What has remained constant is Citadel FCU's unwavering commitment to providing the best financial products and services in a safe and sound manner, coupled with exceptional service by a professional and knowledgeable staff and volunteers. As demonstrated in this application, Citadel FCU will extend this level of member service through its commitment to the Greater Philadelphia community and looks to help an even greater number of members/owners gain financial self sufficiency and achieve their financial goals.

Well-Positioned to Serve

Citadel Federal Credit Union requests the proposed expansion based on a commitment to reach out to the entire Philadelphia community while strengthening its long term financial stability. With its long established history operating and meeting financial needs in the community it now proposes to serve in its entirety, Citadel Federal Credit Union is confident of its ability to provide a wide array of affordably priced financial products and services to all of the residents of the proposed community. Citadel Federal Credit Union believes that a community charter expansion will enable the credit union to continue to impact in a positive way the lives of its existing members as well as potential members.

Citadel Federal Credit Union currently serves Chester County and Lancaster City. A community charter expansion would enable all residents in the Greater Philadelphia community to benefit from the affordable financial services currently provided by Citadel Federal Credit Union.

From a financial and management perspective, the credit union is extremely well-positioned to extend its full array of services to the entirety of the proposed community. (b)(8) institution with just over $1 billion in assets. With net worth strong at 10.54% and solid earnings reported at 1.06% for the most recent reporting period, the credit union clearly has the financial capacity and strength required to effectively market and serve the entire community. The table provided below illustrates more clearly the strong financial performance historically demonstrated by Citadel Federal Credit Union.

A Proven Record of Service

Citadel Federal Credit Union has consistently demonstrated an outstanding record of member service over the years. This rich history, coupled with its successful efforts in marketing and serving diverse groups of individuals within its current community charter, has provided the credit union with valuable insight on the types of challenges and opportunities that will be presented as it prepares to reach out to the entirety of the proposed community. The credit union is committed to serving the entirety of the proposed community, fully recognizes the challenges associated with the expansion of its community charter, and is convinced that its products and services can positively impact the lives of tens of thousands of additional prospective members who are not today eligible to be a part of Citadel Federal Credit Union.

Integral to the success of the credit union throughout its 70+ years of operation is the fact that strategic decisions affecting the credit union have always been made with the long term best interests of the membership in mind combined with careful consideration, examination and analysis of the possible financial impact such decisions may have on the credit union and its outstanding safety and soundness position.

Expansion of its community charter will provide the credit union with greater diversification through access to additional members who need lower cost financial services available to them. The Board and management of the credit union are convinced that managed growth and greater diversification, consistent with established principles of safety and soundness, is essential for the credit union to gain the benefits of economies of scale going forward. It is believed that spreading overhead costs over a larger membership base will only serve to further strengthen Citadel Federal Credit Union's already solid financial position.

The credit union recognizes that many strategic decisions intended to promote future growth opportunities can potentially have a short-term negative impact on earnings. The investments Citadel Federal Credit Union has made to date have been done in such a manner as to properly and effectively position the credit union to serve the proposed community. As growth continues, Citadel Federal Credit Union will continue to wisely and prudently re-invest in its resources in an effort to provide excellent member service through people, facilities, technology, and financial education throughout the proposed community.

Citadel Federal Credit Union is confident of its ability to serve this community and, based upon its already stellar performance in meeting the needs of a community over 24 years, is eager to provide its wide array of affordable financial products and services to all residents of the proposed community.

II. Evidence to Support the Proposed Area as a Well-Defined Local Community

Well-Defined Local Community

Having served a local community for over twenty four years, Citadel Federal Credit Union clearly understands that approval of a community charter is based on a single, geographically well-defined area where individuals have common interests and/or interact. Based on these requirements, the credit union is convinced that this application clearly and unquestionably establishes the proposed area as a community under NCUA's Chartering and Field of Membership Manual. This section of the application will demonstrate that the Greater Philadelphia Community is a well-defined local community by demonstrating and documenting the interaction and common interests of the proposed community. Citadel Federal Credit Union contends that the proposed area to be served is both a well-defined and local community as demonstrated through compelling and convincing information and documentation that includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Clearly defined geographic boundaries.
- Partnerships and Regional Development Organizations that clearly substantiate the proposed community as being the Greater Philadelphia Community.
- Major roadways that promote trade and interaction among residents and businesses, including commuting patterns that reinforce the City of Philadelphia as the hub of the proposed community.
- Population density figures clearly showing Philadelphia as the hub of the community.
- Robust employment opportunities in the region.
- Shared regional media, including newspapers, magazines, and radio are prevalent throughout the community.
- Government and regional partnerships concentrate on the five counties within the proposed community for shared services and programs.
- Business concentration is located within the proposed community.
- Entertainment, recreation and attractions attended by residents from across the community.
- Shared medical, transportation, higher education, and media facilities are utilized by residents throughout the community.

The city of Philadelphia forms the economic hub of the proposed community. The proposed community is commonly referred to as The Greater Philadelphia Community. This area is considered the Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Metropolitan Division (Code 37964) by the U.S. Census Bureau.

The interdependence of Philadelphia with the contiguous counties of Bucks, Chester, Delaware and Montgomery is demonstrated in every aspect of community life. Arts and Entertainment, Culture, Education, Employment, Health Care, Shopping and Sports link the surrounding counties and Philadelphia in an interdependent and interactive community. From the working population who travel to and from Philadelphia for their employment, to the families who travel to Philadelphia for its culture, economic vitality, sporting events, social life and history, the communities are inextricably linked.

The city of Philadelphia is the hub of the community with a population of 1.4 million people. Philadelphia has a "strong mayoral" form of government which interacts with numerous organizations and agencies to promote the Greater Philadelphia community. The gridiron of the streets in central Philadelphia (the area known as "Center City") follows the original plan of the city's founder, William Penn. Penn Square, located midway between the city's two rivers and occupied by City Hall, continues to mark the city's center.

Residents' commuting patterns support the city of Philadelphia as the unmistakable hub of the community with 72.8% of Philadelphia residents working within their county and 17.7% residents from the outlining counties commuting into the city. Thirty-four percent of the Center City Philadelphia workforce lives in the four counties (Bucks, Chester, Delaware, and Montgomery) that, along with the hub of Philadelphia, comprise the Greater Philadelphia community. In addition, the city of Philadelphia is considered the hub for the community's attractions, higher education, medical facilities, sporting venues, and arts and culture.

Perhaps the number one attraction for the Greater Philadelphia community is in the heart of the city of Philadelphia, the Independence National Historic Park, attracting over 8,011,483 visitors annually. Independence Park is an L-shaped area west of the Delaware River that features Philadelphia's most renowned historical sites—called the birthplace of American government. This historical area is a source of nationwide emphasis as a national historical treasure that is the focus of visitor traffic among the highest of such historical sites in this country and certainly a source of significant local pride.

The historical nature of Philadelphia is likewise a draw for bringing the local community together on a regularly interactive basis for educational, social, cultural and other activities.

With 21 of the 62 colleges and universities in the community and 45.6% of the student enrollment, Philadelphia is the important educational hub of the community. Seventy percent of all community nonprofit cultural organizations are located in the city of Philadelphia, accounting for about 81% of total spending.

The United States Office of Management and Budget (OMB) has recognized the five-county Greater Philadelphia Community of Pennsylvania as a Metropolitan Division. According to the Office of Management and Budget, Revised Definitions of Metropolitan Statistical Areas, New Definitions of Metropolitan Statistical Areas and Combined Statistical Areas, and Guidance on Uses of the Statistical Definitions of These Areas published June 3, 2003, the Philadelphia, PA Metropolitan Division includes the counties of Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery, and Philadelphia in the state of Pennsylvania.

A metropolitan division consists of one or more main counties that represent an employment center or centers, plus adjacent counties associated with the main county or counties through commuting ties.

A county will be identified as a main county of a Metropolitan Division if:

- Greater than 50% of its employed residents work within the county
- The ratio of the number of jobs located within that county to its number of employed residents is at least 0.75
- The highest rate of out-commuting from the county to any other county is less than 15%.

After all main counties have been identified; each remaining county in the Metropolitan Area will be included in the Metropolitan Division associated with the main county to which the county at issue sends the highest percentage of its out-commuters. Counties within a Metropolitan Division must be contiguous.

By definition the Philadelphia, PA Metropolitan Division demonstrates community interaction and bonding through commuting ties. According to analysis conducted by Scarborough Research in 2006, 72.8% of Philadelphia County workers stay in their county for work and 17.7% of the workers in Philadelphia County commute from the four suburban counties in the community. These commuting patterns are important linkages between the city and surrounding counties. The adjacent counties also have a high degree of economic and social integration with the Philadelphia hub as is demonstrated later in this section.

	Total # of Workers in Philadelphia	Total # of Greater Philadelphia Community Residents Who Work in The Hub City of Philadelphia	% of Philadelphia Employees Who Reside in the Greater Philadelphia Community
Philadelphia	527,105	476,781	90.50%

The following documentation, in addition to the appendices to this request, establishes the proposed community, The Greater Philadelphia Community, as a well-defined local community by demonstrating the interaction and common interests among the residents of the community.

