*W*eb 2.0 and social media are powerful technologies being used by libraries, federal and state government, businesses and schools. Librarians are finding value in Web 2.0 tools inside and outside of the workplace. Understanding these tools, what they do and how they are being used in different environments can help information professionals consider where Web 2.0 tools fit into their professional landscape and how to integrate them into their current program plans.

Biography

Marie Kaddell is the Senior Information Professional Consultant at LexisNexis dedicated to supporting government librarians. She authors and maintains the Government Info Pro Blog at http://www.governmentinfopro.com and podcasts on the Government Info Pro Podcast available on iTunes. Kaddell also edits and compiles the annual Best Practices for Government Libraries, which focuses on "Web 2.0 in the Workplace and Beyond" in 2008.

Kaddell is a national and local speaker on library topics including Web 2.0, blogging, podcasting and government library trends. She has been an official conference blogger at AALL, ALA, CILs, Internet Librarian and SLA. As a member of the SLA Learning 2.0 Workgroup, she developed the RSS, Newsreaders, Flickr and Flickr Mashup & Third Party Sites modules for SLA's 23 Things released in 2008. She is also the SLA DGI Public Relations Chair and DC/SLA Click U Coordinator.
