

February 22, 1949

Vice President Barkley honored me in asking me to read Washington's Farewell Address. As I read this I wondered what our first President would think if he were alive today. Would he condemn the proposed North Atlantic Pact as an entangling alliance? The objective is the same today — freedom. The only difference is the way to obtain that freedom.

Margaret Chase Smith, U.S.S.
Maine