Clearly Defined Geographic Boundaries

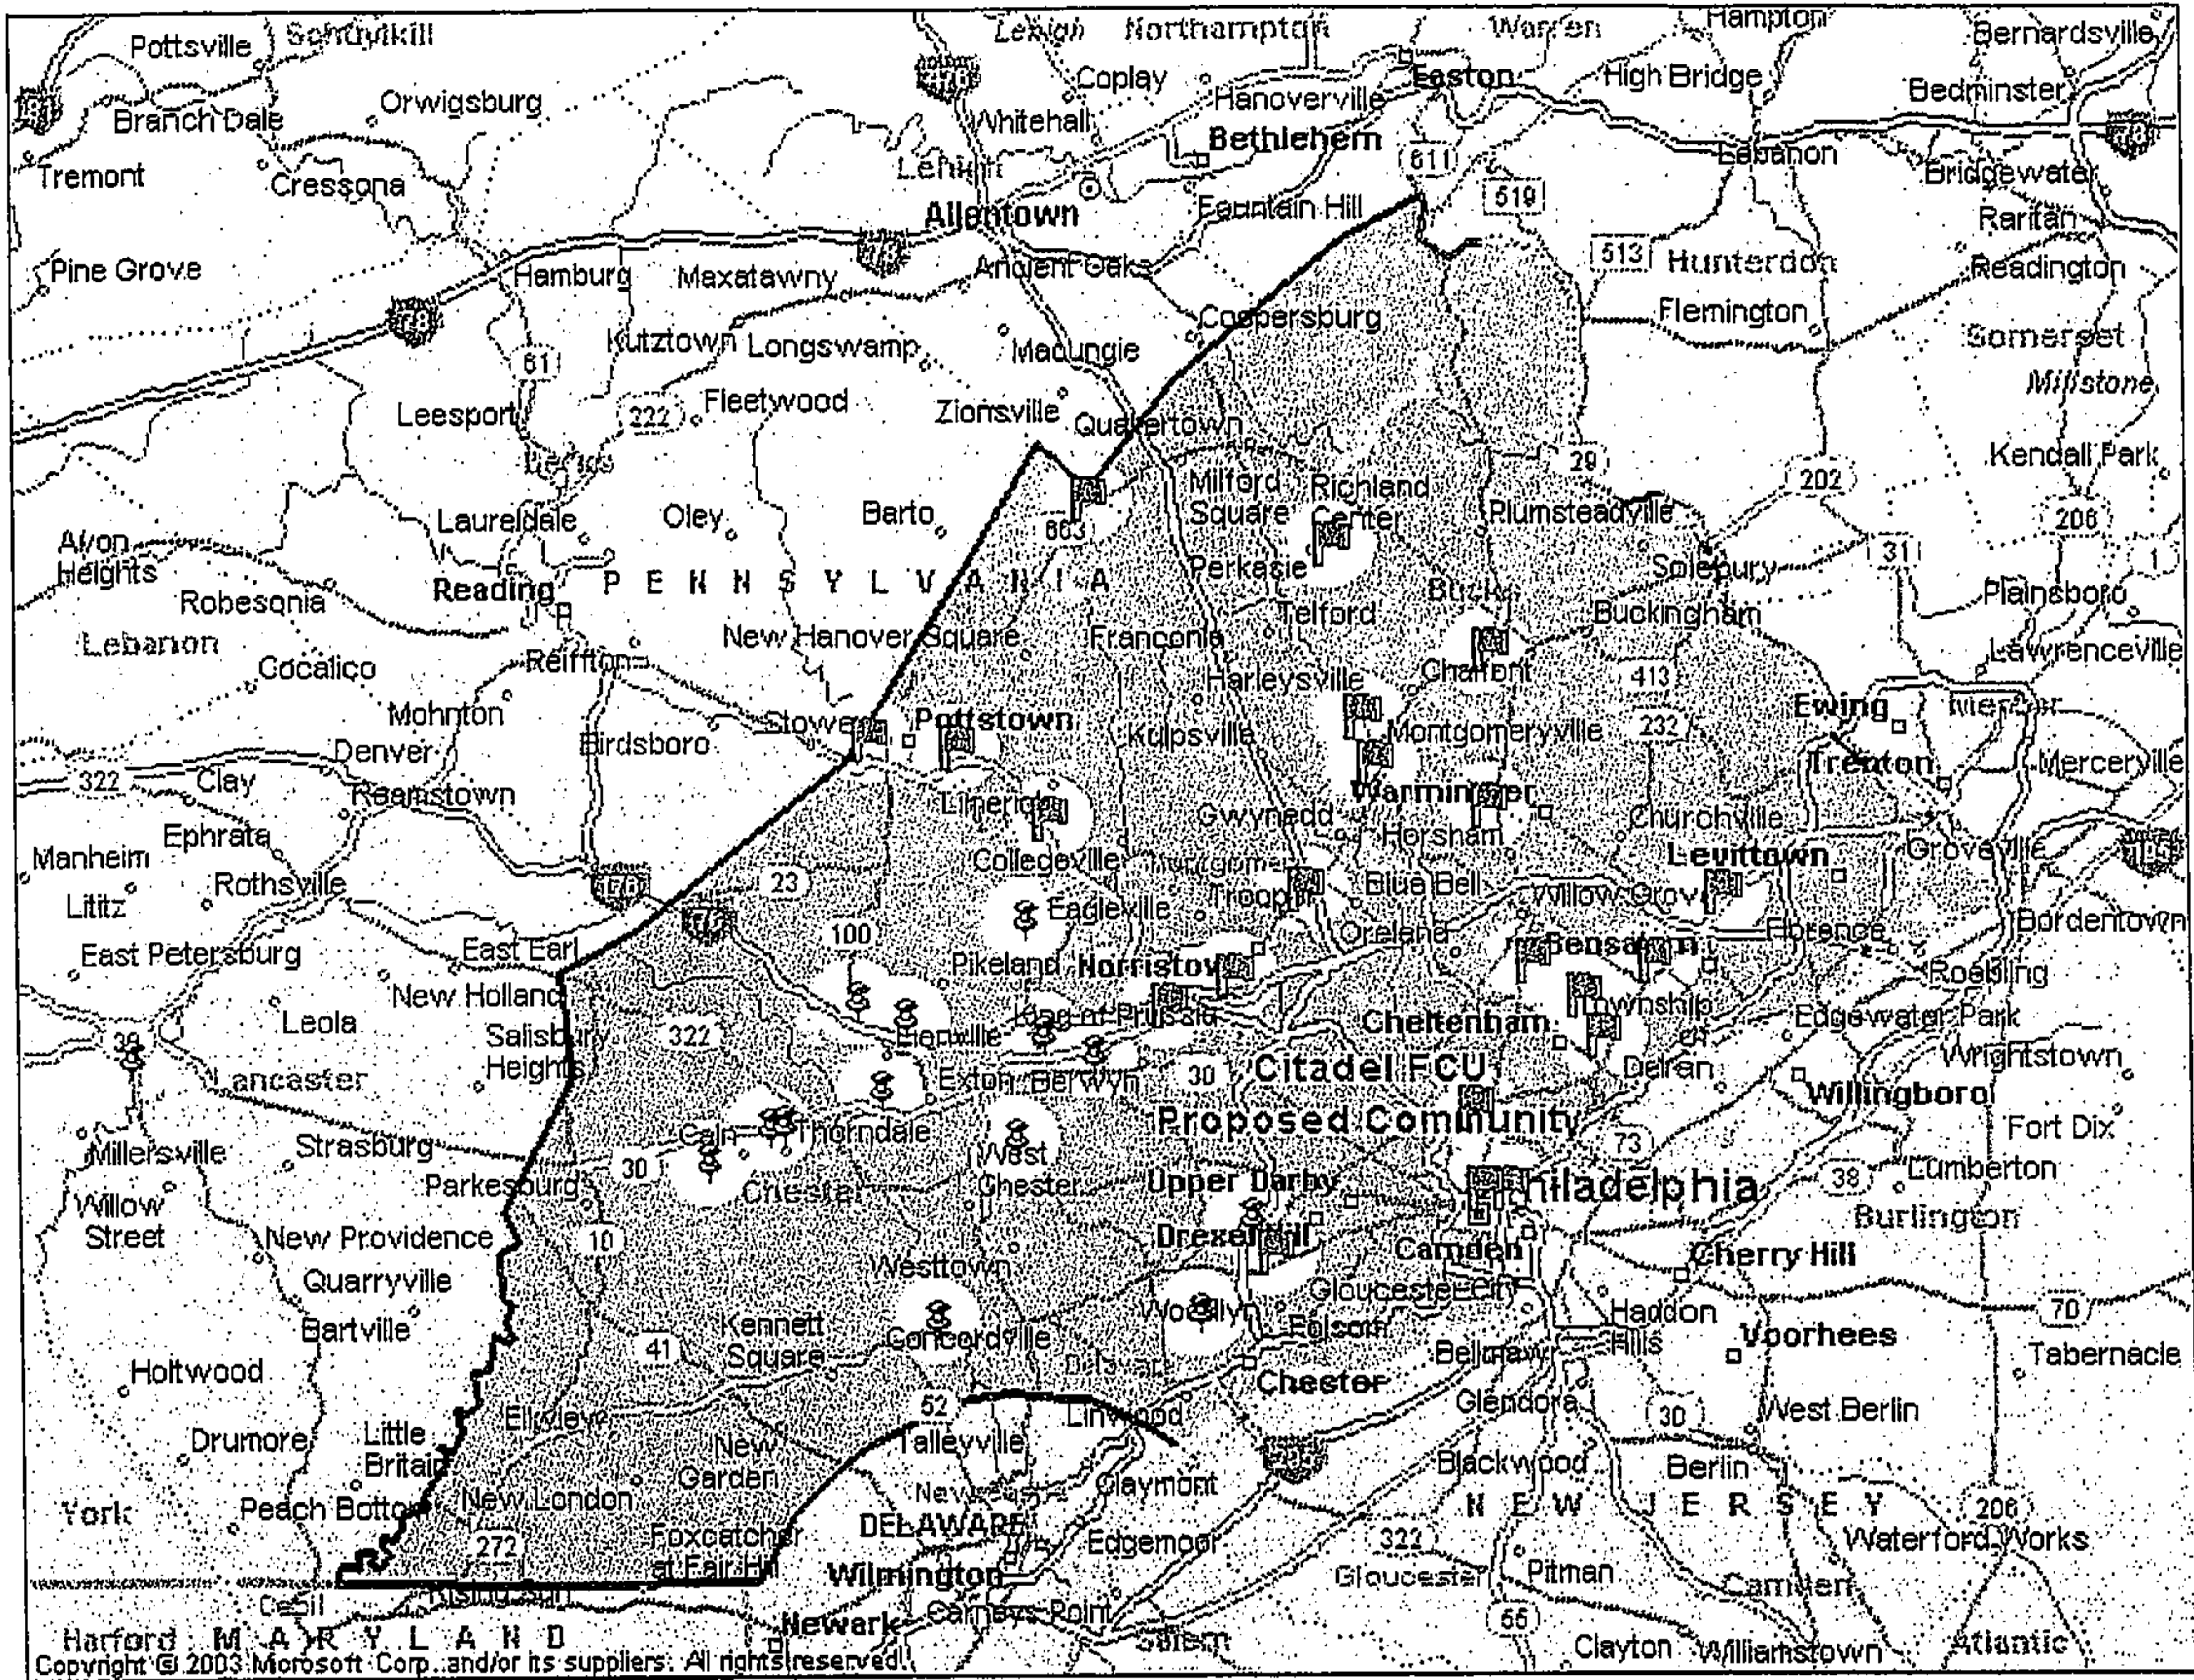

The proposed community has clearly defined geographic boundaries as it is limited to the counties of Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery, and Philadelphia that constitute the Greater Philadelphia Community of Pennsylvania.

The map on the following page illustrates the proposed community with an overlay of existing credit-union owned (thumb tacks) and shared service branch facilities (red flags).

This presence demonstrates the ability of Citadel Federal Credit Union to begin immediately extending its lower cost financial services to more prospective members throughout the entirety of the proposed community and having a positive impact (b)(4)

(b)(4)

Partnerships and Regional Development Organizations

The proposed community encompasses Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery, and Philadelphia Counties that constitute the Greater Philadelphia Community. The evidence provided below reflects an abundance of examples that clearly document and demonstrate interaction between the residents of the proposed community to support the proposed area as a local community. Residents and representatives of the proposed community routinely come together to promote the interests of the entire Greater Philadelphia community. These projects are both governmentally and privately sanctioned efforts that include the following:

- Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce – As an advocate for businesses throughout the community, the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce (GPCC) is dedicated to supporting and encouraging the continued growth of each of its nearly 6,000 member companies, and the Greater Philadelphia business community at large. Its main objectives are to influence business-friendly legislation in government, participate in initiatives to improve education and the community, present professional enrichment programs, and to provide its members with cost-efficient ways to run their businesses.

Ninety-two percent of its membership comes from the five-county community: Philadelphia 53%, Montgomery 21%, Delaware 7%, Bucks 6%, and Chester 5%. The Board of Directors of the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce represents a regional approach among its leadership. The Directors represent companies from throughout the area: Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Philadelphia. As David G. Heimbach, Vice President of Director Relations and Development at the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, recently reported, Chamber Directors represent companies from throughout the Greater Philadelphia community as follows:

Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce
Board of Directors
County	% of Company's/Association's Location
Philadelphia	68%
Montgomery	11%
Delaware	9%
Chester	4%
Bucks	2%
South Jersey/Northern Delaware	6%

Small businesses that consist of fewer than 100 employees make up 88% of its membership. The remaining 12% represents some of Greater Philadelphia's leading corporations, among them many Fortune 500 companies.

The chamber hosts approximately 150 programs each year, ranging from educational seminars and networking affairs to major community and political events. All are designed to enhance the business community and to further the interaction of the entire economic community that is the Philadelphia area.

The Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce's Public Policy department serves as its members' voice in local, state and federal government. The Public Policy staff takes members' needs directly to the legislators who can make a difference. Also, through its Regional Foundation, the chamber supports many important programs, including the Paradigm Scholarship Fund for Working Women, available to working women employed by the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce.

During a Chester County Chamber Foundation event in September 2006, Michael Nutter, a former Philadelphia City Councilman and potential Philadelphia mayoral candidate stated, "Philadelphia's future is inextricably tied to Bucks, Chester, Delaware and Montgomery counties." Rob Powelson, President of the Chester County Chamber of Business and Industry, gave Nutter credit for working with suburban representatives on the Pennsylvania Convention Center's long-awaited expansion, further demonstrating the interaction and interdependency of the Greater Philadelphia community.

- Greater Philadelphia First – Established in 1983, Greater Philadelphia First (GPF) was an association of business chief executives from 35 of the community's larger corporations committed to advancing the interests of the community. GPF worked to improve the business climate, generate employment by attracting new investment, and market the community nationally and internationally. In February 2003, Greater Philadelphia First merged with the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce. Under the leadership of former Governor Mark Schweiker, the "new" Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce combines the strengths of both organizations in representing the diverse needs of Philadelphia's business community.
- Ben Franklin Technology Partners of Southeastern Pennsylvania – An independent not-for-profit economic development organization, Ben Franklin Technology Partners of Southeastern Pennsylvania (BFTP/SEP) was established in 1982 to stimulate economic growth through innovation, entrepreneurship and the development and adoption of new technologies. One of the most important economic development organizations in the region, BFTP/SEP has helped grow the region through science, technology and entrepreneurship. BFTP/SEP provides entrepreneurs and established businesses in Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Philadelphia counties crucial resources for technology-driven enterprises.

Headquartered in Center City Philadelphia, BFTP/SEP provides capital and expertise in technology, finance, and business that helps entrepreneurs and established businesses overcome challenges and plan for growth. Through its network of resources, the organization fosters dynamic relationships among companies, institutional and private investors, research institutions and the university community. This is considered one of the premier cooperative organizations in the Greater Philadelphia community.

In her 2005 Performance Profile, Ben Franklin Technology Partners/SEP President and CEO RoseAnn Rosenthal reported on the numerous successful regional initiatives including:

- Assistance for over 250 companies in the Greater Philadelphia Community, either through direct investments or through technology or business assistance engagements.
 - The Nanotechnology Institute™, a multi-institutional partnership, led by the University of Pennsylvania, Drexel University, and Ben Franklin, initiated the Nano Applications Fund, signaling its commitment to commercialization through joint development work with enterprises across the Commonwealth who are integrating nanotechnology in their products and processes.
 - Together with the Delaware Valley Industrial Resource Center, BFTP/SEP initiated a relationship with the US National Institute of Standards & Technology around the metrics issues presented by bio-nano, and joined NIST and the Commonwealth in announcing this new initiative at BIO International.
 - BFTP/SEP partnered with the Philadelphia Industrial Development Corporation and Penn State University to secure approval for the Philadelphia Navy Yard Keystone Innovation Center; supported the Philadelphia College of Sciences, the University of Pennsylvania, Drexel University, BioAdvance and the Science Center partnership for a KIZ; and began work with other organizations across the five-county region to support their plans for similar technology hubs and KIZs.
 - University consortia focusing on sustainable design, led by Philadelphia University in Philadelphia County, and wireless communication, led by Villanova University in Montgomery County, broadened their partnerships, adding new companies, research partners, and new elements to their commercialization models.

- Pennsylvania Economy League – The Pennsylvania Economy League (PEL) Southeastern Division, headquartered in Center City Philadelphia, is an independent, nonprofit public policy research and development organization. PEL's mission is to promote better government for a more competitive community by providing information and support to the civic leadership of the Greater Philadelphia Community.

PEL is supported by individual and corporate members in the five-county community, Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Philadelphia, who are leaders in their industries and understand how sound public policies and effective government supports the community's economic competitiveness. Under the leadership of its Board of Directors and Executive Director, and with additional project funding from foundations, civic organizations, and local governments, PEL:

- Analyzes and communicates the effect of public policies on the community's economy and its constituents;
- Promotes innovative programs or policies that have proved successful in other regions of the country or the world;
- Works directly with government officials in the community to research, design, and implement effective programs; and
- Creates opportunities to inform and involve taxpayers in the process of policy development and implementation.

The Pennsylvania Economy League board of Directors is comprised of business and civic leaders from throughout the Greater Philadelphia community.

In September 2005, 70 area civic leaders from throughout The Greater Philadelphia community visited Chicago as part of the Greater Philadelphia Leadership Exchange. This group seeks "regional solutions for regional problems." PEL also helped launch the Issues Pa web site, which gives voters information on current elections.

- Greater Philadelphia Tourism and Marketing Corporation – Greater Philadelphia Tourism Marketing Corporation (GPTMC) is a public/private partnership founded and funded in 1996 by the city of Philadelphia, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and The Pew Charitable Trusts. In 1996, GPTMC launched the first centralized effort to promote to potential tourists the diverse historical, cultural and entertainment/leisure aspects of the five-county community (Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Philadelphia). This centralized effort continues with a fully integrated marketing program, including consumer research; advertising in television, print, outdoor and the Internet; and public relations in all media categories.

GPTMC, headquartered in Center City Philadelphia, reported that in 2004, travelers to the region spent $6.8 billion in the five-county proposed community, an increase of 7% from 2003.

In June 2006, sixteen economic development organizations announced a partnership to brand the Greater Philadelphia community as a great place to live, work and play. The goal of the project is to increase the number of organizations doing business in the area, increase the residential population and bring more visitors here as tourists and conventioners. The group's logo and tagline, Forever Independent™, represent the region's core values, namely independence, innovation and a sense of adventure.

