Kunsan City offers free bus tours, wants Airmen to experience community

By Senior Airman Stephen Collier

Wolf Pack members got an up close look at several hot spots throughout Kunsan City Dec. 26 and Tuesday as part of a cultural tour sponsored by the Kunsan City government.

The free tour took Airmen and their Korean hosts alike to many areas that accentuate the Kunsan City scene, including assorted shopping districts, a Buddhist temple and Wolmyong Park.

"I liked it a lot ... I really enjoyed it," said Staff Sgt. Patricia Paes, 8th Medical Support Squadron. "It seemed like there was a lot of parts of the city I knew about, but didn't know how to get there. It was helpful in that respect. I probably wouldn't have seen a lot of it on my own. It was pretty cool to have that opportunity."

Sgt. Paes added she felt the tour would be beneficial to Airmen overall.

"I think it will broaden their horizon," she said. "The first place I went to here was A-Town and I was thought to myself 'Wow ... this is all there is?' I think it will be helpful to let people know there is a lot more out in the community with places to go, places to see and having the resources to go out and do these things is just that more helpful."

The tour is a direct result of December's junior-enlisted call at the fitness and sports center where Col. Jeff "Wolf" Lofgren, 8th Fighter Wing

Air Force supports Gerald Ford funeral

By Staff Sgt. Madelyn Waychoff
Air Force Honor Guard Public Affairs

It's what many Airmen work for, day in and day out — the chance to actually do what they have been training for, and to carry out their mission to the fullest. For members of the Air Force Honor Guard here at Bolling AFB, this is that day.

These honor guardsmen helped the nation pay its final respects to former President Gerald Ford. The 38th president was honored with a funeral service at the National Cathedral here Jan. 2. Services will continue at the Ford presidential museum in Grand Rapids, Mich.

The role of the honor guard began as soon as news was heard that President Ford had died. The guard maintains a 24-person state funeral flyaway team, which is always on standby. They deploy to wherever needed when notified a president or senior statesman has died.

In the case of President Ford, the Airmen were sent to California the morning of Dec. 27 to assist the other services with the transfer of President Ford's body to the church in Palm Desert, Calif. While his body lay in state, Airmen and other servicemembers served as a Guard of Honor, maintain a vigil over the president's body at all times.

The flyaway team also assisted with the airfield transfer to Air Force One, and then redeployed to Michigan to await the president's arrival at his museum. In Washington, out of the 250 ceremonial guardsmen, 24 were flyaway team members and more than 80 Airmen were involved in the funeral. Two Airmen were chosen as pallbearers for the president.

Other guardsmen formed cordons through which the former president was carried, stood in formation outside the Capitol, held vigil over the president's body and carried the flag, along with Navy, Marines, Army and Coast Guard members.

"This is what we train for," said Senior Master Sgt. Andre Karr, honor guard acting director of operations. "We train with the other services every quarter, and even when we are in the middle of executing a funeral we are still training."

"This is the epitome of what being in the honor guard is, the height of any ceremonial guardsman's career and it is an honor just to be a part of it."

How's your

By Maj. Robin McKinley
8th Mission Support Squadron commander

Happy New Year Wolf Pack! What a great time of year. The new year brings a renewed hope for continued health, improved wealth, increased happiness and, of course, the opportunity to make personal resolutions. I'm told some of us actually do fulfill our resolutions and make our lives change for the better. I can't say I'm one of those people, but each year I make a valiant effort. This year, I challenge you to make one more resolution: a career impacting resolution — to understand and take care of your own "personnel hygiene."

No, I didn't say personal hygiene! But it's not a bad way to think about it. Hopefully, you wake each day and take a shower, brush your hair and teeth, put on deodorant, don a clean uniform and head out to your job. You take care of your personal hygiene because you've been taught to do so and it has become second nature to you. Think of your career in this same vein and ingrain these same kinds of habits into what I like to call "personnel hygiene."

"Personnel hygiene" is ensuring your military personnel record (both hard copy and electronic) is accurate and up to date. We've all been told that no one cares about your career more than you do and you should always ensure your personnel information is up to date and accurate. In the past, it was your commander's support staff or MPF who ensured your record was up to date. You were notified when you had to make a decision, take an action or received a change to your record. It consists of decorations updates, applications for separation, retirement, retraining, career job reservation, assignment dream sheets and many others. Many of these actions had to be done by the MPF and, in many cases, in concert with you. In the future, it will fall upon you to do this for yourself. You must proactively review your record via the Virtual MPF, or vMPF, and take full advantage of the Air Force Contact Center and Web applications to complete personnel actions.

In addition, the following programs will fall to Airmen over the next year or so: citizenship, separations and assignments. Soon after, evaluations, promotions, reenlistments and awards and decorations will all be accomplished directly via the AF Contact Center or Web applications.

As you know, our Air Force is reducing in size, especially in the support career fields. Program Budget Directive, or "PBD" 720 chops nearly 40,000 manpower billets and eventually Airmen from the ranks of our Air Force. The Personnel career field itself will lose nearly 20 percent. This reflects approximately 15 percent of our officer and enlisted Airmen. This means there will be fewer personnel in the MPF and CSS available to assist you and you will have to assume greater responsibility for your own personnel needs.

