Product information, including uses/applications and source(s) of imports:

A toaster oven is a kitchen appliance that is very similar to an oven but is much smaller in size. The subject toaster oven is made of metal, has a single toast slot on top and a crumb tray at the bottom, and is designed to sit on a table or counter top. The product’s adjustable thermostat, temperature control lever, and cooking rack are characteristics found in a traditional oven. This toaster oven also contains elements of a traditional toaster. Bread is loaded onto a drop-down chassis that is lowered by a slide lever into the toasting cavity. Because this product uses a traditional toasting chassis to toast bread while also having a chamber for heating and baking, it is a combination article in terms of function and tariff classification. The principal source of imports of toaster ovens is China, which shipped approximately $126.4 million of the $127.8 million in total dutiable imports under HTS subheading 8516.72.00 in 2007.
