

Department of Defense
Military Working
Dog
Breeding Program

Worldwide need for detection dogs has increased dramatically. The Department of Defense Military Working Dog Breeding program breeds to meet the growing requirement for security at home and abroad. A large part of the success of this program is dependent upon volunteers to provide temporary homes for developing puppies.

The 341st Training Squadron at Lackland Air Force Base operates a breeding program for military working dogs in support of the Department of Defense Military Working Dog program. These dogs are a vital part of our national defense and serve in Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps units around the globe. You can become part of this important effort by volunteering your home and time to raise a military working dog.

Our Puppy Program is looking for enthusiastic foster parents!

Who can help?

We are looking for families that:

- Have the time and patience to raise a young puppy from twelve weeks to six months of age
- Have a home that will provide a stimulating and safe environment for a young puppy
- Have the desire and interest to learn how to raise a future military working dog
