To whom it concerns,

In response to the recent bullying of nations to push ACTA down their throats, I as a concerned US citizen must say that what happens outside US borders and jurisdictions in terms of Intellectual Property (IP) is of no business to any parties, governmental or those who are lobbying such efforts, and should not be supported by the US Government or any bodies who have any dealings with the ACTA proposal. ACTA reinforces my belief that companies have grown too powerful and, in their attempts to bully and control everything, are now trying to hold a gun to nation's heads who would not normally kowtow to such frivolity. It would be more productive to ask other nations THEIR feelings on the matter rather than attempting to shove some crybaby law down the throats of foreign countries. Oppose ACTA because we are the United States of America and not the United States of The Whole World.

thank you,
A. Koziol
