

From:

Subject:

Date:

Piracy

Friday, February 26, 2010 12:39:14 PM

1 - you already made up your mind that piracy is bad. If you wanted to do a real fact-check, you'd have a question that suggested or requested information without the presumption that "sharing information" is a "bad thing". The sharing of unlimited information is a new age for our human people, and no-industrial backed commercial system is going to keep the people from evolving into our new societies simply because of the greed of production based business processes.

2- Enforcement for copyright? Separate digital content from the fiat currency of our country, create a secondary market, share, or currency that allows for the value of a traded & consumed digital item to "grow" - the song that is most heard, and most downloaded, thereby becomes the most valuable; this value in turn increases the value of the copyright owner; making their shares to the public worth more in terms of the current paper system. We had to leave gold behind for growth, it's time we leave the dollar behind as well. The digital age has made it impossible to "enforce copyright" - attempting to do so is a waste of our countries resources, and your office should be shut down.

Thanks for wasting our tax dollars,

--

Christopher M. Vandeventer