Preparing for the future means preparing both professionals and institutions to be ready for what is coming next. This five-day institute, the newest offering in FLICC's series for technicians, will instruct new and seasoned technicians about emerging trends in information science and how to prepare their professional portfolios to meet these new challenges and gain the competencies they need to succeed in their work in the federal government.

The program will feature the future of

~ Library Marketing
~ Electronic Copyright
~ Acquisitions
~ Government Records
~ Reference
~ Disaster Planning
~ Cataloging

~ Virtual Exhibits
~ User Experience
~ Web 2.0 And Social Networks
~ Virtual Worlds
~ Library Internet Security
~ Library Para-Professionalism
~ Information Analysis

Speakers will be representing a variety of federal agencies including the Defense Technical Information Center, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Federal Reserve Board, Government Printing Office, Library of Congress, Marine Corps University, National Archives and Records Administration and the National Defense University.

The keynote speaker is Carol Ramkey, the Director of the Library of the Marine Corps, and chair of the FLICC Human Resources Working Group that created the Federal Librarian Competencies. Ms. Ramkey started her library career in the 4th grade (when she got kicked out of study hall for talking and sent to work in the library) and after college, she worked as a circulation technician before earning a Masters in Library Science from Emory University. She has more than 28 years of federal experience, all of it as a military librarian. She is proud to have been a library technician and considers that experience to be the foundation for her career.
