USAFE
ECONOMIC IMPACT
ANALYSIS
2009

By its very presence in local communities throughout the European theater, each USAFE base puts money into the economy of its host community by spending on locally purchased goods and services. In addition, individuals who work on base spend their own money in the local community on things like rent, food, and entertainment.

The USAFE base community is a diverse one, consisting of military units, official and unofficial supporting activities, exchanges, commissaries, banks, credit unions, and local on-base vendors in a mutually supporting relationship.

The community on a USAFE base consists of many different kinds of people: US military personnel and civilians, as well as host nation civilian employees. They work in military units and supporting activities like dining halls, recreation centers, the exchange, and the commissary. Non-military activities like banks, credit unions, and local vendors round out the USAFE base community.

Significant change from previous years is due to using number of people assigned versus authorized (As of 30 Sep 09)

The many people who work on USAFE bases, U.S. military personnel and civilians, as well as host nation civilian employees, also put money into the local economy by spending a part of their pay off base on things like rent, restaurants and entertainment, and all the necessities of daily life.