"This program is critically important for the long-term economic vitality of our region," said Manny Stamatakis, founder and CEO of Capital Management Enterprises and chairman of the Greater Philadelphia Tourism Marketing Corporation's board. "As our destination's competitors brand themselves and as the global economy continues to expand, we must do more if we are to continue to grow." The sixteen Philadelphia-area organizations involved in the process of developing the Forever Independent™ brand are:

- African American Chamber of Commerce of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware
- Bucks County Conference & Visitors Bureau
- Chester County Conference & Visitors Bureau
- City of Philadelphia
- Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
- Delaware County's Brandywine Conference and Visitors Bureau
- Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce
- Greater Philadelphia Cultural Alliance
- Greater Philadelphia Tourism Marketing Corporation
- Independence Visitor Center
- Innovation Philadelphia

- Pennsylvania Convention Center
- Philadelphia Convention & Visitors Bureau
- Philadelphia International Airport
- Select Greater Philadelphia
- Valley Forge Convention and Visitors Bureau, Montgomery County

A logo featuring the internationally recognized Liberty Bell with the words Forever Independent™ was created as a common mark to show unity among the organizations and to promote the Philadelphia brand both domestically and abroad. The logo will not replace any one organization's logo but rather complement each of them. The Forever Independent™ logo, shown below, will appear in a variety of marketing programs, promotions and advertising efforts for the Greater Philadelphia region.

The emphasis of this logo is the community wide nature of both Philadelphia and its surrounding community as it references the "Forever Independent" nature of the "Philadelphia Countryside" as a whole – not simply the City of Philadelphia.

The next step in the branding process was to create a regional showcase on the Internet, www.foreverindependent.org, which would help the partners reach the largest international audience possible. Until 2006, no web site presented people with a big picture view of the Greater Philadelphia region. The new portal site is a one-stop shop for the region that allows those interested in the area to zero in on their particular interests, such as tourism, education, business development, etc. It also includes a new video, The Forever Independent Spirit, which brings to life the people, the places and the attitudes that make the Philadelphia region so unique.

"Just as exciting as unveiling the new brand, Forever Independent™, is the fact that never before has the Greater Philadelphia region come together in this way," said Nick DeBenedictis, chairman and CEO, Aqua America, and chairman, Philadelphia Convention & Visitors Bureau. "By fostering greater collaboration among our region's most prominent entities during the past year, we have proven that together anything is possible for the 'Next Great City,' perhaps even an Olympic bid."

The chairpersons and leaders of the regional organizations have committed staff and financial resources to further develop the program over the next several years.

- Select Greater Philadelphia – Select Greater Philadelphia is a regional economic development business marketing organization which focuses on building the economy of the Greater Philadelphia region by attracting and retaining businesses. With the leadership of the Greater Philadelphia business community, Select Greater Philadelphia has developed a comprehensive approach for growing the region to become one of the nation's top business locations. More than just a rich history and storied past, Greater Philadelphia is also about winning edge innovation and world-class business resources. Select Greater Philadelphia promotes this image to the global marketplace by coordinating the efforts of the entire regional business community.

Numerous successful initiatives have resulted from the regional cooperative initiatives of Select Greater Philadelphia and the Greater

Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce. Examples of these cooperative initiatives that benefit the proposed community include the following:

- March 2006, Select Greater Philadelphia welcomed Spanish Energy Firm Gamesa to Greater Philadelphia. Select Greater Philadelphia, a not-for-profit organization dedicated to marketing the Greater Philadelphia region, welcomed Gamesa, a Spanish wind-energy firm that manufactures windmills, to Greater Philadelphia. Gamesa decided to locate in Bucks County, PA and will create 250 new jobs. Gamesa has located its U.S. headquarters in Center City Philadelphia.
- April 2006 – Core Net Global Summit held in Philadelphia. The CoreNet Global Summit in Philadelphia gave economic development officials what they wanted: hot leads on companies that are interested in locating operations in their jurisdictions. CoreNet's spring annual meeting, held April 2006 at the Pennsylvania Convention Center, drew more than 2,700 site-selection consultants, corporate real estate executives, developers and economic development officials from across the country and world. This marked the first time in 10 years that the 7,500-member organization held its meeting in Philadelphia. Dan Gundersen of the Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development stated, "...the people who have come to Philadelphia are leaving with a dynamic impression of a dynamic city. That, combined with a sense that Pennsylvania, its neighboring states and other regional partners are working as one team also made the state stand out. State and regional economic development officials manned a large booth in the convention center's exhibition hall." "The conference completed a "trifecta" of high-profile conventions held in Philadelphia in the last year that will go a long way toward exposing people to the city and region and what it has to offer," said Tom Morr, CEO of Select Greater Philadelphia. Morr was referring to BIO 2005, and the Professional Convention Management Association held earlier this year.
- May 2006 – SEPTA meeting. Mark S. Schweiker addressed the Transportation Funding and Reform Commission stating reporting on the importance of a regional growth strategy for the Greater Philadelphia community's transportation infrastructure. In terms of direct economic benefits to the economy of Greater Philadelphia, the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority/SEPTA:
 - Spends more than $670 million each year (more than half of this stays in the region).

- o Employs 8,800 of the 15,000 transit professionals working across the state.
- o 70 percent of all employees in Center City Philadelphia take SEPTA to and from work each day -- 500,000 people. Since data documented in this application indicates that 34% of the Center City workforce comes from the contiguous four Pennsylvania counties in the Greater Philadelphia community, it can be estimated that a significant percentage of the "suburban" Center City workforce use SEPTA to commute to the Center City Philadelphia district.
- o 65,000 students at middle schools, high schools and colleges use SEPTA.
- o Senior citizens take more than 95,000 daily trips on SEPTA's fixed-route services. It is no coincidence that the newest addition to Philadelphia's skyline, the Cira Centre, rose above the tracks of 30th Street Station. Tenants report that 75 to 90 percent of their employees at the new building are taking public transit to work. Many have been pleasantly surprised by the easy access and cost of public transportation. At the corner of JFK Boulevard and 18th Street, the location of the new world headquarters for Comcast, executives enthusiastically point to the entrances to Suburban Station that are only a few steps away. In the Philadelphia suburbs, developers like Brandywine Realty Trust have built office parks with particular consideration of access to public transportation. Tenants and employers realize this is an important benefit for their employees, often subsidizing their fares. Public transit and our transportation infrastructure are critical to the local economy.

While the majority of the initiatives focus on the hub city of Philadelphia, successes in the contiguous counties indicate the strong interaction and economic interdependence existing in the region. Another example of the economic integration in the region was the collaboration between the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, the Bucks County Economic Development Corporation and the Pennsylvania Governor's Action Team to retain and expand an area business known as Power Medical Interventions (PMI). In May 2005, PMI moved its manufacturing operations into Bucks County, creating 153 new jobs and retaining 43 existing positions.

- Pennsylvania's Keystone Opportunity Zone Program – The Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development has developed the Keystone Opportunity Zone program to foster opportunities of business and communities to partner in the growth and development of underutilized areas. This partnership brings community officials and businesses together. Keystone Innovation Zones (KIZ) are designated zones that may be established in communities that host institutions of higher education – colleges, universities, and associate degree technical schools. These zones are designed to foster innovation and create entrepreneurial opportunities. They do this by gathering and aligning the combined resources of educational institutions, private businesses, business support organizations, commercial lending institutions, venture capital networks and foundations (KIZ partners). These partnerships must, in order to qualify, include the following: institutions of higher education, economic development organizations, private sector businesses, business support organizations, commercial lending institutions, venture capital, and foundations. These regional initiatives are demonstrations of the interdependence and cooperation of the Greater Philadelphia community.

A Keystone Innovation Zone encompassing Bucks, Montgomery and Philadelphia counties will target the life sciences industry through information technology and advanced manufacturing. Coordinated by BioStrategy Partners and in partnership with Fox Chase Cancer Center, Lankenau Institute for Medical Research, Pennsylvania College of Optometry, Temple University, LaSalle University, Bucks County Community College and Montgomery County Community College, the 611 Corridor KOZ will receive $250,000 in operational funding from the Ben Franklin Technology Development Authority (BFTDA).

- Metropolitan Philadelphia Policy Center – The Metropolitan Philadelphia Policy Center is a collaborative non-profit founded in 2000 to develop bold initiatives to strengthen the economic vitality of the community and to ensure that the Metropolitan Philadelphia area offers the highest quality of life for all who live there. The Policy Center, through research and advocacy, works with leaders throughout the five-county Philadelphia community to build upon Metropolitan Philadelphia's strengths and address persistent problems.

Headquartered in Center City Philadelphia, the Metropolitan Philadelphia Policy Center was formed after extensive research and consultation from local and national experts that began in 1998. The Policy Center is a collaboration of the Pennsylvania Economy League (PEL) Eastern Division, 10,000 Friends of Pennsylvania and The Reinvestment Fund (TRF). It was formed to help residents of the five-county community better understand the policies, issues and trends that are shaping its residents' daily lives, and to strengthen their ability to work together for change.

Issues that affect the community residents: jobs and workers; housing and commuting; schools and taxes; urban revitalization; and open space preservation are all interconnected. These issues and the Policy Center's emphasis do not start and stop at county borders and city limits. The organization has released publications and sponsored events to call attention to the best thinking and best practices that could help Metropolitan Philadelphia community grow smarter. It has also gathered a wealth of data about the community, culminating in the publication of Flight or Fight: Metropolitan Philadelphia and Its Future. Flight or Fight is a frank assessment of this community's growth over the last 30 years and how that growth has affected the community. It lays out real challenges and outlines an agenda that responds to those challenges. The book has successfully fostered a regional understanding of the interrelatedness of the economic and population issues in the Greater Philadelphia region.

Major Roadways

The proposed community includes an extensive network of interstate, state and local highways and roads to give commuters plenty of options for all types of purposes, including employment, shopping, entertainment, sports, recreation and culture. As one economic and social community, residents from one part of the Greater Philadelphia community are constantly traveling to other parts of the community.

Major roadways running through the Greater Philadelphia community include the Pennsylvania Turnpike, north and west of the city and Interstate 95, a major north and south corridor on the east side of the city. Interstate 476 (the Blue Route) runs north and south the western suburbs, Interstate 76 (the Schuylkill Expressway) takes travelers from the northwestern suburbs down to South Philadelphia, and Interstate 676 (Vine Street Expressway) conveniently cuts straight through Center City. The Ben Franklin, Betsy Ross, Walt Whitman, Commodore Barry, and Tacony-Palmyra bridges carry traffic between Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The Pennsylvania Turnpike, an east and west freeway runs from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia through Chester, Montgomery, and Bucks counties and connects with the New Jersey Turnpike.

Interstate 95, a major north and south freeway, runs from Maine to Florida, through Delaware County, Philadelphia County, and Bucks County. The Philadelphia International Airport is accessed directly from I-95.

