Comments=I have enjoyed beer since my first glass when the legal age in New York City was 18. I think that brewed beer is the only beer and if anything is to be added to enhance the flavor or alcohol content should be classified as alcohol. I also think the amount of alcohol contained in the Beer should be listed on the label just as it is for distilled spirits. That way the consumer could choose his preferred drink by the alcoholic content and know how much alcohol he may or may not consume based on the number of beers he consumes. And lets stop advertizing this stuff for our children. Market it for adults only. Ads should show mature adults drinking and not teenagers. Thank you.... John Bossom
