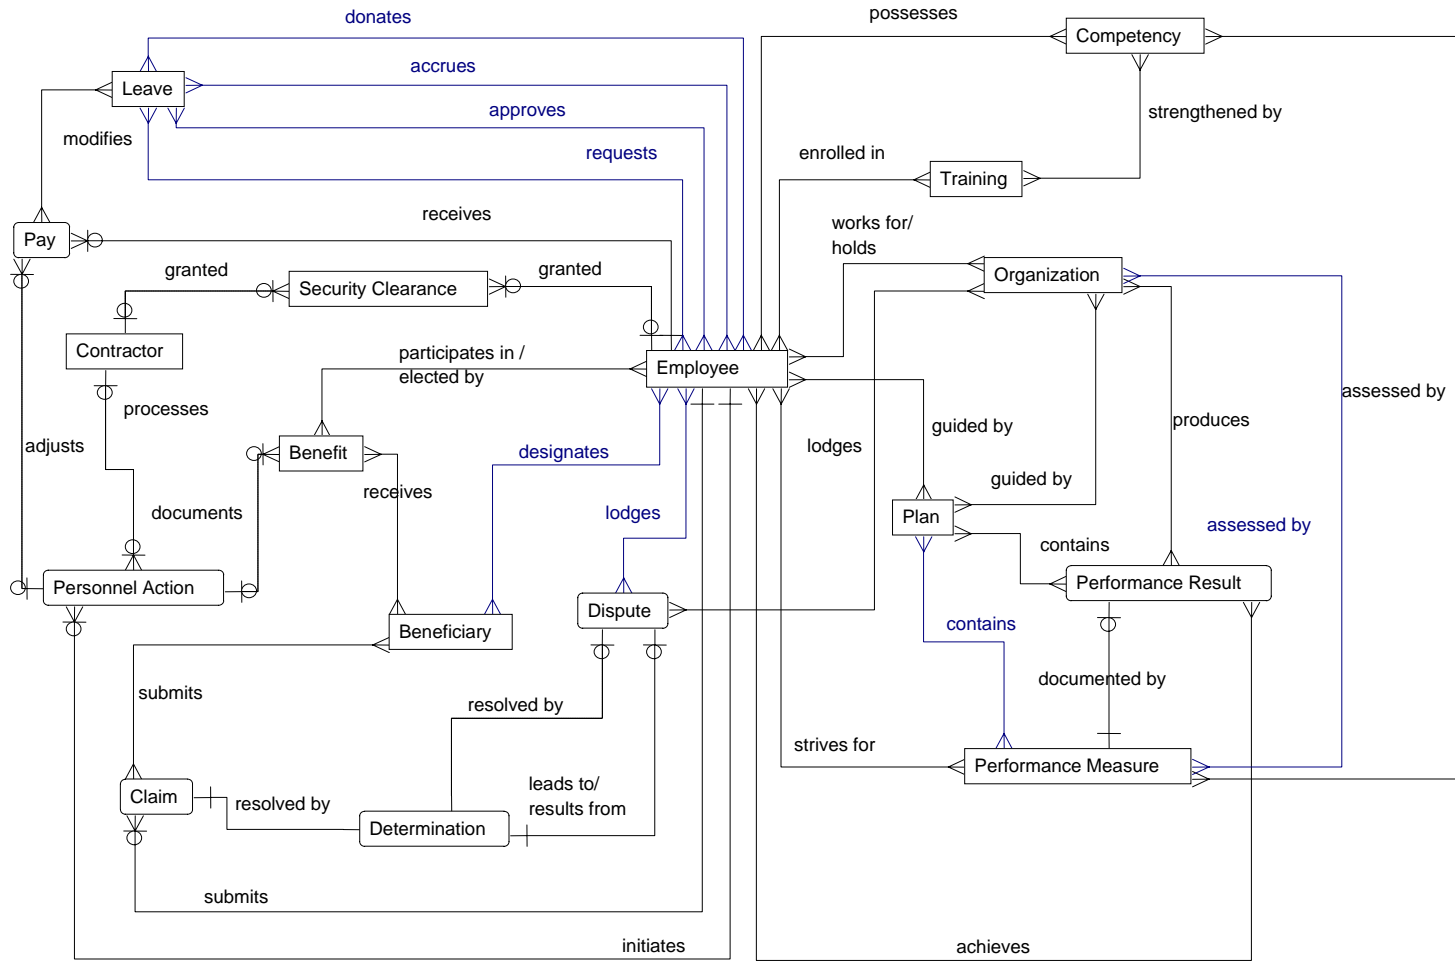

Position: captures information and shows associations for a specific job instance requiring an established set of duties and competencies. Data associations include organization, applicant and personnel action.

Conceptual Model Data Objects and Definitions

The data objects and definitions presented identify the highest level common HR information from which data entities, elements and attributes are derived. At the concept level, data objects represent a set of ideas, abstractions or things that can be identified with explicit boundaries that are specific to HR.

Twenty-nine data objects were identified based on the following:

- Examining all Business Reference Model process inputs and outputs to identify data groupings.
- Reviewing existing conceptual models and past HR LOB work⁷.
- Incorporating input from the DM workgroup session held on 8/16/05.
- The data objects and the data object definitions are provided in the following table. Definitions are taken from EHRI data dictionary and the HR LOB Target Data Object Definition document dated July 30, 2004.