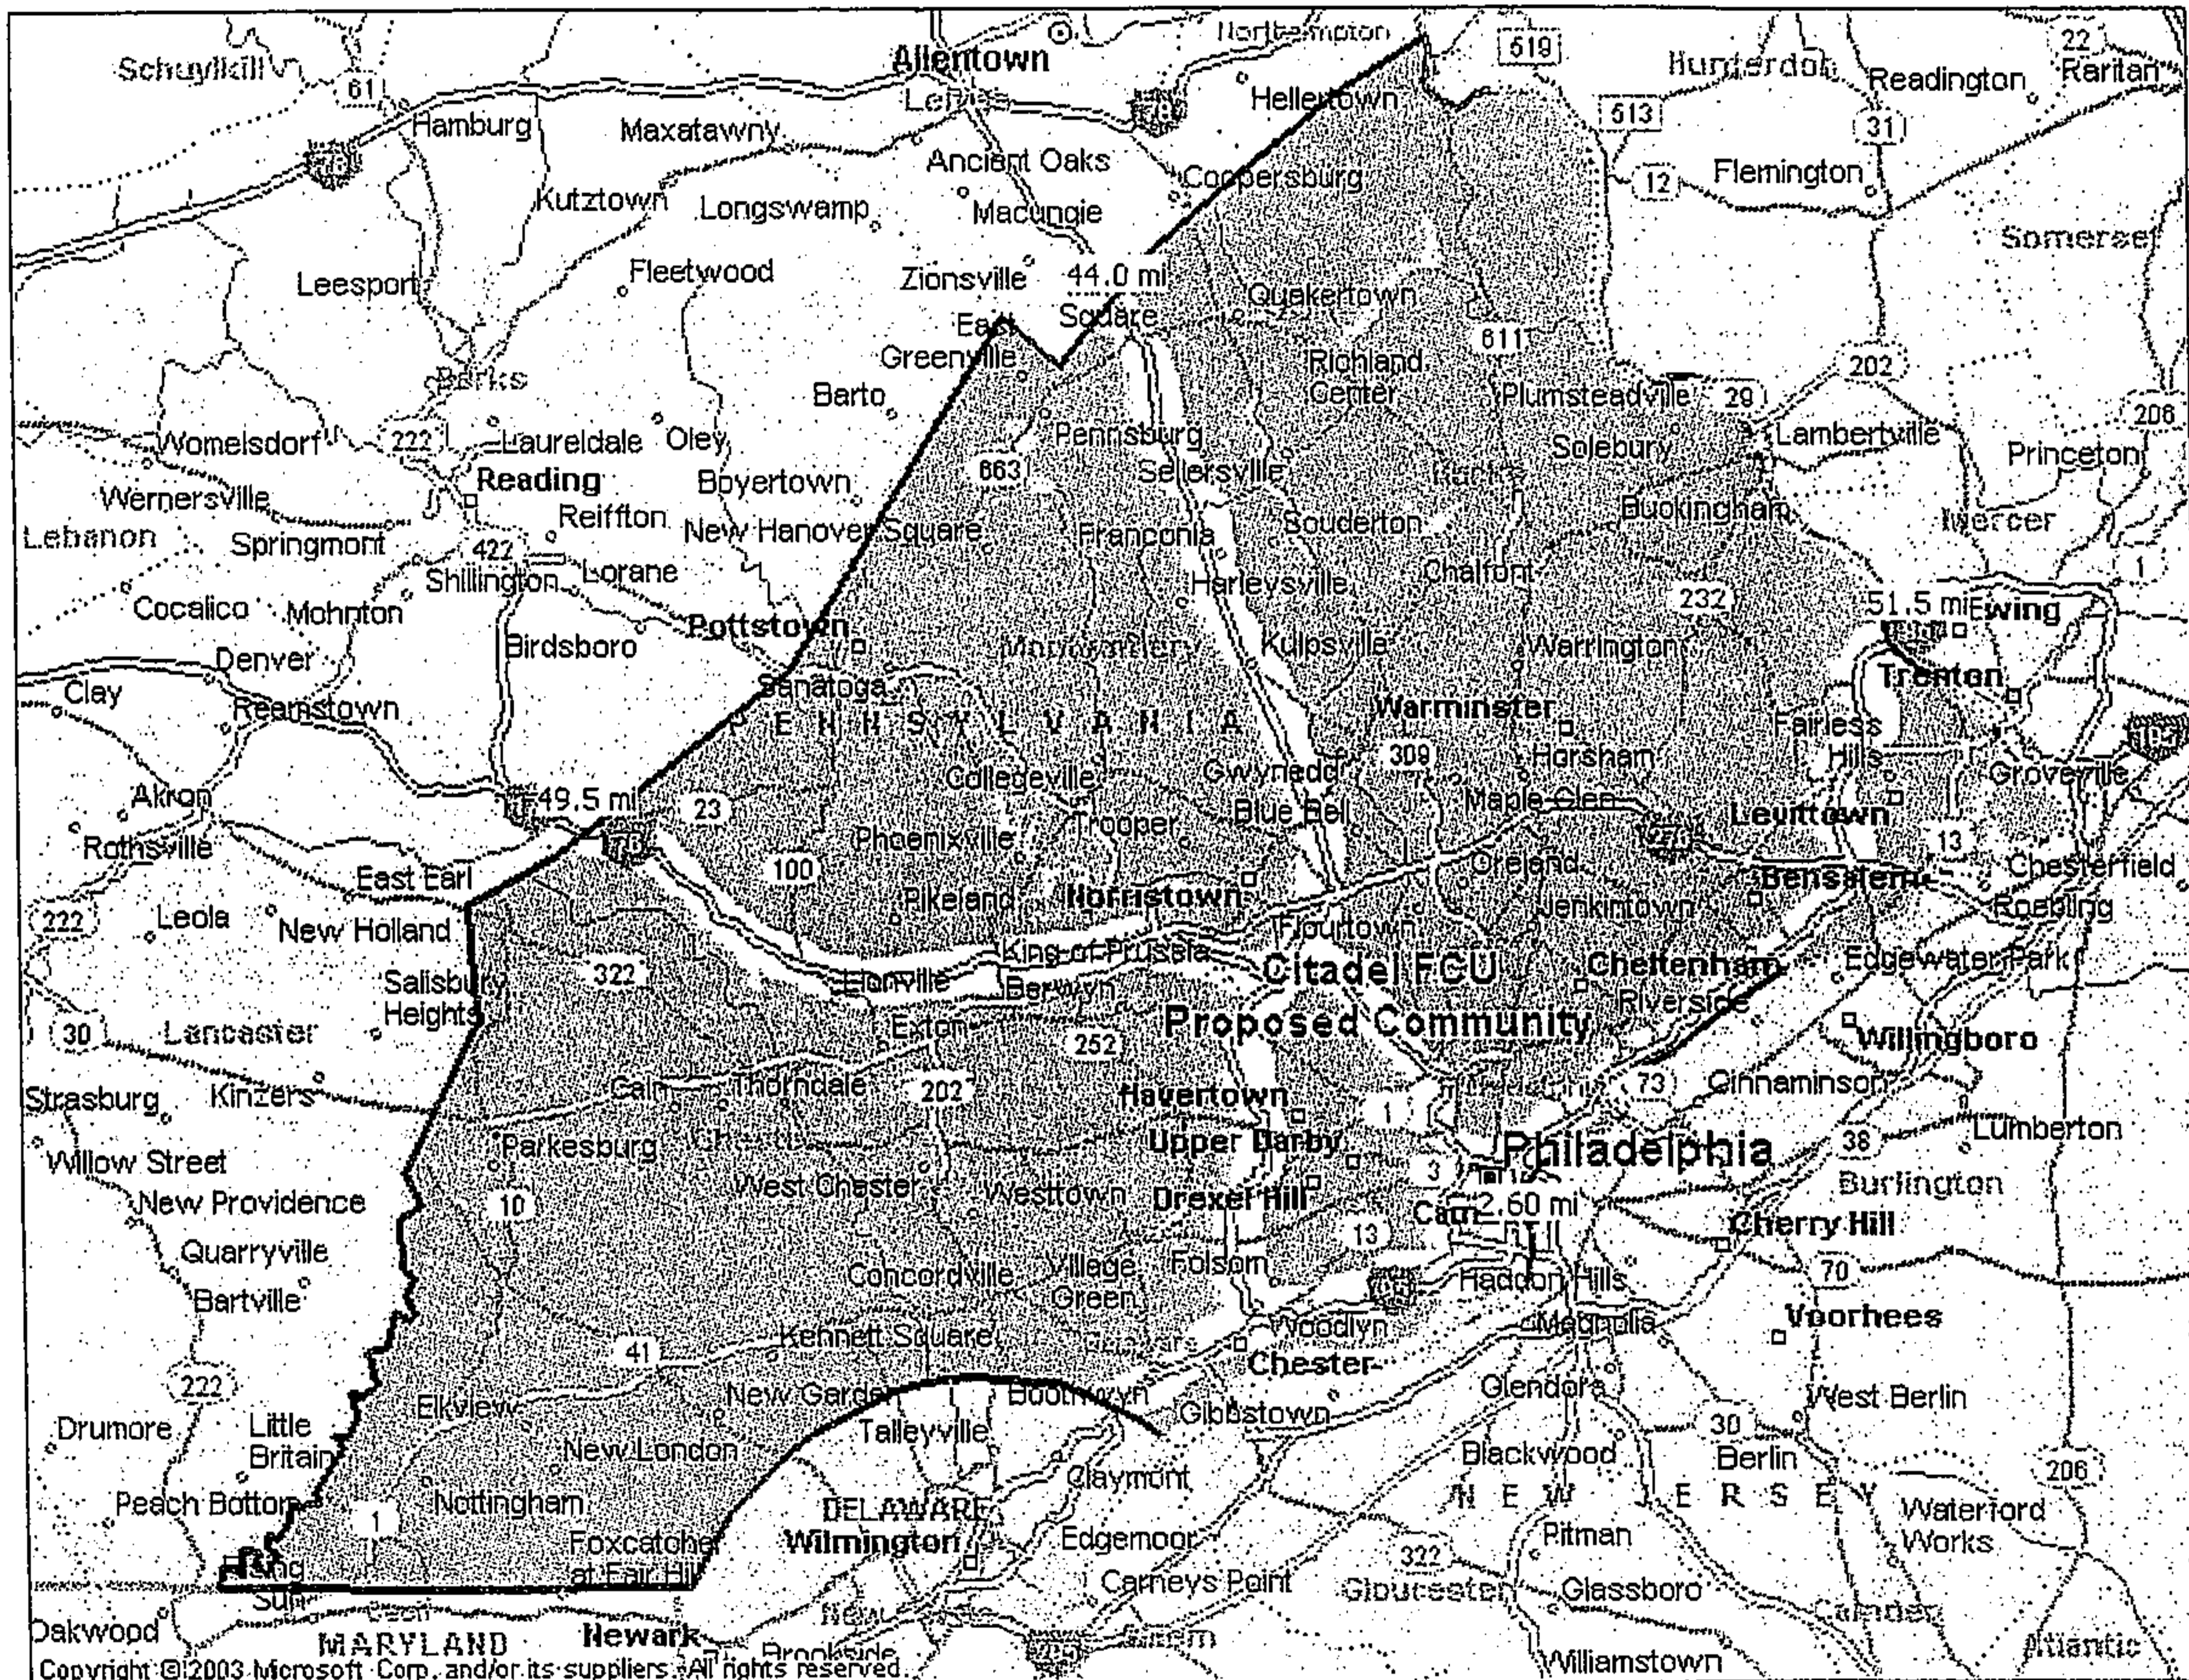

Interstate 476 (Veteran's Memorial Highway, AKA the Blue Route) connects I-95 with the Pennsylvania Turnpike and runs through Delaware and Montgomery counties, continuing northward to Allentown, the Pocono Mountains and New York State, as the Pennsylvania Turnpike's north-east extension.

Interstate 76 (Schuylkill Expressway) takes travelers from South Philadelphia through Center City to the northwestern suburbs of Montgomery County.

All of these employers are headquartered in the proposed Greater Philadelphia community, with the largest percentage, 46%, located in the hub city of Philadelphia.

Commuting patterns for residents within the proposed community also provide evidence of the interaction between the five counties that make up the Greater Philadelphia community. According to the most recent census data, the U.S. Census 2000 county-to-county workflow, 429,557 or 75.4% of Philadelphia County residents work in Philadelphia. In addition, 12.5% of the workers in Philadelphia County came from the four suburban counties in the community. These commuting patterns are important linkages between the city and surrounding counties and clearly demonstrate the existence of resident interaction within the proposed community.

The existence of resident interaction throughout the Greater Philadelphia community was validated in the 2006 Scarborough Research findings. Data gleaned from the 2006 Scarborough Research findings indicates a growing connection in employee commuting patterns. In 2006, 17.7% of the workers in Philadelphia reside in and commute from the four contiguous counties. This data indicates a growth of 41.6% (from 12.5% in 2000 to 17.7% in 2006) of residents from the four contiguous counties commuting to the hub city of Philadelphia for employment.

Residence \ Place of Work	Bucks	Chester	Delaware	Montgomery	Philadelphia
Bucks	77.9%	1.1%	1.4%	10.6%	3.2%
Chester	0%	78%	11.3%	6.6%	1.0%
Delaware	1.9%	9.7%	76.9%	7.0%	5.6%
Montgomery	7.8%	6.5%	3.5%	61.0%	7.9%
Philadelphia	7.8%	2.5%	2.1%	9.4%	72.8%

(Source: Scarborough Research 2006)

These commuting patterns demonstrate the economic shared interests between Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery, and Philadelphia Counties. In addition, the patterns clearly show the common theme that the City of Philadelphia serves as an integral employment center for all five counties.

- Willow Grove Park – Willow Grove Park is distinguished by its rich history as a development on the site of a famed Victorian-era amusement park, which put the town of Willow Grove, Pennsylvania, on international maps. In its heyday, tens of thousands visited the Park daily to behold world-class concerts by such musical greats as John Philip Sousa, captivating colored Electric Fountain shows in the center of the Park's expansive lake, and novel amusements, including roller coasters, toboggan rides and two magnificent carousels.

In 1982, the site was transformed into a thriving, fashion-forward shopping center, and the magic and excitement surrounding the original Park was reborn. Representational classic historical pieces, including a chiming carillon clock and a suspended fantasy carousel circling above a feature fountain, continue to be popular components of the mall's decor and reminders of its vibrant heritage.

The Center's recent Victorian-era inspired renovation was designed to echo the enchantment and elegance surrounding its ancestry. The renovation focal point, a new, spectacular Carousel ride, which mirrors the Park's original Philadelphia Toboggan Company carousels, stands at the core of its own Third Level entrance and has delighted thousands of riders within its first few months of operations. The mall's recently added fourth department store, Macy's (the most fashion forward in the Philadelphia metro area), new multi-level parking deck with entrances to all three shopping levels, and redeveloped Grove Food Court featuring tables inlaid with original Willow Grove Park memorabilia, as well as the newly completed Nostalgic Mosaic Wall, build upon the excitement surrounding today's Willow Grove Park.

Third party research reveals that 96.5 percent of shoppers at Willow Grove Park reside in the proposed community, giving further evidence of the interaction within the Greater Philadelphia Community.

- Philadelphia International Airport - Philadelphia International Airport (PHL) serves as the center of the community's aviation system, geographically and from an aviation traffic perspective. This growing hub airport, which provides the vast majority of scheduled airline service to and from the Philadelphia metro area, is also the air traffic control center for most of the 23 suburban general aviation and reliever airports operating in the area.

The Philadelphia International Airport is located approximately seven miles from Center City Philadelphia. Philadelphia International Airport

(PHL) serves as the principal gateway for the fifth largest metropolitan population in the United States. Owned by the City of Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Airport System (comprised of Philadelphia International Airport and Northeast Philadelphia Airport) is operated by the Department of Commerce's Division of Aviation. The Airport is easily accessible from Interstates 76, 95, and 476. In addition, rail service to the airport is available on SEPTA's High Speed Rail Line (R1) train that operates from 5:25 a.m. until 11:25 p.m. daily, every 30 minutes, with easy connections to AMTRAK at 30th Street Station.

The Airport System is a self-sustaining entity that operates without the use of local tax dollars. It is one of the largest economic engines in Pennsylvania, generating an estimated $14 billion in spending to the regional economy and employing a workforce of nearly 34,000 from throughout the Greater Philadelphia region.

Without question, the Philadelphia International Airport is the hub of air transportation for the Greater Philadelphia community. Of the 2,960,967 adults in the Greater Philadelphia community, 1,377,163 use the Philadelphia International Airport. For residents using airport travel, the Philadelphia International Airport is used by virtually 100% of travelers as the 2006 Scarborough Research indicates that 1,492,793, 50.4% of the greater Philadelphia community residents do not use air travel at all.

- Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority – SEPTA serves Philadelphia, Montgomery, Delaware, Chester, and Burks Counties specifically. As Mark S. Schweiker, President and CEO, Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce and Chairman for the CEO Council for Growth reported in his testimony before the PA Transportation Funding and Reform Commission on May 18, 2006, a quality transit system is essential to the Greater Philadelphia region. A viable transit system is especially critical to the local economy in southeastern Pennsylvania as employers, commuters and consumers depend upon the safe, reliable and affordable service that SEPTA provides.

Schweiker stated that SEPTA means business in this region.

- 70% of all Center City office workers take all modes of public transit into Philadelphia each day—that is 272,000 people every day from all areas in the region.
- In the southeast region wherein a total of 1.8 million people are employed, more than 18% ride SEPTA buses, rails and subways daily.
- 700 businesses in Greater Philadelphia find transit ridership important enough to offer tax-advantage transit benefit programs to their employees.
- 65,000 students at middle schools, high schools and colleges use SEPTA public transit.

A quality transit system is necessary to enhance mobility, reduce congestion on the roadways, enable employees to get to work, students to get to school, and residents, visitors and shoppers to enjoy all of the amenities of the region. A quality transit system is vital to the competitiveness of Greater Philadelphia.

Operating in the five-county Philadelphia community, Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (SEPTA) features an integrated network of buses, trolleys and trains providing more than 1,000,000 passengers trips each day. In addition, SEPTA's Airport Train provides direct connections every 30 minutes, from downtown to all terminals at Philadelphia International Airport.

With almost no exceptions, any attraction, historic or cultural site, entertainment venue, hotel, restaurant or event in Center City can be reached by SEPTA services. These services include the Regional Rail R1 Airport Line; the Market-Frankford Line (serving east-west destinations); the Broad Street Line (serving north-south destinations); Bus Routes 21, 38, and 42; and LUCY (Loop through University City.) The R1 Airport Line connects University City, 30th Street, Suburban or Market East Stations with all Philadelphia International Airport terminals.

The Market-Frankford Line operates underneath Market Street and travels east and west from Northeast Philadelphia to West Philadelphia and Upper Darby. In the downtown area, it stops at 2nd Street (Penn's Landing and Old City), 5th Street (the heart of the historic district), 8th Street (Chinatown), 11th Street (The Pennsylvania Convention Center and the Reading Terminal Market), 13th Street (City Hall, SEPTA's Transit Museum Store and trolleys to University City) and 15th Street (Center City business district).

