PFPA Partners with DHS on “If You See Something, Say Something™” Campaign

The Pentagon Force Protection Agency (PFPA) is partnering with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) in their “If You See Something, Say Something™” public awareness campaign, aimed at encouraging Pentagon employees, visitors, and commuters to report any suspicious activity.

A media roll-out will be held at the Pentagon on Tuesday, May 17, 2011, from 11 a.m. – noon. Pentagon Police Department Chief Richard Keevill will be available for interviews to outline the program. Attending media will also have the opportunity to collect B-roll to support their stories. The PFPA Integrated Emergency Operations Center (IEOC) will demonstrate a sample call, and the PFPA Explosive Ordnance Disposal Team will demonstrate some of the equipment they use to investigate suspicious packages.

Media interested in attending need to contact Chris Layman, PFPA Public Affairs at 703-692-9101/9122 by 9 a.m., Tuesday, May 17. Media will be met and escorted on Tuesday, May 17, 10:45 a.m., corridor three pedestrian bridge (south parking). Parking will be provided to those attending (will need vehicle make, model, and license plate number).
