Who knows better the operations in today's libraries than those librarians who do the work? Let's talk about current program directions driving federal library goals and objectives.

Please come join us for an informal discussion lead by Roberta Shaffer, facilitator, to explore the pressing issues having an impact on the operations of federal and armed forces libraries.

These issues may reflect current programmatic directions within the federal government, be inherent to a specific agency, or mimic those facing all libraries in a digital environment.

Come provide your insights concerning these issues to help library leaders within the federal government best understand how these new development affect service to our agencies and our end users.

The ALA Washington Office also has an invitation to this interagency discussion.