The Market-Frankford Line also serves Amtrak's 30th Street Station. The 11th Street Station is located just two blocks from the Greyhound, Trailways and NJ Transit Bus Terminals at 10th and Filbert.

The Broad Street Line operates underneath Broad Street and travels north and south from South Philadelphia to North Philadelphia. In the downtown area, it stops at the following stations: Walnut-Locust, within walking distance of the Avenue of the Arts including the Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts; City Hall, convenient to hotels and the Convention Center; and Race-Vine, within walking distance of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. The Broad Street Line also provides frequent service to sporting and concert events at the Lincoln Financial Field, the Veterans Stadium, the Wachovia Center, and the Wachovia Spectrum in South Philadelphia (Pattison Avenue stop). It also serves Temple University and the Apollo Theater in North Philadelphia (Cecil B. Moore stop).

Route 38 starts at Independence Hall, runs along Market Street and the Ben Franklin Parkway, past the Art Museum, the Philadelphia Zoo and on to the hotels on City Avenue. Routes 21 and 42 travel from Penn's Landing and Old City along Chestnut and Walnut Streets in Center City where you can find some of the finest shops and dining in Philadelphia. Routes 21 and 42 continue west and serve the University City area. LUCY begins at the southwest corner of Amtrak's 30th Street Station and loops through the University City area stopping at the Drexel University and University of Pennsylvania campuses, shops, restaurants and museums.

30th Street Station, at 30th and Market Streets, provides a direct connection to Amtrak and New Jersey Transit Rail services; Suburban Station, located between 16th and 17th Streets on John F. Kennedy Boulevard, is situated in the heart of Philadelphia's business district; and Market East Station, located at 11th and Market Streets, is directly below the Pennsylvania Convention Center and connects to the Reading Terminal Market.

Currently, as a further demonstration of the ongoing recognition of the importance of continuing the already dynamic nature of interaction throughout The Greater Philadelphia area from a transportation perspective, there is a proposed commuter rail line that will produce critical mobility, economic, environmental and social benefits while enhancing Greater Philadelphia community's competitiveness in the knowledge-based economy of the 21st century. The project is the Schuylkill Valley MetroRail (MetroRail). MetroRail will connect Philadelphia and its western suburbs along the Schuylkill River, while serving 52 municipalities and townships along its route through urban, suburban and rural areas. The proposed rail alignment generally parallels the Schuylkill River along existing right-of-way while traversing Philadelphia and Montgomery counties with a proposed southern extension to Great Valley and beyond in Chester County. MetroRail will connect major population concentrations, employment centers and a variety of recreational activity centers through 13 new stops west of Norristown, a spur to the King of Prussia area, and a new station at 52nd Street and Lancaster Avenue in West Philadelphia.

Employment centers and community attractions that MetroRail will serve are: Center City's cultural and historic sites, central business district, Pennsylvania Convention Center, and Amtrak connections; West Philadelphia's universities, research parks, hospitals, and Mann Music Center/Fairmount Park; North Philadelphia's Temple University; Conshohocken's corporate business centers; King of Prussia Mall; Route 202's Great Valley Corporate Center and Route 422's Valley Forge National Park.

The map below shows transportation lines throughout the system. The map indicates that SEPTA serves the entirety of the proposed community of Philadelphia, Montgomery, Delaware, Bucks, and Chester Counties.

- Bus Transit - The Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (SEPTA) operates over 150 bus routes and 1,200 buses in the five-county Greater Philadelphia community. The SEPTA system also provides local subway and trolley service that connects major parts of the city, including runs to the Philadelphia International Airport every 30 minutes.

According to the American Public Transportation Association, SEPTA ranks as the sixth largest bus and trolleybus agency in the U.S. based on passenger miles traveled in 2002. Passenger miles are the cumulative sum of the distances ridden by each passenger.

Passenger miles traveled in the most recent reporting period by SEPTA bus was 470,379 and SEPTA trolleybus was 12,353.

- Port Authority - For more than 300 years Philadelphia has been a leading national port city and a recognized major center for international commerce. Only a few short years after William Penn's vessel landed on the shores of the Delaware River, heralding the establishment of Penn's "City of Neighborhoods," Philadelphia became the New World's leading center for trade and commerce, a title it held for more than a hundred years.

Even today; with major port complexes serving major metropolitan centers throughout the country, Philadelphia and its international seaport maintain a preeminent position in several areas of trade, such as the import of perishable cargoes from South America and high-quality paper products from Scandinavia.

Like many ports throughout the United States (and especially competing ports along the East Coast) the capital-intensive requirements to maintain and improve the Port of Philadelphia eventually outgrew the funding capabilities of the city of Philadelphia and its port agency. To remedy the situation the Philadelphia Regional Port Authority (PRPA), an independent state agency and partnership between the state and Bucks, Delaware and Philadelphia counties, was created in 1990.

Since its inception more than ten years ago, PRPA has overseen major improvements to the port, as well as aggressively assisted its terminal operators in marketing the port. PRPA also works with other port agencies and port-related concerns along the Delaware River on issues of mutual concern, such as maintaining sufficient channel depth and monitoring regulatory issues.

PRPA and its 11-member Board of community business leaders are now pursuing the next phase of the Port of Philadelphia's evolution: Project 21. The aim of this project will be no less than the total modernization of the Delaware River's industrial waterfront. This will include the conversion of the port's remaining finger piers into modern marginal berths, as well as the further expansion of on-dock refrigeration and dry warehouse space.

All of its terminal facilities are located in close proximity, and have easy access, to all major trucking routes. I-95 runs adjacent to the port facilities, and I-76, a major east and west thoroughfare, has entrance ramps close to the terminals. Over 400 local trucking companies operate in the area, with a combined total of over 20,000 trucks and regularly meet a substantial demand on the part of the terminals for as many as 1,500 trucks per week. The port's facilities are also serviced by three class-one railroads: Norfolk Southern, CSX, and CP Rail.

- Other Transportation - Another method of transportation and recreation that bonds the community residents through common interest and interaction is bicycling. Since 1972, the Bicycle Coalition of Greater Philadelphia (BCGP) has been working hard to improve bicycling conditions and promote bicycling as an environmentally-friendly, healthy, and economical form of transportation and recreation in the Greater Philadelphia community. Some sample projects that the coalition supports in the community are:
 - Facilitating the construction of recreational trails across the community;
 - Advocating for the addition of hundreds of miles of bike lanes;
 - Increasing bicycle-access on public transportation systems (SEPTA);
 - Establishing the largest in-school bicycle education program in the country;
 - Lobbying political leaders to support bicycle-friendly policy;
 - Reviewing transportation projects to ensure accommodations for cyclists;
 - Working in partnership with other organizations to promote alternative transportation;
 - Keeping the public informed about cycling opportunities in the community;
 - Bringing bicycle safety programs to communities; and
 - Ensuring installation of bicycle racks and "Share the Road" sign.

Also a Regional Bicycle Mobility Map of the Greater Philadelphia community has been developed by the Bicycle Coalition and funded by PENNDOT, the Delaware Valley Regional Planning Commission and the William Penn Foundation.

The Bicycle Coalition, working with the Philadelphia School System, has developed the Bicycle Education and Enhancement Program. A curriculum was developed, and implemented in 16 middle schools in the community. The Bicycle Coalition is now working on installing bike racks at middle and high schools within the school system.

Because of the regional cooperation in developing the area's bicycle paths, bicycling is one of the recreational activities most common to the Greater Philadelphia community residents. One in every four adults in the Greater Philadelphia community is a recreational bicyclist.

Higher Education

From the beginning of the 18th century, education and culture formed very important parts of life in Philadelphia. One of the colony's most learned early settlers was James Logan, William Penn's private secretary. He assembled a library that formed the basis for the Library Company of Philadelphia, one of the nation's earliest subscription libraries, founded in 1731 and still operating as a research facility today. The diverse achievements of Benjamin Franklin gained Philadelphia recognition as the "Athens of America," a center of learning and culture. Franklin's accomplishments as a practical philosopher and political scientist were accompanied by scientific innovation such as his work in astronomy, his experimentation with static electricity, and his invention of bifocal lenses and the heating stove.

The Greater Philadelphia community has a different concept than most communities when it comes to higher education. Higher education is not just the college campuses, but where the classrooms are state-of-the-art technology labs, world-renowned theaters and mahogany paneled boardrooms. A Philadelphia education is not something tackled two hours a day in a lecture hall. Education means learning firsthand how to live and work in the hustle and bustle of a world-class city. Nowhere else do college students play such a major role in the geography, culture, economics and personality of the city, making the city itself quite literally one expansive campus. The Greater Philadelphia community is a veritable patchwork of over 80 college campuses, where institutions of higher learning not only work together; they partner with cutting edge industries.

Increasingly, colleges and universities have emerged as major employers in the community. Their purchasing power equals that of major corporations, resulting in the creation of local jobs and businesses. Most important, much of the revenue generated by universities is "new" money to the community.

With the highest enrollment of the colleges and universities in the Greater Philadelphia Community, Temple University is a pre-eminent regional university. With US enrollment of 32,577, it is the largest university in the Greater Philadelphia Region.

As Jeff Lidicker, Director, Statistical Consulting Service at Temple University indicated in his report, Temple University is one of the educational hubs in the Greater Philadelphia Community. Temple's US enrollment is 32,577. Of this figure, 79% are from Pennsylvania. Of the Pennsylvania residents, the vast majority, 81% are from the Greater Philadelphia community.

Community College of Philadelphia is the only public institution of higher education in the city. Since 1965, over 500,000 students have attended Community College of Philadelphia seeking associates degrees, certificates, improved workplace skills and lifelong learning. Many of the degree students seek employment in the Philadelphia region. According to Dr. Jane Grosset, Director of Institutional Research, Community College of Philadelphia, virtually all of the Community College of Philadelphia students are from the Greater Philadelphia community. According to the Community College of Philadelphia's web site, over 90% of the graduates remain in the area and seek employment, strengthening the local economy and workforce. Local businesses utilize the Community Colleges' workplace training programs to keep their workers skilled and their companies competitive.

Knowledge Industry Partnership

In 2000, the Pennsylvania Economy League presented a collection of reports on Greater Philadelphia's Knowledge Industry. The purpose of the Greater Philadelphia's Knowledge Industry project was to profile the community's colleges and universities, with the goal of gaining a better understanding of this important community asset and how it contributes to Greater Philadelphia's economic competitiveness. The goal of the project led to numerous recommendations for strengthening the knowledge industry aimed to forge stronger ties between the colleges and universities and the community economy. The ultimate success of the project is its ability to bring together the community's academic, business, civic, and political groups under a shared vision for the community's future.

In the Greater Philadelphia community, higher education's impact far surpasses the traditional industry contributions of spending, employment, and investment. By virtue of what it "produces" – educated people and new ideas – Philadelphia's "knowledge industry" of colleges and universities is a community asset driving long-term trends such as population demographics, worker pool quality, and entrepreneurship.

According to the Greater Philadelphia's Knowledge Industry study, of the 66 institutions in the community, 47.3% of the student enrollment is at the institutions of higher education located in Philadelphia County. All four of the community's research and doctoral institutions are located in the city, reinforcing its role as the knowledge industry's core and community hub: Drexel University; MCP Hahnemann University; University of Pennsylvania; and Temple University. The suburban counties, on the other hand, have more of an exclusive focus on undergraduate education and professional training through the significant number of liberal arts colleges, comprehensive universities, and community colleges contained within them. Suburban institutions overall also have smaller student bodies on average compared to institutions located in the city.

Three major clusters of higher education institutions in the Greater Philadelphia community are all located in the hub, the City of Philadelphia. Each cluster is unique due to the nature of the institutions in the clusters with each drawing from different social characteristics. The largest and most visible cluster is University City, with one of the highest concentrations of universities, hospitals, and research institutions in the country. Located at the eastern most point of West Philadelphia and directly across the Schuylkill River from Center City, University City draws 13.6% of community student enrollment and is home to the University of Pennsylvania, Drexel University, and the University of the Sciences in Philadelphia. At one square mile, University City is the most compact of the knowledge industry clusters in the community.

Moving east of University City, a cluster of institutions is found within Center City Philadelphia. With 13.5% of the student population, the Center City cluster is a curious mixture of medical sciences and the arts. The cluster contains two medical schools and all the community's schools of art and music. It also includes two associates of arts colleges. Thomas Jefferson University, MCP Hahnemann University, More College of Art and Design, Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, and the University of the Arts are located in this cluster. The third knowledge industry cluster within the Greater Philadelphia community is located in North Philadelphia. This cluster is anchored by Temple University and includes La Salle University and the Pennsylvania College of Optometry. Many of the students attending these institutions are commuters.

Colleges and universities are also a major source of employment for community residents and are among some of the largest employers. In fact, 42% of employment at colleges and universities in Pennsylvania is located in the five-county community.

Philadelphia was one of the first to attempt to tap the economic benefits of proximity to colleges and universities when it established the nation's first urban research park, the University City Science Center, adjacent to the University of Pennsylvania and Drexel campuses in West Philadelphia. In recent years, the Science Center has refocused its energies on capitalizing on the synergies between knowledge-based industries like information technology and biotechnology and the research and labor pools available on local campuses. Combined with University of Pennsylvania's efforts to improve the quality and safety of residential neighborhoods and broaden the local retail community as well as major parcels of land available for new development on the fringes of University City, there is an opportunity for University City to emerge as a major knowledge-based business and residential district.

Greater Philadelphia's Knowledge Industry Partners (KIP) was born out of the Greater Philadelphia's Knowledge Industry project. KIP is a broad-based coalition of Greater Philadelphia's civic, business, government, and higher education leaders working together to maximize the impact of the community's "knowledge industry" of colleges and universities on Philadelphia's competitive position. This has been one of the most successful examples of regional partnership and interaction.

In order to secure a leadership position as a community center for higher education, KIP developed a three-year, multi-million dollar initiative positioning Philadelphia as "one big campus" – a premier college destination, where the campus is "measured in miles; not acres." In Philadelphia, the academic experience is enriched by an exceptional array of off-campus experiences – educational, cultural, professional, and personal.

Launched in 2003, the goal of the One Big Campus initiative is to create positive first-hand experiences throughout the student life cycle, which in turn lead to a stronger emotional attachment with the area and ultimately a personal desire to remain after graduation. More than 50,000 regional students participate in the One Big Campus event.

Under the leadership of an Advisory Group, this broad-based initiative represents a shared community agenda centered on the area's college student population. The effort is research-based and results-driven to dynamically impact the community's economy and demography. In 2005, the Knowledge Industry Partnership reported that its One Big Campus initiative has boosted the number of applications to area colleges and improved students' perceptions of the Greater Philadelphia region.

