

Supplemental Security Income (SSI) In The District Of Columbia

2012

What is SSI?

SSI, or Supplemental Security Income, is a federal program that provides monthly cash payments to people in need. SSI is for people who are 65 or older, as well as for blind or disabled people of any age, including children.

To qualify you also must have little or no income and few resources. This means that the value of the things you own must be less than $2,000 if you are single or less than $3,000 if you are married. The value of your home does not count if you live in it. Usually, the value of your car does not count. And the value of certain other resources, such as a burial plot, may not count either.

To receive SSI, you also must apply for any other cash benefits you may be able to get.

You must live in the United States or Northern Mariana Islands to receive SSI. If you are not a U.S. citizen, but you are lawfully residing in the United States, you still may be able to receive SSI. For more information, ask for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) For Noncitizens (Publication No. 05-11051).

The District of Columbia adds money only to the federal payment of individuals living in Adult Foster Care Homes and individuals living in Medicaid facilities. Persons in these living arrangements receive a single payment at the beginning of each month that includes both the federal SSI payment and the supplement from the District of Columbia.

Medical assistance

If you receive SSI, you usually can get medical assistance (Medicaid) automatically. If you have questions about Medicaid, contact your local department of human services.

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP)

If you receive SSI, you may be able to get help through the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), formerly known as food stamps. SNAP can help you buy more food without spending more money. However, Social Security does not decide if you qualify for SNAP. If you live in a household where everyone is applying for or receiving SSI, you can apply for SNAP at a Social Security office. If not, you must apply at your local department of human services.

Other social services

Other services you may be able to get through your local department of human services include:

- Information, referral and follow-up services;
- Exploration of service needs; and
- Liaison with service providers.

For more information, contact your local department of human services.

Monthly SSI payment amounts

Not all SSI recipients receive the maximum amount. Your payment may be lower if you have other income.