I know what you're thinking. Not only do you have to do your day-to-day job but now you must also take care of your own personnel actions as well. Although the personnel professionals within the MPF and the CSS stand ready to advise you and help you navigate these new processes, you're absolutely right; the final burden will fall squarely on your shoulders. But is it really any different from what you do in your personal life? Do you not bank on line or at least balance your checkbook using account information readily available on line? Like many of us, do you make your car payment directly from your bank account? Don't you update your driver's license on line? After all, who wants to wait at the Department of Motor Vehicles for hours when you can do it in the comfort of your own home in minutes? The manpower and personnel community is asking you to do the same for your personnel business. I ask you to open your mind to this "new" way of doing business and embrace it for all its worth. I'm confident you'll find it convenient and more accessible than how we provided service in the past. The Air Force is transforming at break-neck speeds. Whether you like it or agree with it and in the end, you'll only hurt yourself if you refuse to get engaged in your "personnel hygiene."

At a glance

Using virtual MPF

Did you know the following applications or actions are already available to you?

1. Promotion orders are no longer produced in hard copy. After a promotion is consummated, individual Airmen are expected to carefully review personnel data via virtual MPF, or vMPF, to ensure promotion data is accurate.
2. Retraining: Airmen no longer need to come to the MPF to apply for retraining but rather can do it directly via the Web.
3. Retirement: Airmen no longer need to come to the MPF to apply for retirement but rather can do it directly via the Web.
4. Duty history updates: Airmen can now correct inaccurate duty history directly via the Air Force Contact Center.
5. Enlisted assignment preferences: Airmen can now utilize the vMPF to list their personal assignment preferences and, with the click of a button, automatically update MilPDS.
6. CJRs: Individual's record in MilPDS is automatically updated with a CJR request during their first month of eligibility providing they meet quality force factors which results in a reenlistment eligibility code of "1R - First-term airmen selected for reenlistment under the SRP."
7. SRP: Individual Airman's reenlistment eligibility is automatically updated 30 days after appearing on the monthly SRP roster
8. Evaluation Appeals: Allows members to submit an appeal to have an evaluation or report corrected, removed, and (if necessary) request supplemental promotion consideration should the appeal be approved. The service member will complete the application online through the vMPF, and then upload or fax any supporting documents before routing to their commander or to the Air Force Contact Center (AFCC).

Saddam Hussein hung for crimes against humanity

By Ms. Donna Miles
American Forces Press Service

Former Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein was executed Dec. 29, according to a statement issued by President Bush.

The Iraqi High Tribunal sentenced Saddam and seven other former aides to death Nov. 5 for ordering the massacre of 148 men in Dujail, Iraq, in 1982. Acting on Saddam's orders, Iraqi security forces gunned down and tortured the villagers in retaliation for a failed assassination attempt against the former dictator.

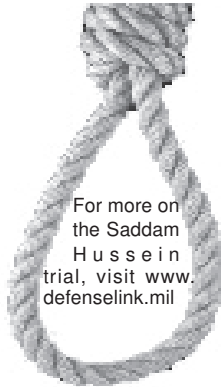

State Department officials told reporters on background before the trial began Oct. 19 that the Dujail incident wasn't the most egregious of atrocities of which Saddam was accused, just the first case ready to take to trial.

Other atrocities included the 1988 Anfal campaign against the Kurds, including chemical attacks on the village of Halabja; the brutal crushing of a Shiite revolt in southern Iraq in 1991; and repression of the Faylee Kurds, officials said.

Rather than waiting for investigations on those and other cases to conclude, the Iraqis opted to move forward with the Dujail trial, officials said.

Saddam interrupted the proceedings regularly. Baathist "dead-enders" tried to intimidate members of the court and insurgents killed three defense lawyers in the course of the trial, U.S. Ambassador to Iraq Zalmay Khalilzad noted when the verdict was announced Nov. 5.

In a written statement, Amb. Khalilzad called the verdict "an important milestone for Iraq" that demonstrates the Iraqi's commitment to the rule of law. "A former dictator feared by millions, who killed his own citizens without mercy or justice, who waged wars against neighboring countries, has been brought to trial in his own country - held accountable in a court of law with ordinary citizens bearing witness," he said of the verdict.

For more on the Saddam Hussein trial, visit www.defenselink.mil

The Appellate Chamber of the Iraqi High Tribunal rejected Saddam's appeal Dec. 26, upholding his conviction and clearing the way for his execution.

Coalition forces toppled Saddam's regime in March 2003. U.S. forces captured Saddam, who was hiding in a "spider hole" near his hometown of Tikrit, in December 2003. The Iraqi government maintained legal custody of the former dictator, although Multinational Force Iraq officials had physical custody of him until before the execution, at the Iraqi government's request, defense officials said.