Campus Philly is a non-profit, student-run project of Greater Philadelphia. Campus Philly involves college students in the lifestyle, professional and community fabric of Philadelphia and its surrounding area. Its mission is to engage college students in providing them better information, incentives and networking opportunities to make the most out of college life in Philadelphia.

The Campus Philly web site was launched with grant support from the William Penn Foundation. Campus Philly receives funding and other support from the City of Philadelphia Department of Commerce, Pennsylvania's Stay Invent the Future Initiative, Ben Franklin Technology Partners of Southeast Pennsylvania, and 23 community colleges and universities.

One of Campus Philly's sponsored events is the Campus Philly Kick-Off (formerly Philadelphia College Festival,), which invites some 250,000 of the community's college students to a free party on the Benjamin Franklin Parkway. An unforgettable week of student-oriented events and promotions throughout the community, the Philadelphia College Festival takes Philadelphia's college and university students off campus to experience what Philadelphia offers as a place to live and work during school and after graduation. The festival is the city's official event to welcome students to the city and elevate the image of the community. The event strives to provide students with the tools needed to create a positive bond with Philadelphia's social, professional and community fabric.

The city of Philadelphia produces the festival with support from Comcast and other sponsors: KIP; Delaware River Port Authority; Greater Philadelphia Tourism Marketing Corporation; American Education Service; SEPTA; Career Philly; Philadelphia Business Journal; Philadelphia City Paper; University of Pennsylvania; Drexel University; Villanova University; LaSalle University; Temple University; Community College of Philadelphia; Bryn Mawr College; Delaware County Community College; Philadelphia University; Saint Joseph's University; Thomas Jefferson University; University of the Sciences in Philadelphia; and West Chester University of Pennsylvania.

Greater Philadelphia's higher education cluster is, and will continue to be, the region's single greatest asset in the global competition for knowledge-based economic development. With more than 66 colleges and universities, higher education institutions rank among the area's largest employers and collectively deliver a spending impact exceeding $6.4 billion annually. Higher education draws hundreds of millions of new dollars into the regional economy through tuition payments, local purchases by students and their families, and research funding from the federal government and other entities and is a key element connecting residents of the Greater Philadelphia community.

Greater Philadelphia Career Network

The Greater Philadelphia Career Network site is provided through partnerships between College Central Network, Inc. and LibertyNet. This is a consortium of 62 colleges located throughout the Greater Philadelphia area. Students and alumni can post resumes and search jobs for free. Employers can also get in on the action by posting jobs on the Internet at incredibly low prices.

Greater Philadelphia Productivity Consortium

The Greater Philadelphia Productivity Consortium is a customized training and workforce development service to local companies. Some of the lead partners in the effort are Ben Franklin Technology Partners/Southeastern Pennsylvania, the Community Colleges of Bucks, Delaware/Chester, Montgomery and Philadelphia counties, and the Philadelphia Area Council for Excellence.

Media and Public Relations

The Greater Philadelphia region possesses an extensive network of print, broadcast and television media outlets.

Print Newspapers

There are three clear choices among adults in the Greater Philadelphia community for obtaining news on international, national and local news via the print newspaper. They are the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Philadelphia Daily News and Metro Philadelphia.

- Philadelphia Inquirer - The Philadelphia Inquirer is America's third-oldest surviving daily newspaper, founded June 1, 1829. The Philadelphia

Inquirer's tradition of aggressive enterprise, explanatory reporting and stylish writing has been accorded 18 Pulitzer Prizes.

In June 2006, the Philadelphia Media Holdings L.L.C. bought the Philadelphia Inquirer, Philadelphia Daily News and the web site www.philly.com from the McClatchy Company. Media Holding L.L.C. is a group of Philadelphia investors and prominent community business people brought together by local entrepreneur Brian P. Tierney. The investors include: civic, labor and corporate leaders, entrepreneurs and private investors who share a commitment to high quality, locally owned journalism.

The Philadelphia Inquirer is also the newspaper of choice for residents throughout the Greater Philadelphia community, often having higher readership in a given neighborhood than the "local" newspaper. Sports and Recreation

There is year round excitement for sports fans in the community with Greater Philadelphia being home to the Philadelphia 76ers, Phillies, Eagles, and the Flyers representing the city in professional basketball, baseball, football and ice hockey, respectively. Philadelphia's stature as a premier sports town has never been stronger. Philadelphia served as proud host to the 2001 and 2002 ESPN X Games, 2002 NBA All-Star Game, 2001 U.S. Gymnastics Championships, 2001 NCAA Men's Basketball East Regional, 2001 World Dragon Boat Championships and much more.

Add to this impressive list the 1996 Major League Baseball All-Star Game, 1998 U.S. Figure Skating Championships and the 2000 NCAA Women's Final Four and it is clear Philadelphia is a world-class sports destination. Philadelphia boasts extensive athletic facilities, including the Wachovia Complex and Liacouras Center. Just recently, Lincoln Financial Field opened as the new home of the Philadelphia Eagles (National Football League). Another new state-of-the-art facility in the community is the Philadelphia Phillies' (Major League Baseball) Citizens Bank Park.

The Greater Philadelphia community strongly supports its professional sports teams. Over half of the Greater Philadelphia community residents attend a professional sports event. According to Scarborough Research, the Philadelphia Phillies baseball team is at the top of the list with 62.5% of the fans that attend a Philadelphia Phillies baseball game coming from the Greater Philadelphia community. Phillies' baseball fans go to the ballpark to "root for the home team."

The Greater Philadelphia community also supports its other professional sports teams, the Philadelphia Eagles football, Philadelphia 76ers basketball and Philadelphia Flyers ice hockey teams. Again, residents from throughout the community travel to the hub, Philadelphia, to attend professional sporting events. According to Scarborough Research, of all the fans attending Eagles, 76ers and Flyers sporting events, more than half of the attendees are from the Greater Philadelphia community. Of adults attending Philadelphia Eagles games, 55.6% are residents from the five county Greater Philadelphia community (Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Philadelphia).

Similarly, of the community's residents attending Philadelphia 76ers basketball and Philadelphia Flyers ice hockey games, 59.4% and 58.7%, respectively, are Greater Philadelphia community residents.

The Army/Navy Game, Wachovia US PRO Cycling Championships, Philadelphia Distance Run, Philadelphia Marathon, Penn Relays, and a number of world-class regattas are just some of the community's high-profile events.

With more than 10,000 hotel rooms in Center City, tremendous accessibility and a comprehensive event infrastructure including support from the Philadelphia Sports Congress and the Philadelphia Convention and Visitors Bureau, Philadelphia offers unbeatable sporting events.

Established in 1987, the Philadelphia Sports Congress (PSC), a division of the Philadelphia Convention and Visitors Bureau, seeks to attract major sporting events and conventions to the Philadelphia area. Working with the area's professional teams, universities, facilities, and corporate community, PSC acts as a resource and facilitator for meeting and event planners. PSC also assists with site visits, sports media contacts and special event planning.

One of the main venues for musical events is the Wachovia Center. Opened in 1997 and seating more than 19,000, it hosts hundreds of events each year, including college basketball games, concerts and dozens of other special events. According to 2006 Scarborough Research, more than half the Wachovia Center event attendees are from the Greater Philadelphia community.

Festivals and Events

The heritage of the community is celebrated annually at numerous festivals and events throughout the Greater Philadelphia community. Descriptions of some of the major community annual events that provide avenues for community residents to socialize and interact include, but are not limited to, the following:

- The Philadelphia Mummers Parade - This joyous celebration of the New Year begins in the early hours of the morning on January 1st and proceeds without interruption for about 10 hours. More than 10,000 men and women march in the Mummers Parade. Its most wonderful and awe-inspiring sights are the Fancy Brigades and String Bands. Each group consisting of more than 150 members, together with their very expensive costumes of plume, sequin and satin, strut in a noticeably staggered way up Broad Street in Center City Philadelphia to create the focal point of the world's biggest New Year's Day Party. About one million people of every creed and color turn out for this annual spectacular.

According to Scarborough Research, the Philadelphia Mummers Parade draws strong attendance from the Greater Philadelphia community, particularly from Philadelphia, Delaware and Montgomery counties. Approximately 258,406 adults from the five-county Greater Philadelphia community (Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Philadelphia) attended the Mummers Parade. The five-county Greater Philadelphia community made up 74.8% of the Mummers Parade attendance.

- Philadelphia Thanksgiving Parade - Dating back to 1920, the Philadelphia Thanksgiving Parade claims to be the nation's first and, therefore, the longest running parade of its kind in the country. With over 200,000 attendees, 61% of whom are from the Greater Philadelphia community, it is an event that brings families from throughout the area to celebrate our nation's heritage and to "open" the holiday season.

- Philadelphia Craft Show - Every year in November, about 195 artists from around the country are invited to the Pennsylvania Convention Center for the Philadelphia Craft Show. The show features basketry to woodworking and fiber arts to furniture, with most items being for sale. - Manayunk Arts Festival - Philadelphia Magazine's Manayunk Arts Festival is the largest outdoor arts and crafts show in the Greater Philadelphia community. This show features over 275 artists. Annually, over 300,000 people visit Main Street Manayunk to see one-of-a-kind work displayed. According to David West, Director of the Manayunk Development Corporation, between 200,000-400,000 people from Pennsylvania,

- Philadelphia Film Festival - The Philadelphia Film Festival (PFF) began its 14th year the first two weeks of April 2006. The festival itself has grown to offer 340 films spread over seven principal venues, with The Bridge: Cinema de Luxe and The Independence Seaport Museum being two new venues. The festival spread not only across film genres, but national, political and social boundaries, and, with silent and classic offerings, stretched across time. With all these offerings, even when taking in two to four films daily over two weeks, an attendee was lucky to take in one-tenth of the festival's total offerings. All venues, including the three participating Ritz Theaters, are within easy walking distance from SEPTA's Market-Frankford elevated line, allowing patrons to park in town and move from venue to venue by foot and train.

Formed in 2001, The Philadelphia Film Society is dedicated to the presentation of film and video in the Greater Philadelphia area as a powerful form of artistic expression and a unique force for cultural diversity and international understanding. Its mission is to engage the diverse communities of the region by producing major film events and other year-round programming. Among its most prominent activities is the Philadelphia Film Festival. Held for two weeks in April, the Festival brings the world's imagination to Philadelphia with screenings of nearly 300 features, documentaries, shorts and animation from 50 countries for an audience of 61,000. Among its thematic highlights are "Cinema of the Muslim Worlds," which in 2003 was covered by the Wall Street Journal; "Danger After Dark," an internationally renowned celebration of genre films; and the annual City Paper Festival of Independents, a regional filmmaking showcase.

The Philadelphia Film Society supporters include a regional collaboration of public officials, corporations, arts councils and foundations, such as City of Philadelphia Department of Commerce, Delaware River Port Authority, Philadelphia Cultural Fund, Greater Philadelphia Cultural Alliance, 5-County Arts Fund, and Pennsylvania Council of the Arts.

- Philadelphia Fringe Festival - In 2004, the 16-day Philadelphia Fringe Festival drew over 47,000 people. Since its inception in 1997, the Fringe has presented and facilitated the work of over 1,500 artists and company members performing for more than 700 performances. The festival gathers the most provocative and exciting new works by artists in all fields of the performing arts. Historically, the festival has been made up of programmed shows, chosen by the staff and panelists, unfiltered shows, produced by independent-spirited artists who present their work free from any selection process. The festival presents a full spectrum of colorful work that falls within, between and sometimes beyond the standard categories of theater, dance, performance art, music, poetry, puppetry and visual arts. As a result, the festival has positioned itself as a major contemporary performing arts presenter and has taken its place as an important national arts hub.

- Welcome America Festival - Each July 4th, community residents celebrate America's Birthday in America's Birthplace at the Sunoco Welcome America! Festival. In 2006, Philadelphia's annual Independence Day celebration featured a variety of free events June 27 through July 4. There were diverse musical performances, food and activities for all ages to enjoy, including incredible concerts and fireworks displays lighting up the sky above the Philadelphia Museum of Art and Penn's Landing. The 2006 Welcome America event attracted 143,516 attendees according to the 2006 Scarborough Research, with 93.5% from the Greater Philadelphia community.

Arts and Culture

A nucleus of American culture in colonial times, Philadelphia is still the seat of many philosophical, artistic, dramatic, musical, and scientific societies. Among these are the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts (1805); the Academy of Natural Sciences (1812); and the Science Museum of the Franklin Institute (1824), which now includes the Benjamin Franklin Memorial (1933), an important unit of which is the Fels Planetarium.

During the early to mid-1800s, Philadelphia was the cultural capital of the United States. As the "Athens of America," Philadelphia was the center of education, science, music, art, and philosophy for much of the 19th century. As the city approached the onset of the 20th century, another period of activity and excitement began. Organizations like the Philadelphia Zoo, the Franklin Institute, and the Philadelphia Museum of Art are all legacies of the generosity of late 19th century Philadelphians.

The most dramatic era of growth came with the establishment of the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) in the mid-1960s. While today the NEA accounts for less than 2% of total arts revenues in the area, 50% of the nonprofit arts and culture organizations in the community were founded after the establishment of the NEA. Today, the community is poised on the next major growth period in its long cultural history. With close to $1 billion of new capital projects planned or underway, the community is currently in the midst of a period of capital investment rivaled only by the growth of the late 19th century.

Across the nation, smart and aggressive communities are recognizing the economic value of their cultural assets and are actively seeking to capitalize on the potential that those assets represent. Greater Philadelphia is blessed with a superb collection of cultural assets, assets that are increasingly viewed in an economic development context. Redevelopment of Broad Street into the Avenue of the Arts has heightened awareness of the use of cultural facilities and assets as central pieces of the city's economic development strategy. Major events like the Cezanne exhibition at the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Flower Show have opened eyes about the connections between the arts and economic opportunity. Suburban museums like the Mercer Museum in Bucks County and the Brandywine River Museum in Delaware County are major assets for the entire community.

In 1997, a task force of community private sector leadership formed the Regional Arts and Culture Economic Initiative (RACE) to fully understand how to capitalize fully on the emerging opportunity of utilizing the arts and cultures as community assets. Through this initiative a comprehensive and thorough analysis of Greater Philadelphia's nonprofit cultural industry was undertaken. The project was supported by the William Penn Foundation, the Pennsylvania Convention Center Authority, the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, Greater Philadelphia First, AT&T, and Verizon, with in-kind support from the Arts & Business Council, the Greater Philadelphia Cultural Alliance and the Pennsylvania Economy League.

