PIECING TOGETHER YOUR MISHAP PREVENTION PLAN

Col. Tal W. Metzgar, director of safety

The 2013 Torch Calendar is a tribute to the dedicated men and women, who recruit, train and educate our Air Force. I sincerely hope it will serve as a daily reminder of the tremendous impact to our national defense made by our Airmen and civilians.

This year's unique puzzle design reminds us that while we think we have the big picture, a few key pieces of the safety puzzle may be missing. Accomplishing the mission safely and effectively requires all the pieces in their place. This includes proper integration and application of risk management principles, being a good wingman, and following Air Force Instructions (AFIs) and Technical Order (T.O.) guidance.

Assembling or solving a puzzle can be done more efficiently using a deliberate process. First, we frame the challenge by identify key pieces ... corners and edges. Then assemble them to define the limits of our puzzle. Having a guide to follow, a picture of what the puzzle looks like when assembled helps too. As the puzzle begins to take shape, it becomes more obvious which pieces are missing. Our missions are varied and complex, but each is clearly defined and somewhat limited in scope. Like the photo on the puzzle box, AFI or T.O. compliance helps ensure the job is done right.

Real life is much more complex than a boxed puzzle;

“Real life is much more complex than a boxed puzzle; however, many of the same principles apply. ... As a wingman, it is your responsibility to intervene and make a save when you alone hold the crucial missing piece.”

however, many of the same principles apply. This is why the core missions of Air Education and Training Command are so vital to our Air Force. A properly trained and educated individual may be the difference between success and failure. Further, identifying a critical missing piece comes through application of risk management principles or that eerie “hair on the back of your neck” instinct that persuades us to stop and assess a situation. As a wingman, it is your responsibility to intervene and make a save when you alone hold the crucial missing piece. Sometimes, a well-timed reminder helps us identify the “missing pieces” of our puzzle ... this year's calendar may help serve that role.

Thanks to the tireless efforts of our command safety professionals, this calendar is one of the most comprehensive safety observance calendars available. Please read and use this collection of monthly, weekly and daily safety observances throughout the year. While it is not possible to participate in every dedicated observance, they can serve as conversation starters in your workplace or at home with family. Using these observances, on- and off-duty, may help you find a missing piece of your puzzle. Set a reasonable goal to emphasize one applicable observance per week or month; by the end of the year, you will have a more complete safety picture.

One particular puzzle piece that remains a challenge throughout the Air Force is motorcycle safety. Motorcycle safety is not limited to the rider alone. The often devastating impacts of motorcycle mishaps affect families, friends and co-workers who must shoulder the additional burden if the rider is severely injured ... or worse. All of us can improve our awareness of riders and share the road. A rider can do everything right, wearing all the proper safety equipment and following all of the rules of the road, but still be involved in a mishap.

In the aviation realm, flight discipline has been cited in numerous mishaps over the past year. Whether the deviation from standards is intentional or not, the preventable loss of an aircraft or crewmember is unacceptable. The rising costs of aviation mishaps from the use of high-tech materials is driving an exponentially high price, something we can ill-afford in these times of tough budgetary constraints.

As you begin the New Year, resolve to improve your safety picture by identifying the missing pieces, and do not accept unnecessary risk. Do you know what's missing from your safety puzzle?