Data Object	Definition	Dependency	Dependent Upon
APPLICANT	A person who has formally submitted an application for employment for a job with the U.S. Federal government.
BENEFICIARY	A person or entity who, because of a relationship with an EMPLOYEE, receives a BENEFIT or other service. Includes, but is not limited to, EMPLOYEE's spouse, dependents and ex-spouse and a deceased EMPLOYEE's survivors.	Dependent	Employee
BENEFIT	Entitlements that provide a cash value, immediate or deferred, to an EMPLOYEE or BENEFICIARY. Examples include group life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, educational benefits, pensions, and other fringe benefits such as parking and transit subsidies.	Dependent	Employee
BUDGET	An itemization of an ORGANIZATION's estimated or intended expenditures for a given period, along with proposals for financing them. The BUDGET reflects the FTE allocation given to the ORGANIZATION, monies allocated for training and other line items for the planning period.	Dependent	Organization

CLAIM	An official, written assertion by an EMPLOYEE to receive a BENEFIT or entitlement from his or her employer. A DETERMINATION must occur in favor of the EMPLOYEE before an EMPLOYEE can receive the BENEFIT.	Dependent	Employee
COMPETENCY	A kernel of knowledge, skills, abilities and/or personal characteristics required by a position and held by an employee.	Independent
CONTRACT	A legally binding agreement between two or more parties for performing, or refraining from performing, some specified act in exchange for lawful consideration. CONTRACT examples include, but are not limited to, memoranda of understanding (MOUs), interagency agreements and procurement contracts.	Dependent	Organization
CONTRACTOR	A person/company who has been formally engaged to perform work for the U.S. Government, but is not an EMPLOYEE of the U.S. Government.	Independent
DETERMINATION	A formal finding derived from disciplined research and analysis. Examples include, but are not limited to, DETERMINATION that results from the grievance process, DETERMINATION stemming from a workers compensation CLAIM, DETERMINATION resulting from the adjudication of a security clearance and DETERMINATION resulting from a retirement CLAIM.	Dependent	Claim
DISPUTE	A complaint made by an EMPLOYEE or BENEFICIARY that may be formally or informally adjudicated.	Dependent	Employee
EMPLOYEE	An individual appointed or elected to a POSITION in or under the executive branch of the U.S. Government and who occupies a position in an ORGANIZATION of the U.S. Government. Includes attributes such as name, address, social security number and date of birth.	Dependent	Position
LEAVE	Information pertaining to the earning and expenditure of leave hours that an employee can be absent from their job, with or without pay. Leave information is tracked every pay period.	Dependent	Employee
LAW	An enacted rule, governing principal or judicial ruling derived from legislation to which Federal Government ORGANIZATIONs must adhere.	Independent
MISSION	The overall philosophical and operational purpose to which an ORGANIZATION aspires and that provides a context for the ORGANIZATION's plans.	Independent
OCCUPATION	A subgroup of a job family that includes all jobs at the various skill levels in a particular kind of work. Jobs within an occupation are similar to each other with regard to subject matter and basic knowledge and skill requirements.	Independent

ORGANIZATION	A U.S. Government administrative structure with a mission to include all levels of U.S. Governmental organizations. Typically, a group of EMPLOYEES performing U.S. Government jobs for a given purpose. Examples are agency, department and team. An ORGANIZATION may be composed of multiple ORGANIZATIONS; similarly, an ORGANIZATION may be part of one or more ORGANIZATIONS.	Independent
PAY	The compensation received by an EMPLOYEE for performing a job. PAY may include regular PAY, overtime PAY, lump-sum PAY, separation PAY, retirement PAY and monetary awards.	Independent
PERFORMANCE MEASURE	A specific quantifiable result that is expected relative to a given operational area. Examples include time to hire, EMPLOYEE attrition, self-service usage rate, and individual performance expectations.	Dependent	Plan
PERFORMANCE RESULT	The result that is achieved for each PERFORMANCE MEASURE that is being managed to and tracked. PERFORMANCE RESULTS are often compiled monthly and used to derive a dashboard highlighting successes and areas for improvement.	Dependent	Performance Measure
PERSONNEL ACTION	An official personnel notification indicating a required change in an EMPLOYEE's job or status. Examples include hire, separation, retirement, transfer and PAY increase.	Dependent	Employee
PLAN	A documented method for accomplishing an ORGANIZATION's goals and or objectives. Examples of PLANS used in the HR LOB context include: strategic PLANS, operational PLANS and individual PLANS. A strategic PLAN is a set of broad prescribed actions or endeavors that provide a focus on achievement for an ORGANIZATION's MISSION. Logical Data Model Notes

Keys

A relational database model contains multiple entities in which relationships between the entities are not expressly defined. Instead, primary and foreign keys are used to define the relationships among database entities. Primary keys are the identifiers that are used to uniquely identify a record in a particular entity. There are two main types of primary keys: natural keys and logical keys. “Natural” keys are used as the primary key in most examples in which a standard data set is used across the entire Federal Government and the unique identifier in that data set has external, real-world meaning, i.e. nature of action code. In those instances in which a natural key is not suitable or applicable to the particular data set, an arbitrary or “logical” key is used to uniquely identify each record, i.e. machine-generated number or type identification.

Derived Fields

Fields that can be calculated, or “derived” fields, were intentionally left out of the logical model.

Definitions

The DM team referenced the ISO/IEC 11179-4 document titled “Information Technology- Specification and Standardization of Data Elements” as a guide in forming data definitions. The document outlines the following rules for constructing data definitions:

A data definition shall:

- Be unique (within any data dictionary in which it appears).
- Be stated in the singular.
- State what the concept is, not only what it is not.
- Be stated as a descriptive phrase or sentence(s).
- Contain only commonly understood abbreviations.
- Be expressed without embedding definitions of other data elements or underlying concepts.