The summary of the findings from the study shows Greater Philadelphia's nonprofit cultural industry is a major contributor to the community's economy, and provides significant indirect benefits to community companies, particularly in attracting and retaining the skilled knowledge workers who support their growth. The industry is poised for growth, flush with major new capital investments and new energy and momentum. Spirited and energetic leadership from the business, civic, cultural and political communities have aided its growth. According to the September 2006 report "Greater Philadelphia Cultural Alliance 2006 Portfolio," the Greater Philadelphia regional non-profit cultural sector is an important contributor to the local economy and earns $573 million in annual revenues.

The Greater Philadelphia Cultural Alliance is a leadership organization of over 300 non-profit arts and cultural institutions located primarily in the five counties of southeastern Pennsylvania. Its mission is to lead the effort to increase awareness of, participation in, and support for arts and culture in the Greater Philadelphia region.

Non-profit arts and cultural organizations are a vibrant force in the Greater Philadelphia community, contributing to the economy, giving it a distinct civic identity, celebrating its history and culture, providing creative and educational opportunities for people of all ages, and delivering a wealth of cultural experiences for residents and visitors to enjoy.

There are more than 150 cultural events per day in southeastern Pennsylvania, almost 56,000 in one year. Arts and cultural organizations report 12 million visits per year, the equivalent of three visits annually for every man, woman, and child in southeastern Pennsylvania. One in five people in southeastern Pennsylvania have memberships or subscriptions to arts and cultural organizations, for a total of 732,000. Annually, more than 17,000 volunteer positions are filled at cultural organizations, which is a strong showing of community support. Individuals make nearly 270,000 contributions above and beyond admission and ticket fees to cultural organizations. The average contribution (for individuals who do not sit on the boards of those organizations) is $300.

In September 2006, the Greater Philadelphia Cultural Alliance/PCA 5-County Arts Fund announced the award of $145,334 to 101 community organizations and individual artists in the five counties of the Greater Philadelphia community.

The program offers grants of up to $3,000 to non-profit organizations and individual artists that sponsor arts-related projects or programs in the five-county region of southeastern Pennsylvania. The statewide Partners in the Arts program pairs PCA with 13 regional agencies to evaluate proposals and distribute grant awards for projects or programs involving artists. The Cultural Alliance is a PCA's partner in the Philadelphia area. As in years past, Philadelphia saw the largest number of grants awarded (29 total).

More than any other industry its size, Philadelphia's nonprofit cultural industry represents a major competitive advantage for the community. It helps define the community's image and adds significant value to community companies who understand its potential.

Obviously, there are vast differences between orchestras and museums, zoos and arts centers. Treating the arts community as a monolith is as deceiving as treating the "business community" as one entity. The motivations, approaches, and challenges in the arts industry vary to such a great degree that easy characterization of the industry is very difficult. By breaking the industry into four broad artistic categories, it is possible to identify key similarities and differences between the various artistic disciplines.

Performing arts organizations present a performance in front of an audience, in a facility that they either own or rent. In the five-county community, about 67% of these organizations are located in the city of Philadelphia, once again emphasizing it as the community hub. In some cases, city-based performing arts organizations (particularly those not bound to a specific facility) have shifted some of their performances to suburban facilities in order to broaden their audience base.

Museums, galleries, historic, and scientific institutions include organizations like art museums, historic parks and sites, science centers, zoos, and other visual arts presenters. Typically their collections are very place-based, with only select items available for traveling or shared presentations. These visual arts institutions account for 80% of attendance at community cultural attractions, with more than 14 million of the community's total 18 million in attendance. (This figure includes more than six million visitors to Valley Forge National Historic Park.)

Art centers typically serve as multi-disciplinary community cultural facilities. They may serve a primary function as a visual arts presenter, but typically will offer performances, classes, and other offerings to serve the residents of their community. In many cases, arts centers serve as community development facilities that also provide job training and education programs to local residents.

The other cultural organizations category captures a mixture of art forms, including literary magazines and societies, historic societies, arts councils, and community service organizations.

Over the past 50 years, there has been a dramatic shift in population and employment in Greater Philadelphia. In 1960, the city of Philadelphia accounted for 56% of the population in the five-county community. By 2005, the city only accounted for 37% of community population. At the same time, the employment base has shifted outwards as well. While the community economy and population base have shifted to the suburbs, cultural Philadelphia remains largely centered in the hub of the community, the city of Philadelphia. Seventy percent of all community nonprofit cultural organizations are located in the city of Philadelphia, and they account for about 81% of total spending.

Greater Philadelphia community residents greatly appreciate live theater. According to 2006 Scarborough Research, all of the attendees of live theater performances in the Philadelphia area, two-thirds are from the five-county Greater Philadelphia community (Bucks, Chester, Delaware Montgomery, and Philadelphia).

- Kimmel Center for Performing Arts - Perhaps the most prominent performing arts facility and home to eight resident companies is the Kimmel Center for Performing Arts. The Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts is an internationally acclaimed performing arts complex in the heart of Philadelphia. The centerpiece of the city's Avenue of the Arts, The Kimmel Center total performance attendance for 2005 was 741,620.

Kimmel Center, Inc. began to take shape in 1996 when two projects came together: The Philadelphia Orchestra's ongoing plan to build a new home for itself, and a plan of then Mayor Edward G. Rendell to provide a much-needed venue for some of Philadelphia's most prominent performing arts companies and for touring presentations. The two plans were merged under the supervision and management of a new organization, the Regional Performing Arts Center (RPAC). Construction of The Kimmel Center had a spending impact of approximately $350 million, generating more than 5,000 jobs and more than $15 million in state and local tax revenues.

Today, Kimmel Center, Inc., a new complex on the Avenue of the Arts in Center City Philadelphia, incorporates public amenities and two major venues: The Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts – Verizon Hall, a 2,500-seat concert hall; and Perelman Theater, a 650-seat recital theater; and a renovated and upgraded Academy of Music (2,900 seats), which is owned by The Philadelphia Orchestra and operated by Kimmel Center, Inc.

Kimmel Center, Inc.'s facilities host eight resident companies: Verizon Hall is home to The Philadelphia Orchestra and to Peter Nero and the Philly Pops®. Perelman Theater is home to PHILADANCO, The Chamber Orchestra of Philadelphia, The Philadelphia Chamber Music Society and American Theater Arts for Youth. The Academy of Music is home to the Opera Company of Philadelphia and the Pennsylvania Ballet.

As stated in their 2005 annual report, "Key to the Kimmel Center's success in engaging the Greater Philadelphia community has been the Free in the Plaza program. During the 2004-2005 season, more than 6,550 attendees were treated to 49 Free in the Plaza events from a tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. to Deaf Awareness Week Performances."

Through its educational programs, the Kimmel Center brings students from throughout the Greater Philadelphia community together for enriching learning opportunities. In 2005, 117 free curriculum-based classes introduced approximately 3,000 middle and high school students from 46 schools to distinctly American music forms. Students traveled from schools throughout Philadelphia, Radnor and Prospect Park in Delaware County, Kennett Square in Chester County and Huntington Valley in Montgomery County.

Clearly residents of the Greater Philadelphia community appreciate the wide array of theatre venues located in the area further demonstrating another common bond that ties the residents of the Greater Philadelphia area as one local community.

- Philadelphia Museum of Art* - Located on the Benjamin Franklin Parkway in Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Museum of Art stands as one of the great art institutions of the world. In the over 125 years since its founding, it has grown far beyond the limits originally set for it. Today, the Museum houses over 225,000 works of art encompassing some of the greatest achievements of human creativity, and offers a wealth of exhibitions and educational programs for a public of all ages. While data specific to attendance at the Philadelphia Art Museum was unavailable, the 2006 Scarborough Research indicates that 59.4% of the Greater Philadelphia community attends one of the regions' art museums. Given its notoriety and reputation, it is not unreasonable to conclude that the renowned Philadelphia Art Museum is often their destination.

Electronic and physical delivery channels should support and complement each other to create an improved member experience. Originally thought to replace the need for brick and mortar, electronic channels have actually created a new and increased demand. Together, these two channels can effectively create a more dynamic business proposition. Electronic delivery services are an important aspect of Citadel FCU's ability to serve a community field of membership. The credit union has experienced a strong acceptance of its website home banking, which is constantly growing.

The electronic services offered by the credit union provide an alternative to branch office visits for the growing number of members who do not have time or do not wish to visit a branch office. Following is a brief description of these services.

Citadel FCU's comprehensive website at www.citadelfcu.org provides members and potential members with up-to-date information about the credit union's locations, services, rates, savings, loans, special promotions, newsletters and other aspects of the credit union. Projections and Assumptions

The following sections contain Citadel Federal Credit Union's projected financial operating plan for the next three years in conjunction with a conversion to a community charter. Also included are national and credit union industry economic outlooks.

Economic Outlook

The success of the economy in 2008 will largely depend on the severity of the credit crisis created by the housing downturn. The federal government has pieced together an array of programs designed to help homeowners make payments on subprime mortgages that would otherwise become victim to high rate resets. In addition, the Federal Reserve has reduced interest rates heading into 2008 to ease some of the pressures on consumers.

The economy in 2008 is fragile in the face of a liquidity crunch and unprecedented real estate deflation, which will create a wealth effect on consumer spending. While housing and autos will remain weak, business investment spending is a strength in the current economy. Strong profits, high capital utilization, low cost of capital and need to remain competitive should keep business fixed investment spending strong, but economic uncertainty may cause it to decline.

Gross Domestic Product

Over the past few years, real GDP growth has been driven primarily by consumer spending and residential investment. Consumer spending is slowing and residential investment is falling sharply, particularly in markets that received the largest growth in the last ten years. Going forward, non-residential investment and government spending should play more important roles in driving overall GDP growth, which will not be as strong in 2008 as it has been over the past few years. Consumer spending could be greatly impacted by the mortgage meltdown, particularly as adjustable rate mortgages increase, causing greater strain on American households.

Unemployment

Job growth continued throughout 2007: 1.3 million more Americans are working at year end 2007 than at the start of 2007. The unemployment rate has increased from 4.4 percent to 5 percent over the last year. This rate is very low by historical standards. For non-teen workers, the rate is even lower—at 4.4 percent. Thirty-eight thousand Americans entered the job market looking for work, which did not change the labor force participation rate.

Sectors affected by the housing and credit crisis suffered job losses. The construction industry continued to shed jobs as it completed its second year of declining activity. Construction lost 49,000 jobs in December 2007 and a total of 236,000 jobs since the housing decline began in September 2006. Jobs focused on credit markets declined by 7,000 as banks struggle to deal with bad loans and few lending options. The writers' strike contributed to the loss of 15,000 jobs in the motion picture and broadcasting industry.

Inflation

A slowing economy and slower increases in housing costs will lower price pressures and core inflation in 2008. Contract housing and manufacturing sectors should produce below-potential growth and a reduction in inflationary pressures. Large retailers, global competition and slow wage growth are likewise keeping consumer prices low in many areas.

While a general decline in the overall rate of inflation has occurred, large swings in energy prices have increased the volatility of overall inflation.

Consumer Spending

Consumer confidence returned to average levels in 2006, before slowing in 2007. The impact on 2008 will again be largely determined by the overall impact of the mortgage crisis and the potential increase in payments on households.

Business and Product Outlook

Automobile Lending

A slowdown in the overall economy is expected to cause a slight decrease in auto production levels. Due to this, financial incentives will remain an integral key to their ability to move vehicles. For the past several years, the majority of manufacturers have come to rely on large rebates and zero or low-rate financial offers to maintain their sales volumes. Consequently, the public has now grown to expect such incentives. In addition, automakers have successfully integrated steady increases into their product pricing, but only by extending financing terms to 72 and even 84 months. More often than not, lenders are forced to meet these longer terms in order to compete with the captive financiers. Credit unions will continue to face competitive pressures from dealer financing in 2008 and beyond.

Within the credit union industry, total auto loans (new and used) increased 7.59 percent from $144.9 billion to $155.9 billion.

Mortgage Lending

Mortgage lending will be of particular interest throughout 2008, particularly in areas hardest hit by the recent housing downturn. Mortgage loans will continue to be important to the credit union industry, and can prove to be a differentiator from subprime mortgage companies if handled in the correct manner. Credit will become tighter for marginal borrowers in 2008 as regulators force lenders to tighten lending standards due to a greater share of mortgage loans going bad.

Within the credit union industry, 1st Mortgage Real Estate loans increased 10.4 percent from $117.6 billion to $129.8 billion. Other Real Estate loans increased 23.8 percent from $50.1 billion to $62.0 billion.

Credit Cards

Competition for credit card business is expected to be considerable again in 2008. Experts predict that the average consumer's unsecured debt level will continue to reach new highs. Notwithstanding this fact, consumers are likely to be inundated with over 1.2 billion pieces of direct mail touting the advantages of the major credit card vendors. (b)(4)

(b)(4)

Deposits

Savings growth during 2008 should be relatively stronger than loan growth, particularly compared with the last few years. Credit unions should also expect to see a shift from core to interest sensitive deposits in 2008. (b)(4)

(b)(4)

Within the credit union industry, shares increased 5.3 percent, up from $528.3 billion to $556.1 billion.

Credit Unions Positioned for Continued Growth

NCUA year-end 2006 statistics reveal that credit unions posted consistent, healthy growth through the year according to call report data submitted by the reporting credit unions. These statistics demonstrate growth from year end 2005 of federally insured credit unions in many areas of the balance sheet and income statement categories through the end of year 2006:

- Assets increased 4.61 percent to $709.9 billion from $678.7 billion
- Loans increased 7.88 percent to $494.3 billion from $458.2 billion
- Investments declined 9.14 percent to $134.4 billion from $148.0 billion
- Shares increased 4.08 percent to $601.2 billion from $577.6 billion
- Net worth increased 7.42 percent to $82.0 billion from $76.3 billion
- Membership increased 1.48 percent to 85.8 million members
- ROA decreased slightly from 0.85 percent to 0.82 percent

At the time of this application, NCUA year end 2007 statistics are not available. However, September 30, 2007 statistics reveal the following:

- Assets increased 7.17 percent from $709.9 billion to $760.8 billion
- Loans increased 6.33 percent
- Shares increased 5.78 percent
- Net worth to total assets was 11.5 percent
- Membership increased 3.1 percent to 88.5 million members
- ROA decreased from 0.82 percent to 0.75 percent

HOW TO READ A CROSSTAB

The tool to turn a pile of numbers and complicated formulas . . .

into brilliant ideas and strategies:

A crosstab is the cross referencing or comparison of two variables (such as product usage and demographics) to determine how they are interrelated.

A crosstab gets its name from the layout of variable definitions into rows and columns as in this example.

