SPOTLIGHT

Expand Your Universe – Mentor a Child ~ National Mentoring Month, January 2010

First Lady Michelle Obama has often cited the importance of mentors in her life — and on November 2, she announced a year-long mentoring program at the White House for area high school girls. A mentoring relationship can be just what a young person needs to guide them toward a brighter future, by providing the support, encouragement, and opportunities that may be lacking in their lives.

Created by the Harvard School of Public. Health and MENTOR, National Mentoring Month enters its ninth year in January 2010. Hear from notable individuals (Clint Eastwood, Sting, Maya Angelou, and more) who cite mentoring relationships as a positive force in their lives.

Visit the National Mentoring Month website for "10 Things to Do in January," a list to jumpstart your thinking about getting involved and honoring the occasion. You'll also find links to tools, videos, news, and many other valuable resources related to this month-long celebration of mentoring.

RESOURCES

Why Mentoring?

Because it works. Youth with mentors are:

- 46% less likely to begin using illegal drugs
- 27% less likely to begin using alcohol
- 53% less likely to skip school
- 33% less likely to engage in violence. (Source: The Harvard Mentoring Project)

The resources below will help you find new mentors, and support existing relationships between mentors and mentees.