Free bus tours of Kunsan City

The Kunsan City government, together with Wolf Pack public affairs, sponsors weekly tours into Kunsan City. These tours take place every Saturday and Sunday beginning Jan. 13. Wolf Pack members must meet the bus at the front gate at 10 a.m. The tour is projected to last until 5 p.m.

commander, wanted to hear first hand from junior enlisted servicemembers their concerns about being stationed at Kunsan. One of the main items was a perceived lack of off-base activities.

Wing leadership later approached local Kunsan City Mayor Moon, Dong Shin about the opportunity of supporting a tour bus to show the men and women of the Wolf Pack exactly what the local city of more than 250,000 had to offer.

The tours, which so far have been a success and delight with Airmen, are scheduled to run routinely every Saturday beginning Jan. 13. The bus will depart from the main gate at 10 a.m. and return by 3 p.m. Other plans are currently in the works to have a consistent bus run from the front gate to areas frequented by Wolf Pack members in the downtown area. Bus schedules will be announced as soon as they become available.

Senior Airman Chris Broughton

Unit: 8th Communications Squadron

Duties: Help desk technician

Hometown: Amarillo, Texas

Hobbies: Sport bike riding and drag racing

Favorite music: Alternative

Follow-on: Gunter Annex, Ala.

Last good movie: "Stay"

In their own words

Best thing you've done here: "Redesigned the base Web page."

"Airman Broughton serves as a help desk technician at Kunsan's communication focal point. He assists in the management of a 12-person work center, providing network troubleshooting support to 2,500 users on the $8.1 million metropolitan area network.

Senior Airman Broughton single-handedly redesigned the look and the coding of the Kunsan Web page. He removed outdated links and information and created a more user friendly page. He also assisted the 51st Communications Squadron at Osan AB with designing a safety Web site. Due to his expertise, the Osan Web page had the capability to accept interactive data and comments critical to an investigation.

He is also an active participant in Airmen Committed to Excellence. He seeks out opportunities to use his web expertise and built the ACE webpage, providing the organization a medium to share information base."

General Stephen Wood, 7th Air Force commander, served Christmas meal, Dec. 25 at the dining facility during his second visit here over the holiday season.

Lt. Gen. Wood visits Wolf Pack

By Staff Sgt. Nathan Gallahan
Warrior Staff

Lt. Gen. Stephen Wood, 7th Air Force commander, and also the class of 1997's "Viper," visited here twice during the holiday season.

He visited places across Kunsan Dec. 14, including the Wolf's ACE in the Hole and the construction site of the new dormitory for Airmen. He also spent time meeting with Airmen to learn more about their mission and living environments.

His second visit was Dec. 25, serving Airmen and Soldier here a special Christmas meal cooked by the 8th Services Squadron.

"I wanted to wish Airmen here happy holidays," the general said during a Dec. 14 interview. "And I would like to make sure they know that their service to country in this land far off from the United States, away from their families and loved ones, is appreciated by all of us in senior leadership positions. I know Gen. B.B. Bell, General (Paul) Hester, both send their greetings as well as I do and thank them for their service to our nation."

General B.B. Bell is the United States Forces Korea commander and Gen. Paul

Hester is the Pacific Air Forces commander.

While visiting, the general wanted to share with everyone his belief that all Airmen are American ambassadors to this country, and that they need to step into that role while serving here.

"Our South Korean hosts are gracious and caring people and I want all of our Airmen, whatever age, whatever rank, to be able to go out in the community and support and meet these great South Koreans," he said.

The general mentioned during his first visit he knew the holiday season wouldn't affect the Wolf Pack's readiness and that the Air Force Airmen would be ready to Take the Fight North at a moments notice.

"There is a legacy of outstanding performance and service to country on the Korean Peninsula that the Wolf Pack is noted for," he said. "We're ready to go, take the fight north and do our job whenever we're called to do that."

"This wing can do things that other wings can't, because of its location and its position and its training level, you're ready to go all the time, so the Wolf Pack would be the first ones I would send forward," he said.

Festivus?

What the heck is Festivus?

What it is:

Festivus is a holiday (of sorts) supposedly invented by the father of Seinfeld writer Daniel O'Keefe in the 1960s. Some even believe the festival received its humble beginnings during Roman times, but their claims can not be substantiated.

What's with the pole? — According to Capt. Lombardo who hosted the event, the pole signifies a humorous way of showing off a "traditional holiday tree."

What's included:

Festivus is broken down into mainly two categories: the Airing of Grievances and Feats of Strength. The first is the unbiased, uncensored opinions aired out to one another's companions, friends, family and the like. The latter encompasses a strong man-like competition. For Kunsan, that included sumo-wrestling.

Summing it up:

"Festivus is a time to escape the societal pressures of the season," said Capt. Christopher Lombardo, assigned to the 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron and Festivus coordinator. "It's a time to get together to have fun, tell people how you really feel and to wrestle the host to the ground. We wanted to call it the Phoenix and Viper show, but we decided to stay with 'Festivus.'"

Airing his grievances — Master Sgt. Robert Kuster, 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, gets to the point with fellow maintainers during the 'Airing of Grievances' portion of Festivus.

Even the Wolf did it — Col. Jeff "Wolf" Lofgren donned the sumo suit too to show Festivus patrons the way to wrestle.
