

Why This Matters

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) provides public assistance to state, tribal, and local government, and certain types of private nonprofit organizations so that communities can quickly respond to and recover from major disasters or emergencies declared by the President. We perform audits of FEMA grantees and subgrantees to determine whether cost claimed under the awards are eligible and allowable under Federal regulations and FEMA guidelines. The South Florida Water Management District (District) received an award of $4.4 million for damages resulting from Hurricane Charley that occurred in August 2004.

FEMA Public Assistance Grant Funds Awarded to South Florida Water Management District Under Hurricane Charley

What We Determined

The District did not account for large project expenditures on a project-by-project basis as required by Federal regulations. We determined that the District was awarded $3.1 million for repairs to flood control facilities that were ineligible for FEMA assistance. The District's claim also included $24,622 of excess equipment costs.

What We Recommend

We recommended that the Regional Administrator, FEMA Region IV:

- 1) Instruct the Florida Division of Emergency Management to reemphasize to the District its need to account for large project expenditures on a project-by-project basis.
- 2) Deobligate and put to better use the $3.1 million of ineligible project funding awarded under the flood control projects.
- 3) Disallow the $24,622 of questioned costs.