Base: Total Adults

Total	Variable (Age 25-49)
1000	560
100000	56000
100.0	56.0
100.0	100.0
100	100

Variable
(Own a PC)

Respondents	360	230
Projected	36000	23000
Horizontal %	100.0	63.9
Vertical %	36.0	41.1
Index	100	114

Comparing two variables in this format produces a target cell that defines people who have both characteristics.

The size and importance of the target cell definition can be evaluated in comparison to the row variable, the column variable and the total base using percentages and indices.

Five numbers are usually reported in a crosstab cell:

The Respondent number refers to the number of survey respondents or sample size for the defined characteristics. It is used to judge how reliable the estimates will be and should be at least 30 for any cell.

The Projected number provides an estimate of the number of people in a market area that have the characteristics defined in the row and/or column. It is based on the unweighted sample "projected" to the market area population.

The Horizontal % is the percentage of people defined in the row who also have the column characteristic.

The Vertical % is the percentage of people defined by the column characteristics who also fit the row definition.

The Index indicates the likelihood of people having both characteristics in comparison to the base population.

The example target cell identifies adults who are both PC owners and aged 25-49.

	Age 25-49
PC Owner
Respondent	230
Projected	23000
Horizontal %	63.9
Vertical %	41.1
Index	225

⇒ The Respondent number (230) refers to the number of survey respondents who said they are both PC owners and in the 25-49 age group.

⇒ The Projected number (23000) is the estimated number of people the sample would represent in the total population of the market.

Horizontal %

The Horizontal % is calculated by dividing the projected number of the cell by the projected number of the cell "horizontal" to it in the first column.

$23000 / 36000 \times 100 = 63.9\%$

Therefore, X% of people defined by the row variable also have the column variable characteristic.

- ⇒ 36000 people own a PC.
- ⇒ 23000 people own a PC and are age 25-49.
- ⇒ 63.9% of people who own a PC are age 25-49.

* * * * *

Vertical %

The Vertical % is calculated by dividing the projected number of the cell by the projected number of the cell "vertical" to it in the first row.

$23000 / 56000 \times 100 = 41.1\%$

Therefore, X% of people defined by the column variable also have the row variable characteristic.

- ⇒ 56000 people are age 25-49.
- ⇒ 23000 people own a PC and are age 25-49.
- ⇒ 41.1% of people age 25-49 own a PC.

Index

The Index is calculated by dividing the Horizontal % of the cell by the Horizontal % of the cell in the first row.

$63.9 / 56.0 \times 100 = 114$

Likewise, the Index can also be calculated by dividing the Vertical % of the cell by the Vertical % of the cell in the first column.

$41.1 / 36.0 \times 100 = 114$

Both calculations yield the same index.

* * * * *

Indices indicate the likelihood of people who have the characteristics of one variable to have the characteristics of another variable as compared to your base population.

⇒ Indices greater than 100 indicate a (Index-100)% higher likelihood.

Index = 130, 30% higher likelihood ⇒ Indices lower than 100 indicate a (100-Index)% lower likelihood.

Index = 75, 25% lower likelihood

In our example:

- ⇒ PC owners are 14% more likely to be age 25-49 than the average adult.
- Those age 25-49 are 14% more likely to be PC owners than the average adult.

On behalf of the project's sponsors, I am pleased to present a collection of reports on Greater Philadelphia's Knowledge Industry. Our purpose in undertaking this project was to profile the region's colleges and universities, with the goal of gaining a better understanding of this important regional asset and how it contributes to Greater Philadelphia's economic competitiveness. This goal has led to numerous recommendations for strengthening our knowledge industry, including specific strategies that aim to forge stronger ties between our colleges and universities and the regional economy. The ultimate success of this project, however, will be measured by the report's ability to bring together the region's academic, business, civic, and political communities under a shared vision for our region's future.

In completing this project, we have collected a significant amount of data to profile and benchmark Greater Philadelphia's knowledge industry, allowing for regional comparisons that form an important backdrop describing the global competitive environment. Much of this data was obtained from the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES), which maintains a wealth of data on higher education institutions throughout the country in the Integrated Post-Secondary Education Data System (IPEDS). As you will see, the NCES/IPEDS data set forms the backbone of our research. Many colleges and universities in the Philadelphia region also willingly provided data and insight during the research process, an invaluable complement to the NCES/IPEDS data set. Qualitative insight was gathered from notable sources on higher education, in particular the Chronicle of Higher Education, the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Philadelphia Daily News (for local higher education insight), and various academic publications in the fields of public policy, economics, and higher education administration. Finally, a number of individuals representing the academic, business, and civic sectors in the region previewed the draft research findings, providing important feedback on content and presentation.

Thanks and much deserved recognition go to the following organizations and individuals for their help and assistance throughout the project:

- The Pew Charitable Trusts, through Jim England and Don Kimelman, provided generous initial funding for the project as well as valuable guidance throughout the research phase.
- The University of Pennsylvania, the City of Philadelphia's Commerce Department, and the Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development (DCED) provided generous matching funds for the project as well as valuable guidance throughout the research phase. In particular, John Fry, Jack Shannon, and Anne Taufen of the University of Pennsylvania; Jim Cuorato of the City Commerce Department and former Commerce Director Stephen Mullin; and Tim McNulty of DCED are to be recognized for their contributions.
- More than 60 academic, civic, and business leaders in the region took time to preview the draft research findings, providing valuable feedback on content and presentation.
- The University City Science Center provided initial assistance in organizing the project.
- Lastly, officials of other regions, most notably Baltimore, Boston, Pittsburgh, and the San Francisco Bay Area, graciously hosted the research team during benchmarking visits and provided valuable insight into their regions' knowledge industry initiatives.

The research presented in these reports represents the collective work of PEL Research Associates Annette Goldberg and Ernie Wright, under the guidance of Executive Director David Thornburgh and Deputy Director and Research Director Steve Wray and with the assistance of Research Associate Andrew Maleson and former Research Associate Anuj Gupta. A copy of the report is available on our website: www.peleast.org. We invite your thoughts on this research – please e-mail, call, or write us with your comments.

PROFILE OF GREATER PHILADELPHIA'S KNOWLEDGE INDUSTRY

For an industry as important as Greater Philadelphia's knowledge industry of colleges and universities, it is vital to be able to describe and define the industry itself. Putting Greater Philadelphia's 83 diverse institutions of higher education into a single profile is a daunting task – but in this section we give it our best shot.

Eighty-three colleges and universities form the core of Greater Philadelphia's¹ knowledge industry.² In the broadest sense, these institutions of higher education qualify as the knowledge industry by virtue of the knowledge they impart to an enrolled student body (embodied in a degree) and the knowledge they generate through research.³ While they represent a rich variety of academic disciplines, organizational values, and administrative practices, our colleges and universities face many of the same challenges. They compete fiercely for students and faculty with other regions' colleges and universities and with an increasingly enticing private sector. They are charged with delivering a quality "product," while facing growing pressure to reduce costs, keep tuition under control, and are accountable for their performance. Even the venerable sphere of university-based research is changing as academics are offered stronger incentives and face stiffer competition in the race to commercialize research discoveries. With the emergence of the new economy, where knowledge and ideas are believed to have the greatest value, colleges and universities are increasingly the key to a region's economic development.

Colleges and universities have always played an important economic role in the Philadelphia region. As some of the oldest institutions in the region and even the nation, our colleges and universities have educated generations of regional residents, other Americans, and students from abroad, raising their level of knowledge and skills and preparing them for gainful employment and enterprising ventures. Through their research endeavors, Greater Philadelphia's colleges and universities have spurred on new industries and innovation in existing products and services, creating new opportunities and wealth for the region and the nation.

Increasingly, colleges and universities have emerged as major employers in the region. Their purchasing power equals that of major corporations, resulting in the creation of local jobs and businesses. Most important, much of the revenue generated by universities is "new" money to the region – federal research funding and tuition from non-resident students which otherwise would not be entering the local economy. On the qualitative side, colleges and universities provide cultural and recreational opportunities as well as community services such as health care and assistance with K-12 education for residents.

Thus, profiling the region's knowledge industry becomes a key to understanding regional economic competitiveness in the new economy. Understanding the knowledge industry means understanding their institutional, geographic, historical, and economic characteristics.

Types of Knowledge Institutions

Greater Philadelphia's knowledge industry is not a monolith – each institution has its own set of academic goals and achievements. The Carnegie Classification System provides a useful typology for grouping them (Figure 1).⁴

Research and Doctoral Universities

Research and doctoral universities are the region's research leaders, though teaching is also a primary component of their mission. They offer a full range of baccalaureate programs, are committed to higher education through to the doctorate level, and receive significant levels of funding for research, particularly from the federal government. As major research institutions, they often provide technology transfer services as a benefit to faculty researchers as well as other services for promoting business activity, such as incubation or consulting services for start-up companies. While only five institutions in Greater Philadelphia have been classified as research or doctoral universities (Figure 2), they are among the largest institutions in the region and account for almost a third of all student enrollment. Their size, economic prowess, and reputation make them the most prominent institutions in the region's knowledge industry and group them with the most prestigious institutions in the country.

Comprehensive Universities

Like research and doctoral universities, comprehensive universities offer a full range of baccalaureate programs and are committed to higher education at the graduate level. While they might conduct research activities and perhaps even grant doctoral degrees, they do not do so to the extent that research and doctoral universities do. They account for more than a quarter of student enrollment in the region, though there are more of them and they are smaller in size. As major grantors of master's degrees such as MBAs and first professional degrees such as JDs and MDs, they are a primary contributor to the region's professional worker pool and as such enjoy strong recognition within the region and even some recognition outside the region.

Liberal Arts Colleges

Liberal arts colleges are primarily undergraduate colleges with a major emphasis on baccalaureate degree programs. While they might conduct research and perhaps even offer graduate degrees, they do not do so to the same extent as research and comprehensive universities. In some instances, they are very restrictive in their selection process and have earned a national reputation as being highly competitive. They are the smallest of the major classification types, accounting for 7 percent of regional FTE enrollments, and tend to have small student bodies. In spite of their small size, several draw a large portion of their student body from outside the region, raising the overall caliber of the region's reputation and the students who attend regional institutions.

Associate of Arts Colleges

Associate of arts colleges are undergraduate colleges that focus on granting associate's degrees. They include all the region's community colleges as well as a number of proprietary, for-profit institutions. Their programs are often designed as the starting point for students who intend to enter a 4-year baccalaureate program. Their function is teaching undergraduates; with almost no exceptions, they do not conduct research or grant degrees beyond the bachelor's degree level. As the only institution type located in 13 of the 14 counties of the metro area – indeed, in most cases they are partly the creatures of local government – community colleges are the major educators of the region's workforce, particularly entry-level workers and workers with technical skills. With almost a third of student enrollment, they enjoy strong local followings, but little recognition beyond the region.

Medical Schools/Centers and Other Health Professional Schools

These institutions primarily award professional degrees in medicine and other health-related fields such as chiropractic, nursing, pharmacy, or podiatry. They differ from larger universities that have schools of medicine and other health professional programs in that they exclusively focus on professional training and do not offer baccalaureate or graduate programs in fields other than medicine and other health-related professions.

Other Schools

This catchall category includes theological seminaries and Bible colleges, schools of engineering and technology, schools of business and management, schools of art, music, and design, schools of law, and teachers colleges. They are specialized institutions offering a range of degree programs within a single discipline.

Strong Historical Roots

Greater Philadelphia's knowledge industry institutions are deeply rooted in the region's history – with the exception of Associate of Arts Colleges (i.e., community colleges), all the major classifications of institutions have average ages of at least 95 years. The first attempts to establish an institution of higher education were in 1740, but it was not until almost 10 years later under the vision of Benjamin Franklin that the University of Pennsylvania was officially established as the nation's first secular institution. Penn remained the only institution of higher education in the region (that survives today) until 65 years later when the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the nation's first art school and museum, was founded. Sixty-eight Philadelphia apothecaries who sought to train apprentices and students in the fundamental sciences underlying pharmacy, biology and chemistry founded the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, now called the University of the Sciences in Philadelphia, in 1821. By the middle of the 19th century, the region's knowledge industry had grown to 16 colleges and universities, two of which were intended for students of African descent – Cheyney University (1837) and Lincoln University (1854) – a reflection of the region's strong abolitionist stance and philanthropic tradition.

The knowledge industry continued to grow into the next century as the region matured. In 1891 the Drexel Institute of Art, Science and Industry, now known as Drexel University, was explicitly founded to meet the needs of a growing industrialized economy. Leading up to the First World War, colleges of business, nursing, and other trade schools were founded as residents sought to enter the workforce as professionals. The last major wave of institutions – community colleges and liberal arts institutions – was created in the wake of the Second World War. With more open admission policies, these institutions were created to educate a generation of Americans returning from the war as well as their children, the baby boomers, who are the largest population segment in the country today. The most recently established institutions of higher education tend to be for-profit and proprietary, offering technical skills training and other specialized skills relevant to the modern-day economy.

Today, the knowledge industry remains a visible symbol of societal values regarding opportunity, even as institutions adapt to changes in society's view of what the means to opportunity should be. Unlike most industries, where restructuring often led to company relocation, closures or downsizing, our colleges and universities – “placed-based” institutions by nature – have been comparatively stable entities in our region's communities. At the same time, there has been growing recognition by colleges and universities themselves that active participation and investment in local and regional issues can only stand to improve their institutional well being. The future of the knowledge industry and the region is likely to be one of greater recognition of each other and collaboration between the two.

Prevalence of Private Institutions

The vast majority of colleges and universities in Greater Philadelphia are private, non-profit institutions. With the exception of community colleges, private, non-profit institutions outnumber other institution types in every category. Indeed, of the region's 83 institutions, only 7 are fully funded by their respective state (5 by New Jersey and 2 by Pennsylvania) and another 12 are affiliated with their host county or local government (and partially funded by their respective state governments). Five regional institutions in Pennsylvania and one in Delaware (the University of Delaware) are considered “state-related” or state-affiliated. These institutions receive some state funding but are privately chartered and -operated schools.

The prevalence of private institutions in the region is likely a reflection of their prevalence throughout Pennsylvania, which has the 3rd most independent colleges and universities in the country (after New York and California). Observers of Pennsylvania's system of higher education have noted that neither of the state's two major cities – Philadelphia or Pittsburgh – has a fully funded state school located within it (though both have state-related institutions, Temple University and the University of Pittsburgh, respectively). On the other hand, none of the 11 institutions in the New Jersey portion of the region is private.

Geographic Clustering and Position

Knowledge industry institutions are located in every county of the region, but their presence is stronger in some, resulting in clustering of institutions and even differences between clusters. The broadest concentration of institutions is in the 5 counties of Pennsylvania, which have 66 of the region's 83 institutions and 71 percent of the enrolled student body (Figure 3).
