

Enforce copyright? you should be abolishing the archiachic 1890 law that gives thieves a monopoly. The Groskter case DOES NOT prove inducement of liability according to congress, and copyright was designed for the printing presses of the 1900's , not a digital era of today, where distribution cost 0$. The content industries have lobbied for more and more draconian copyright laws each and every year, when was the last time copyright laws ever when towards their interests at the behest of NATURAL RIGHTS provided consumers by the constitution????

'If everyone breaks a civil infraction, there must be something wrong with the civil infraction'.

Wake up and abolish the monopolistic megolith that is copyright, and demand content providers compete again, for once.
